

THE WINCHESTER STAR.

VOL. XXV. NO. 28.

WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JANUARY 5, 1906.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

A Hot Time in Winchester.

The other day Fred Joy Esq., discovered among his papers the following notice issued by the republican Town committee in 1871. At that time feeling ran high and bitter over the removal of the station from in front of Lyceum building to its present location. Mr. S. W. Twombly who was the Republican caucus nominee for Representative, was bitterly opposed because of the stand taken by him on the question of removing the station by O. R. Clark and other prominent men, and as a result he was defeated and the late D. N. Skillings was elected. It was the hottest fight in the history of Winchester.

The Republican Town Committee of Arlington have received the following Communication:

Winchester, November 4, 1871. To the Republican Committee of the Town of Arlington:

At a Caucus of the Republicans of Winchester held November 2d, to nominate a candidate for Representative of the Sixth Middlesex District, 166 votes were cast, of which O. R. Clark received 84 votes, and S. W. Twombly 82 votes. After a careful investigation, in the presence of both Messrs. Clark and Twombly, it has been proved that four of the ballots for O. R. Clark were cast by those not Republicans, and we are satisfied that S. W. Twombly had a majority of the Republican votes then cast, and was the legal nominee of said Caucus.

HENRY B. METCALF,

SALEM WILDER,

C. W. MOSEY,

Republican Committee of Winchester.

Winchester November 4, 1871. The undersigned, officers of the Caucus referred to in the above communication, certify that they believe the statements of the Republican Town Committee herewith to be strictly correct.

J. F. STONE, Chairman.

EDWIN A. WADLEIGH, Secretary.

The Republicans of Arlington should rally at the Polls, and give S. W. Twombly an overwhelming vote. He has served the District faithfully and well. No man understands better the interests of his constituents, and he must be elected. Rally every one!

Fire Losses in 1905

The fire losses for the past year, together with the other data, have just been completed by the engineers, and show a marked decrease in fire loss and serious fires against the figures of the preceding year. While the number of alarms is larger—83 last year to 78 of the year before—the loss is considerably less. The increased number of fires was due to brush fires, of which there were nearly double the number.

Following is a comparison of the two years:

Fire alarm answered	78	83
Brush fires	19	37
Dwelling houses	28	16
False alarms	6	10
Property endan.	$121,950.00	$78,175.00
Amt. of insur. paid	$4,788.40	$1,351.62
Amount of loss	$8,061.60	$6,823.38

Exhibition of photographs loaned by the Library Art Club. Velasquez, the most famous of Spanish painters, and one of the great masters of the world, was born at Seville, in 1592. He went to Madrid, where his talents were brought to the attention of the king, Philip IV., who appointed him court painter. At Madrid he remained, with only two brief intervals, until his death in 1660, and in this capital, in the gallery of the Prado, are to be seen the most celebrated of his paintings.

The Answer of the Parents

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In response to the open letter in the STAR of December 1, 1905, the School Committee published a statement, in which they declared themselves in agreement with the writer of the open letter. The committee also expressed the opinion that the remedy rests largely with the parents. That this is in great measure true few will deny.

What have the parents to say? Individuals have spoken and written privately, expressing themselves to the writer of the open letter as in sympathy with his position. There have doubtless been private utterances on the other side.

But not until the publication of the STAR of December 29, are we made aware of a reply on the part of the parents of a more general and formal character. This reply appears in the form of news announcements of certain dances which have recently taken place. There are several of these notices, headed the A. F. Z. Dance, the A. B. C. Dance, etc. In each case there is published the names of the matrons.

What do these notices signify? That these secret societies have exercised their power, on what may be called their social side, and that the parents have surrendered to their demand? The secret society presumably plans the dance, and issues the invitations, controlling the lists of the invited, and the arrangements. The parents, those who are matrons and those who are not, acquiesce in this usurpation. The matrons of these dances had the situation absolutely in their control. It was for them to say: "There shall be no such thing as an A. F. Z. dance for the young people." This is what it would seem they ought to have said. The chosen matrons, and not an irresponsible secret society of young people of school age, should control the lists and arrangements of such affairs. It may seem to some unbelievable that a mother should consent to matronize a dance, to which are to be invited not the children of her friends, but such persons as the A. F. Z. may approve. And yet this is the situation. Here was an opportunity for the parents. Instead of seizing it, have they handed over the social life of the young people in our schools to the dictation of the secret societies? Is the answer of the parents that they endorse these societies? Or else that they confess themselves powerless to control them? Is there a blindness, or weakness, or acquiescence of some of our parents in this matter, which supplies the strongest argument which has yet been advanced for action on the part of right-minded citizens? Someone has suggested a congress of parents in Winchester, for the consideration of these problems. The time certainly seems ripe for such a meeting.

JOHN W. SUTER.

Honor Pupils in Grade Nine

There were three pupils in grade nine of the Wadleigh school who received a term average of "1" which represents any per cent. between 90 and 100. The following young ladies are to be highly congratulated, for the term's work has been very exacting. The Honor Pupils are Helen Cabot, Katharine Lombard, and Dorothy Nash of whom the last named had the highest average per cent. Marshal Wellington succeeded in winning a "1 1/2" mark, and twenty nine other pupils won the mark "2".

Now that the ninth grade pupils have become accustomed to the ways and methods of their teachers and have also acquired a large measure of ability to work for themselves, it is hoped that at least a half of the "2" pupils will enter the "1" class, one half of the "3" pupils the "2" class, and one half of the "4" pupils the "3" class. There were no pupils whose average was a "5".

Men's Club Organized.

The first regular meeting of the men's league of the Baptist church was held on Monday evening. The constitution was adopted and officers installed who were elected at the preliminary meeting a few weeks ago. Short talks were given on the most important events of the past year in the medical, educational, political, scientific, commercial and religious worlds. The speakers were Mott A. Cummings, A. P. Briggs, J. Albert Halsey, Herbert V. Purman, Herman Haskins and Rev. Arthur L. Winn. Refreshments were served and a social hour followed. Pres. A. W. Smith will appoint the chairman of the executive, social fellowship and Sunday evening service committees, and they with the president will select the other members of the committee. Regular meetings will be held on the fourth Monday of each month from October to May.

Vesper Service.

The monthly vesper service will be held Sunday at the First Congregational church, in the main auditorium, with full choir and quartette. Anthems, "O Turn thee unto the Lord," Gounod; "Still, Still with Thee," Speaks; "Quartette," "Be Still! Be Still!" Scott; Choral Responses. Pastor's theme—"Judging." The hour is at seven o'clock. Every seat free. All welcome.

A Great Success

The first Alumni Night of the Winchester High school, held Tuesday evening in the new building, proved a success in every particular and is reported by many as the prettiest of the social events so far given in the new school. As a result of the success attending the affair, it is very probable that the annual meeting of the Alumni will be changed from June to December, and probably in the future Alumni Night will be a feature of the Christmas holiday events. The next meeting of the Alumni occurs in June, when new officers will be chosen. The organization has not met for several years.

On Tuesday evening the members of the classes '81 to '87 met together as one body in the school library. They had as guests Miss M. A. Parsons, one of the best known teachers of the High school, and Mr. Lewis Parkhurst, a former master of the school. Classes '81 to '85 held meetings in various rooms of the building, the meetings being held from 8 to 8:30 o'clock.

At the close of the meetings a reception was given to the alumni by the school committee, Messrs. C. F. A. Currier, Albert F. Blaisdell and F. F. Carpenter, the committee, receiving. During the reception music was furnished by the High school orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Makchur. Remarks were made at the close of the reception by Prof. C. F. A. Currier, Mr. Lewis Parkhurst, Mr. Arthur N. Holcombe and principal of the school, Edwin N. Lovering. Refreshments were served in the gymnasium and dancing followed. About 200 were present. The younger graduates were fully represented, and the oldest alumni present was Mr. Edward H. Stone, of the class of '69, while two members of the class of '70 were present.

Y. M. C. A. Notes

A very pleasant evening was spent in the association January 1st. Ladies and gentlemen were invited to an informal reception. The association orchestra furnished music. Games were in progress. A class of eighteen boys was on the gymnasium floor and interested the audience while going through their drills. Basket ball followed and caused a great deal of pleasure. The teams were made up from our own membership. Intermediates vs. Seniors. Quite a great deal of interest was manifested as the games went on. The final score being 22 to 0 in favor of the Intermediates. Nearly one hundred and fifty visited our rooms that evening.

Tuesday evening twenty-one boys from our Bible classes enjoyed a supper and social in the rooms.

The committee on boys' work from the Auxiliary furnished the supper, and received three rousing cheers from the boys in appreciation for their kindness. Pictures on the life of Christ were shown.

The new game, "Base ball" is to be played in the rooms this season. Mr. Jordan has kindly consented to form a league, games to be played Tuesday evenings. As many boys may enter as desire, but all must sign their names to the application before Tuesday evening, January 9, so we may know who is to play. Three positions and prizes will be given at the close of the series. No expense to the players.

Basket ball last evening. Roxbury vs. Intermediates. Lunch served to the players.

Mr. W. D. Van Schaack will speak to the boys Sunday at 2:45 o'clock. All boys invited. Bible classes at 3:30. Study The Life of Christ.

Mr. J. W. Hammond spoke last Sunday to boys.

Mr. C. E. Fish conducted the meeting for men at four o'clock. Twelve present.

Mr. D. W. Howard, who is to lecture January 15, subject, "The Eastern Shore," has been before many audiences in Boston and vicinity. He understands his subject thoroughly, has a pleasing manner, and wins his listeners. The 185 views of our coast and vicinity are well worth the price of tickets.

Important Real Estate Sale

An important transfer of real estate in the center took place this week, when the property known as the Du-more stable was sold at public auction to Mrs. Daniel Kelley and Mrs. D. W. Hawes, who buy for investment. The property consists of a large carriage house, stable and blacksmith shop, situated on Converse place. A small piece of land of the same estate went to a Boston party by the name of Foster.

The carriage house will be used for storage, but it is understood that the remaining portion is still in the market. The old sheds, stable and smithy will be torn down for the benefit of the looks of that section, and the improvement will be welcomed.

It is understood that Mr. Reuben Hawes of West Medford was a strong bidder for the property, and that the price received was $6000.

A small ad in the STAR is almost certain to bring results, that is the reason this paper has so many wants, to let, lost, found, etc.

Week of Prayer.

The Week of Prayer will be observed by the Baptist, Congregational and Methodist churches in union services as in past years. The time of the services will be 7:45 p. m. on each evening. The general subject is—"The Prayers of Jesus."

Wednesday, Jan. 10. Each church will meet as usual in its own place of prayer.

Thursday, Jan. 11. Union service at the Methodist church conducted by Rev. Chas. A. S. Dwight. Topic—"Intercession for others." John 17:9; Luke 22:32; 23:34.

Friday, Jan. 12. Union service at the Congregational church conducted by Rev. Henry E. Hodge. Topic—"Entire Devotion." Matt. 6:10; Matt. 26:39; John 12:28. May all Christians give their presence, prayers and cooperation that the work may be full of spiritual blessing. Everyone is heartily invited to attend.

Conduct of Town Business.

The special committee on the improvement of the conduct of the official business of the town, held a public hearing at the Selectmen's room in the Town Hall building last evening. The attendance was not large. Mr. John L. Ayer, chairman of the committee presided, and on opening the meeting briefly alluded to the scope of the work which they had before them also that the views of about all the town officers had been giving and that the present meeting was for the purpose of getting the views of the citizens. Mr. Henry F. Johnson, the first to address the committee, made many suggestions. He favored the Town Clerk serving as Clerk for the Selectmen, Assessors, Sewer and Water Boards and also to serve as Water Registrar. He recognized the obstacles in the way of accomplishing this, but, nevertheless, hoped it could be brought about. Such a clerk should receive a salary of $1500 per annum, and should be obliged to be in the building throughout the day. He also favored a typewriter for the clerk. He was opposed to a board of public works. All street work now done by other departments should be done by the Supt. of Streets.

Mr. W. L. Tuck followed Mr. Johnson. He was opposed to a board of public works, and hoped the suggestions of the first speaker could be brought about. After brief remarks by other citizens the hearing came to a close. The committee will report at the March meeting.

Calumet Club Notes.

The old alleys at the club have been planed and refinished, making them very fast. It is anticipated that some of the games in the present tournament will be rolled on these alleys, using all four alleys at once. This will considerably shorten the length of the tournament.

Coming Out Tea.

Mrs. Henry Temple Brown of Highland avenue entertained about 150 friends on Tuesday afternoon of this week at a coming out tea, given for her daughter, Miss Dorothy F. Brown, previous to her departure for a five months' trip abroad.

The large residence at Hillcrest was thrown open to the guests, who were received in the living room by Mrs. Brown and her daughter who wore white lace over green silk. During the afternoon Dr. I. Churchill Hodes sang several selections, and music was given by a trio composed of Miss Marion Phinney, piano; Miss Alice Phinney, cello; and Miss Emma Grebe, violin. Songs in two voices were given by Mr. Stewart Hayman of Brookline, who sang both soprano and baritone.

Tea was served in the dining room by Miss Frances Elder and Miss Louise Hayman of Brookline, who were assisted by Miss Margaret French, Miss Daphne Dunbar, Mrs. Edwin Ginn, Mrs. Francis D. Cleveland and Mrs. Alfred J. Hayman and Mrs. Dr. Benj. T. Church.

Miss Brown leaves town this Friday and sails abroad Saturday on the Celtic. She goes with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. Blair Thaw, of New York. Two months will be spent in Egypt and two in Greece, after which Rome and London will be visited.

Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn Gives an At Home.

Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn of Central street gave an "at home" to her friends on New Year's afternoon from 3 to 5, which was largely attended by Winchester and Boston society. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. Clarence H. Lewis of Glen road, a niece of Mrs. Sanborn. The large house was handsomely decorated with the general color scheme of red, to accomplish which large quantities of holly and red roses were in abundance throughout the house.

Mrs. Sanborn wore a dress of white Irish point lace, with violets, and received with Mrs. Lewis, who was gown in blue green silk with lace and wore roses. An orchestra was in attendance during the afternoon, and one of the most pleasing features of the affair was the singing by Mrs. William Edlefson of this town, a lady gifted with a remarkably sweet voice, and who certainly appeared at her best in her songs of the afternoon.

The punch table was presided over by Mrs. Charles Simes of Boston, and Mrs. Charles Parsons of Springfield and Mrs. Herbert Nickerson of this town poured. These ladies were assisted by Miss Helen Spaulding, Miss Patience Chase, Miss Alice Skillings, Mrs. Leonard Shearer of Brookline, Mrs. Malcom Seamount of Boston and Miss Anne Clark of Brookline.

Calumet Officers Installed.

The regular meeting and installation of the new officers of the Calumet club took place on Tuesday evening at the club house with a large attendance of members. President Ralph E. Joslin conducted the meeting, which was mostly of the usual routine nature, consisting of the reading and accepting of reports of the various committees. Mr. J. Herbert Dwinell, the president elect, was then introduced, and Mr. Joslin, after the introductory remarks, presented him with the gavel.

Mr. Dwinell made a brief speech on accepting the office, and was heartily welcomed to the head of the club by those present.

Following the meeting of the club an entertainment was given by the Munro Minstrels which was much enjoyed and well received. Lunch was then served the members in the billiard room.

The club extends an invitation to every lady who has ever been a member of the club to be present.

The programme in general will consist of a history of the club to be given by one or more ladies and music will be given by Mr. Dicknell, Mrs. Edictson, Miss Caroline Pond and Miss Mary Kellogg. Storekeepers in town are up in arms, it is reported, over the great increase in their electric light bills—doubled, it is said, in many cases.

A Pleasant Evening at Hillcrest

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Fisher of Hillcrest entertained at supper and cards about thirty five of their neighbors and friends Tuesday evening. A novel feature was the pairing off of couples, where red and white pinks were given the guests accompanied by a card on which was an appropriate verse of poetry and the letter of the table. When the pleasant task of bringing the guests into couples and to designated tables was completed, a most elaborate supper was served—two couples being seated at each table. Over an hour was passed in disposing of the toothsome menu and in animated conversation such as close neighbors and friends only know how to enjoy, after which the tables were cleared and whist was the feature until midnight. Mr. W. H. Corless sang several selections and it was nearly one o'clock before the last good-bys were said.

Mr. and Mrs. Fisher were assisted in looking out for the pleasure of the guests by their three charming daughters. Mrs. Charles H. Chapman was presented with a handsome gold inlaid glass bon bon dish, she being the leader in whist, and Mr. Edward W. Ray was remembered for receiving the smallest number of points.

It was a most enjoyable evening throughout, and the cordial hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Fisher will long linger in the memories of the guests.

His Leg Badly Scalded

Henry Boyd of Cross street had one of his legs badly scalded last week. Thursday morning by slipping when going up stairs with a pail of hot water at the Gifford school. The boy, a most ambitious young fellow, assisted Custodian Nichols after school hours in the care of the school buildings, and by this means was able to earn considerable money. Young Boyd is one of a family of ten including the father and mother, and Mr. Nichols, believing that the boy would have better care at a hospital used his personal endeavors and had him removed in an ambulance to the Mass. General Hospital, Monday.

The boy's father, who is a hard working man, receives but $10 a week on which to support his large family. It will be several weeks before the sufferer will be able to leave the hospital.

Reception.

Mrs. Frank L. Ripley of Main street gave a very pleasing at home on Saturday afternoon of last week for her daughter, Miss Florence W. Ripley. Fully 300 friends and acquaintances called during the afternoon and were received by Mrs. Ripley and her daughter. The tea tables were presided over by Mrs. D. B. Badger, Mrs. Wm. Belcher, Mrs. H. C. Ordway and Mrs. Louis Baria. These ladies were assisted in pouring by Miss Elsie Belcher, Miss Bertha Russell, Miss Helen Heath and Miss Helen Hall. Mrs. William Herrick and Mrs. Charles T. Maint presided at the traps in the library, and Miss Elizabeth Downs in the hall. They were assisted by Miss Marguerite Barr, and Miss Ethel Sargent. Miss Ripley was the recipient of many handsome flowers.

Off for the Coal Fields.

On invitation of Mr. F. Wendall Pray, a director in the Garfield & Proctor Co. (Delaware & Hudson, "D. & H." "All Rail"), Mr. Charles A. Lane of the Parker & Lane Co. as the guest of Mr. Pray, left this morning for a ten days' trip to the coal fields. They will visit Scranton, Carbondale, Wilkesbarre and Mauch Chunk and some other near by cities. The purpose of the trip will be not only to learn from personal observation how coal is mined, brought to surface, broken and screened, but also to obtain a broader knowledge of the general situation which has and is now causing so much uneasiness among the people. Mr. Lane will take along a 3x7 camera with sufficient number of plates to take pictures wherever he finds one of importance and value.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be Jan. 12 (Friday) in the Congregational Church vestry at 3 p. m. Let all who can attend.

A special meeting of the Union and a memorial service for our deceased member, Mrs. Mary A. Ward, was held in the Congregational Church vestry Thursday, Dec. 28. Mrs. Ward had been a member from the beginning of our work and while she resided here a very active helpful member ready to do even more than her share. She served one year as president and for several years was one of the vice-presidents. She was for sometime superintendent of Flower Mission work and every week while flowers lasted gathered them and had children assist in making them into bouquets to be distributed in Boston. She was greatly missed by the union when she became ill and unable to meet with us.

Through "Our Washington letter" contributed to the Union Signal by Mrs. Margaret Dye Ellis, the National superintendent of legislative work for the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, our members may keep themselves well informed as to doings in Congress. Mrs. Ellis resides in Washington during the winter and is in constant and close touch with all that is done in temperance measures.

Among the many bills that have during December been presented is one by Hon. R. Wayne Parker of New Jersey asking that Congress restore the sale of fermented malt beverages and light wines to soldiers on army transports and in post exchanges under regulations to be prescribed by the secretary of War. This is the same bill offered by the same man that brought the question before Congress in the last session. By right effort and God's blessing we hope his plan may be frustrated.

Mrs. Ellis says "One of the frequent arguments used for a restoration of the sale of beer in the army is that the company fund has been so much less that the men are deprived of many luxuries they had heretofore been able to procure such as milk, butter, poultry and a variety of vegetables. I learn that the post exchange receipts at various points are hundreds of dollars annually, in some cases exceeding the amount received during the sale of beer and in consequence the men have a larger sum than formerly to put into the mess fund."

Two hearings have been granted by the committee on territories to the delegation of 135 men from Oklahoma and a few delegates from Indian Territory who are in Washington looking after the interests of statehood. The committee responded very cordially with Hon. E. L. Hamilton of Michigan as chairman. Eleven members sat the entire session at one hearing paying the closest attention.

Rev. E. C. Dunwiddie of the Anti Saloon League in charge of the forces contending for prohibition made an exhaustive argument at the opening session. E. C. Jones of Oklahoma led the other side. The interest was intense. Several Indians, some full bloods, others half bloods spoke. "Chief" or "General" Porter of the Greek Nation made a fine impression. He declared the people of his nation desire separate statehood; that they want to have their own state government. "Why" said the General "they want the opportunity to come to Congress just as you have come, and I shouldn't mind coming as a Senator either." Great applause followed Rev. E. C. Murrow of Atoka, I. T., who with his wife has labored as a missionary among the Indians in the territory for forty-nine years told how the Cherokees when living in Tennessee nearly one hundred years ago agreed among themselves to appeal to Congress to help them overthrow the power strong drink was getting over their people and how one of their number rode on his pony from Tennessee to Washington bearing this appeal. The quiet room as Mr. Murrow concluded was thrilling as with hand up he exclaimed, "Do not break faith with the Indian; God will hold this Congress to account for a fulfillment of its pledge." Hon. A. P. Murphy, M. C. of Missouri, a young attorney for the Creek Nation, made a most telling speech for prohibition statehood. He told of the efforts of the brewers to win him to their side and read a telegram received from the head of the brewing interest in Oklahoma urging him to vote against prohibition on this bill. Rev. Mr. Sweet of I. T. and Rev. Mr. Thompson of O. T. representing the Anti Saloon League of the territories made fine speeches; the latter had a box con taining 40,000 signatures of residents of Oklahoma asking for prohibition. Mrs. Ellis spoke for the W. C. T. U. and we all join with her in the hope that the question may be rightly settled during this Congress.

Stomach Troubles and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's stomach and liver tablets are the best thing for stomach troubles and constipation I have ever sold," says J. R. Cullman, a druggist of Potteryville, Mich. "They are easy to take and always give satisfaction. I tell my customers to try them and if not satisfactory to come back and get their money, but have never had a complaint." For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

CHOCOLATE.

It Was a Luxury in This Country in the Eighteenth Century.

The first newspaper notice that announced the sale of cocoa and chocolate in America read:

"Amos Trank, at his house a little below the Bell Tavern in Danvers, makes and sells chocolate which he will warrant to be good and takes cocoa to grind. Those who may please to favor him with their custom may depend upon being well served, and at a very cheap rate."

This notice appeared in the Essex Gazette of Massachusetts on the 18th of June, 1771, five years before the signing of the Declaration of Independence. Despite Mr. Trank's assurance that his rate was cheap, chocolate was very expensive and beyond the purse of any but the wealthy folk. Wouldn't they be surprised to see how generally chocolate is sold these days in packages as cheap as a penny?

When the Spanish soldier Cortes conquered Mexico in 1519 he found the people very fond of a drink called "chocolatl." This was served to the ruler Montezuma in a cup of solid gold. When the Spaniards went home they introduced this drink into their country, but it remained very expensive. The secret of its preparation was never allowed to get out of Spain. Now it is the cheapest article of food and drink we have.

VARIETY IN CHEWING.

Gum and Tobacco Are Not the Only Materials Utilized.

Gum chicle, which forms the basis of most American chewing gums, is by no means the only chewing material, though chewing gum has spread over a large portion of the world.

Among the old fashioned gum of the spruce tree is still in greater favor, and druggists near the great spruce belts driven a thriving trade in the brown lumps.

Although the chicle comes from the tropics, it is seldom used as a chewing gum there, unrolled rubber being the fashion. In Peru "coca," or coca leaves, form the staple chew, the plant being a powerful stimulant, since from its leaves cocaine is extracted. In the east the betel nut is chewed in preference, the nut being prepared with lime. To it might be accorded the place of first prominence, since because of the congestion of population practically one-tenth of the human race give it their preference.

One of the oldest chews is the leaden bullet which the English soldier used to chew before the introduction of the jacketed bullets now in use. They declared that it lessened their thirst and to some extent denuded their hunger on long marches.

And then there is tobacco.

ODD THINGS ABOUT WORDS.

When the Word "Lunch" Was First Used It Meant a "Lump."

A "lunch," etymologically, is just a lump. In the sixteenth century a "lunch of bacon" meant merely a slice or lump of it. So Rimas speaks of bread and cheese "dealt about in lunches," and Scott records that "little Benjie was running a huge luncheon of pie crust into his mouth." While in modern times "lunch" is an abbreviation from "luncheon," the latter was originally an elongation of "lunch." A philologist shows how the old "noon shenk," noon drink, came to mean noon eating, and to appear as "noonshoon," and the development thereafter of "luncheon" from "lunch" was very natural.

Curious changes of words sometimes take place between two languages. Thus English has borrowed the French "posure" and has given to France "snob" in trade. Frenchmen have a way of taking a polysyllabic word and using half of it. Thus of "steeples" they have appropriated the "steep" and now the French sportsman speaks of "mounting a steeple" when he means to ride a race over the customary obstacles. A smoking jacket is with him a "smoking" and a sleeping car is a "sleeping."

Inspired a Noble Poem.

It was the dagger-pointing Hessler of Chicago who inspired Lee Hellow to write "Hillawatha." Mr. Hessler was one of the most eminent of his profession, and in 1851 the London world's fair awarded him the prize and a picture of the falls of Minnehaha, came into the poet's possession and furnished immediate inspiration for the poem. In testimony of his debt to Mr. Hessler Longfellow sent him a bound volume of his poems with his signature and compliments on the fly leaf.

The Herring.

Deep sea denizens of the northern waters are all remarkable for their migratory habits, the herring especially so. These fish approach the Newfoundland littoral to spawn and then are captured in great quantities, but this is only during a few months every year, while for the remainder they withdraw to some waters the location of which has never been determined.

Magic Figures.

"The most remarkable arrangement of numbers that I know of," said a local business college man who takes a delight in solving curious problems and digging up mathematical oddities, "is the combination of the six figures 142,857. Multiply this number by 2, and the answer is 285,714; by 3, and the answer is 428,571; by 4, and the answer is 571,428; by 5, and the answer is 714,285; by 6, and the answer is 857,142. Each answer contains exactly the same digits as the original sum, and, to cap the climax, multiply the number by 7, and up comes the answer 999,999. Try it and see if it is not so." —Philadelphia Record.

A Great Sinner.

The Doctor—Yes; that's the sort of man Refines is. The neighbors say he cheats the gas company by tapping a pipe in his basement, and he lies about the ages of his children to keep from having to send them to school. The Professor—Then he sins against both light and knowledge. —Chicago Tribune.

The Art of Pleasing.

The secret of many a man's success is an affable manner, which makes everybody feel easy in his presence, dispels fear and timidity and calls out the finest qualities in one's nature. —Success Magazine.

Coxey's Army.

Coxey's army started from Coxey's home in western Ohio in the spring of 1894 to carry, as Coxey said, a "petition in boots" to congress for relief from the hard times then prevailing. On arriving at Washington it was denied access to congress, and those of the pilgrims who disregarded the order to "keep off the grass" of the capitol grounds were sent to jail. Coxey himself was condemned to a term in jail. The "army" at last crossed the Potomac and settled down in a sort of hobo camp on the Virginia side. There it was allowed to remain for several months until complaints from Washington induced the governor of Virginia to break up the camp and disperse the emigrants.

Odd Marriage Ceremony.

Polynesia is probably the only place in the world where the marriage feast takes place without the presence of the bridegroom. For some unexplained reason the young man is "sent into the bush" when negotiations are opened with the family of his bride, and he remains there during the subsequent festivities. It is only when the guests have departed and the girl is left alone with his parents that messengers are dispatched for him.

A Scotch "Bull."

General Bude constructed military roads in the highlands of Scotland. An obelisk was constructed to commemorate his achievements on which was inscribed the following "bull," intended to distinguish between natural tracks and made roads:

Had you seen these roads before they were made, You would lift up your hands and bless God's name.

Dear Sir:—I desire to say that the Hot Water Heating System which you put into my place for heating the squash house and milk room, is doing all that you said it would do, although I was assured by persons claiming to be hot water experts, that it was impossible to make water circulate from the heater down into a coil in the bottom of an open kettle and up overboard again into the return pipe which leads to the heater. Boiling and lukewarm water is a necessity in my business and with your system I have no difficulty in heating my kettles in so open a kettle in as many minutes.

Yours truly,

QUEEN LOAF.

This is a dessert quickly prepared if there happens to be a loaf of sponge or cream cake and a cup of cream in the house. The loaf should have been baked in a brick or round pan. With a sharp knife cut through the crust an inch from the edge and remove the crust and a part of the crumb, leaving a thick shell of cake. Beat the cream, sweeten and flavor it and fill the cake. Thick cream sometimes turns to butter if not dotted with one-quarter milk. It is also much more delicate with this addition. Beat the cream with an egg beater gives a different texture from whipping it with a whip cream, which is the best way to prepare it for chocolate sauce or various fancy creams. A light cake, suitable for a cream filling as described, is made from the following recipe. Beat two eggs, yolks and whites together, and turn into a cup, fill the cup with sweet cream. Add one cup of fine granulated sugar and one and one-half cups of flour in which three level teaspoons of baking powder have been sifted, also a teaspoon of lemon flavoring. Beat the cake means strokes across the bowl, while stirring means a stroke round the dish. Ingredients of a cake should be stirred at first to blend them, and then the mixture should be beaten to make it light and the stirring motion should not be resumed.

The Willy Ways of Dumas.

The well known Paris theater manager Doligny relates in his reminiscences an encounter he once had with the elder Dumas which furnishes an illustration of the novelist's williness. Doligny produced Dumas' drama, "Kean," with the rather peculiar stipulation that the author should receive one-third of the gross receipts when these exceeded 3,000 francs and nothing at all if they fell below that figure. Dumas, who was always hard up, came late one evening to get his share.

"Luck is against you again," said the manager. "You don't get anything tonight. Here is the account."

Dumas glanced at it and went away. In a few minutes he came back and said:

"Just look over the account again and then pay me 1,000 francs. The ticket that I just bought for 3 francs brings the total up to 3,000 francs and 50 centimes."

Titles in Italy.

There is an old Venetian adage which says, "Conte che non conta non conta niente" ("A count who doesn't count [money] doesn't count for anything"). And this cynical proposition represents fairly well the sentiment of the modern Italian. In that country the general feeling toward the titled aristocracy is of utter indifference. The lesser sort of titles are regarded as almost valueless even by their possessors. "I have known," says a writer in the London Mail, "a case of a noble lord who followed the interesting occupation of a street scavenger. In a cafe in a certain Italian town I was habitually served by a waiter with the title of count and a name famous in Venetian history. And I am personally acquainted with a lord of ancient lineage whose title descended from a father engaged in the vocation of railway porter. In general the aristocracy of Italy are miserably poor."

Sport in Morocco.

"There are few pastimes known to the people of Morocco, that are not connected with religion," writes a traveler. "Children play football of a kind, and leapfrog, and practice wrestling and fencing. They also pursue rabbits with curved sticks and throw these with extraordinary skill. Some few experts claim to be able to kill partridges with the same simple weapon. The great game of the adult Moor is the labeled baroud, or powder play. This exercise is taken on horseback, and to see a body of Moorish horsemen come down at the charge with guns high above their heads to a given spot, where they fire their weapons and then pull their horses up on to their haunches, is a sight that will never be forgotten even by those who have seen cavalry maneuvers in Europe. Moors are very proud of their horsemanship and with reason."

Nature Teaches Inventors.

"We get our hints from nature," the inventor said. "Take, for instance, the hollow pillar, which is stronger than the solid one. The wheat straw shaves us the superior strength of the hollow pillar. Solid, the wheat straw would be unable to support its head of grain. Where did man get his idea for carriage springs? From the hoofs of the horse, which, like the springs derived from them, are made from parallel plates. Scissors were got from the jaws of the tortoise, which are natural scissors; chisels from the squirrel, who carries them in his mouth; adzes from the hippopotamus, whose ivory is adzes of the best design; the plane from the bee's jaws; the trip hammer from the woodpecker."—Chicago Journal.

Hardening Steel.

In hardening, bright steel should not be exposed naked to a fire or flame. It may with advantage be placed in a covered box containing bone dust or animal charcoal in some other form, or another plan is to smear soap all over the article to be hardened. Water or oil is the medium generally selected for plunging the article in to cool it. Petroleum is recommended if extra hardness is desired. Either mercury or salt water will give great hardness, but the steel is rendered brittle. Oil is the best medium for hardening steel if toughness is required.

Called His bluff.

"I see," he said, "that coal has gone up again."

"Has it?" she replied.

"And they're raising rents," he continued.

"Well," she exclaimed, flaring up, "if you wish to have our engagement broken off say so. I always hate to have people beat about the bush in a case of this kind."

Another Reformer.

Stella—So you are really going to marry old Millyuns. I had no idea you were necessary. Maude—I'm not. I am going to marry him to reform him. Stella—Reform him? I didn't know he had any bad habits. Maude—Yes, he has one. His friends say he is miserably—Chicago News.

Encouraging.

He (just accepted)—You say you were never engaged before? She—Yes. Ho—How is that? I thought all women always had three or four engagements. She (guilelessly)—Well, I presume I shall too. You see, this is the first chance I have had.

Satisfaction.

"Do you know that your attentions weary me?"

"Do they, indeed? I was beginning to feel that I had failed to make any impression whatever."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Beware so long as you live of judging people by appearances.—La Fontaine.

Irving's Stagecraft.

It chanced to me once, and only once, in a life of some faring by land and sea to ride up a Kurdish gorge at early dawn, the sky still starry, as the charcoal burners had begun their work, and to see over all as the smoke rose a gray blue light as of the depths, some touch of deep chilled enveloping air on gorge and mountain side, as though a sapphire had aged and grown gray and wan. Once only I saw this and never again. When in "Faust" the curtain rose on the Brocken I saw before me the same miracle of gray blue. "How did you?" I asked once at supper, "who ride abroad so little and are so rarely on the mountain side, hit on this, the rarest of lights?" "Once," he took up a small plate, "I saw in a gallery," and he named it, but I have forgotten. "A landscape by Durer the size of this plate, a mountain side in early morn in this same gray blue light. It gave me the light I wanted for the Brocken."—Talcott Williams in Atlantic.

The Diplomatic Druggist.

A certain druggist who does not like to answer night calls, especially as he has found by experience that he offends people who call him up at night by his displeased abrupt manner, has devised a scheme by which he does not have to get up and at the same time does not lose customers. In his own words he works it this way:

"I disconnect my bell so that it cannot ring. After waiting some time the person who wants to get in gives it up as a bad job and goes down the street to the next store. This plan opens for him, but is naturally very much displeased, and as I usually do, he shows that he is disgruntled and offends the customer. Early the next morning the customer comes out of my store to inform me that my bell is out of order and tells me what a low opinion he has of the other druggist, whom he considers a very impudent man."—New York Times.

A Rare Coin.

When Louisiana seceded, Jan. 26, 1861, the new government issued the United States mint at New Orleans and struck $254,820 in double eagles and $1,191,316.50 in silver half dollars, using the United States dies for 1861. The bullion was exhausted in May, 1861, when the coinage ceased and the United States dies were destroyed. A Confederate States die was then made to be used for silver half dollars, but it was not fit for use in coming press, the relief being too high. Four half dollars were struck with it on a screw press, and these comprise the entire coinage of the Confederate States.

What Eddie Was Reading.

A New England father who believes that children should be nourished on good literature as well as on good food has always read the English classics aloud to his only son, Eddie, now six years old.

A friend of the family, knowing of this practice, recently asked Eddie what he was reading.

"A Waverley novel," was his reply.

Her Regret.

Marjorie had been given some hard peppermint candies, and after holding one in her mouth for a few minutes she ran to her mother and cried, "Oh, mother, I swallowed that candy!"

"Never mind," said her mother; "it will not hurt you."

"Yes, I know," said Marjorie, "but I lost the use of it."—Youth's Companion.

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

THE MONOTONY OF LIFE.

Why a Comment about it made One Man Laugh Out Loud.

"Sometimes I think that the monotony of life wears on us far more than its duties we have to discharge," sighed a robust citizen the other evening as the car crept on its hind legs and began to creep up the shaft. "The everlasting rut or treadmill, or whatever you may choose to call it, gets on to one's nerves. Existence isn't varied for many of us; it's a perpetual grind."

His companion looked at him a moment and shook his head grimly. "I like that kind of talk," he said. "It's so truthful. Do you know what you do when anything out of the ordinary happens to interfere with your cut and dried plan and takes you a few steps out of your beaten path? I do. You throw force or four his hand running and look and behave as if there had been a death in the family. If your wife accepts an invitation or makes an engagement for you or you're cornered so that you can't escape the theater or a concert, you're the crossiest and most despondent creature on earth. And you'll invent excuses that wouldn't wash in a strong lye to dodge a visit to your relatives or an excursion or a journey to another city. You want to do the same thing day after day, and if you can't do them you sit down and cry. With you it's the morning paper, breakfast, the barber, work, luncheon, more work, home and the evening paper, and that would be your routine if you had $100,000 a year and were free to come and go as you chose. Nine men out of ten are exactly like you, and when I hear them complaining of monotony I have to laugh out loud."—Providence Journal.

STEVENSON'S PRAYERS.

They Were a Necessity to the Life of the Afflicted Writer.

"With my husband's prayers—the direct appeal—was a necessity," writes Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson. "When he was lying in bed, impelled to offer thanks for that undeserved life; when in sorrow he tried to call for strength to bear what must be borne." Then in every Sunday hour, the day closed with prayer and the singing of hymns. "I say," he said, "as soon as our household had fallen into a regular routine and the bonds of Samsan family life began to draw us more closely together, Tustala felt the necessity of including our retainers in our evening devotions." To their usual evening service they were summoned by the "pu" or Samsan war couch. She does not think it ever occurred to them that there was any incongruity in this use of it.

One of these plain, patriarchal services Stevenson himself on one occasion brought to a sudden check. "He had just learned of the treacherous conduct of one in whom he had every reason to trust. That evening the prayer seemed unusually short and formal. As the singing stopped he rose abruptly and left the room. I hastened after him, fearing some sudden illness. 'What is it?' I asked. 'Is this,' was the reply. 'I am not yet fit to say, 'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us.'"

"Piano-Organ."

"Piano-organ" seems to have got into the language—unfortunately, since the contrivance so designated is neither a piano nor an organ. "Organ," in musical language, means an arrangement of pipes or reeds, with bellows, key-board, pedals and draw stops. The "piano-organ" has none of these. "Piano" is short for "pianoforte" and indicates a keyed wire instrument which can be played both softly (piano) and loudly (forte). Now, nobody ever heard a "piano-organ" play "piano." A possible explanation is that the first user of the bad word "piano-organ" was trying to combine "pianoforte" and "barrel organ," and, of course, he couldn't call the thing a "barrelforte."—London Chronicle.

Bismarck's Comment.

In the early days of the present German empire the question as to how the Kaiser's title should run divided the court into three sections. One division favored "German emperor," the second was for "emperor of Germany," while the third wished it to be "emperor of the Germans." Bismarck, who was present at one such discussion, looked up from a meal. "What's the Latin for sausage?" he asked. "Farciamentum," said one. "Farciamentum or farciemum, it is all the same to me."

Inconsistent.

"If You Don't See What You Want, Ask For It" is the sign displayed over a grocer's counter. And when a man went in and asked payment of a bill that had been running for six months he was shown out through the front door. He is now of opinion that grocers are not consistent.

A Juvenile Opinion.

"I suppose you will marry when you grow up," said the visitor pleasantly.

"No," replied the thoughtful little girl; "manana says papa is more sure than the children, so I guess the cure of my children will be enough for me without the care of a husband."—Chicago Post.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husband, Pennsylvania. At times she was unable to move at all, while at other times she was able to walk. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Beats Horse Show Driving.

A west coast man was telling some stories of driving during some realistic and some hyperbolic. "There is a story," he said, "of One Eyed Pete McCoy. If this story is true, the four-hand drivers of the east are only practicing a decayed and degenerate form of coaching. One Eyed Pete drove a Dakota stagecoach that made a circuit of Dendywood, Carbonate, Spearfish and Bear Gulch. He tore into Carbonate one day on his usual dead run. Like an avalanche, the coach clattered up to the hotel door. There suddenly it stopped, and one of the horses fell stone dead.

"A very sudden death," said a bystander.

"Sudden? Not at all," said One Eyed Pete. "That horse died at the top of the hill, nine miles back, sir, but I wouldn't go to let him down till I got to the regular stopping place."

The Chinchilla.

Chinchilla is a beautiful soft gray fur. It is not the most durable of furs, and, because of the difficulty of getting the perfect skin, it cannot be said to be among the best expensive. A mink and stole of the red chinchilla cost easily $1,000 or so. The tiny chinchilla itself, not more than twelve inches long, with a plump little body on short, stout legs, thrives only in the tropics. The little beasts have to be killed with the utmost precaution not to injure their fur, that grows on a skin nearly as tender and soft as a web of silk. A perfect skin not larger than a small pocket handkerchief is a revelation in fur growth. The texture of every hair is finer than flax, the length of it nearly an inch and the coloring about that of the soft, muted maroon feathers.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Dr. E. B. Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist, in diseases of the scalp, who was qualified for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Hair Oil. This preparation will give hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a fine and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 South Avenue, Boston, Mass., writes: "Dr. Wilson's English Hair Oil to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Hair Oil to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

Whitney and Reciprocity.

In order that he may be free to devote more energy to reciprocity, Mr. Henry M. Whitney has declined to be a candidate for reelection to the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Reciprocity would unquestionably be a good thing, but the trouble is to convince our northern neighbors that our scheme is the correct one.

A Word of Caution.

Now that there is so much activity in cleaning the trees in town of the gypsy and brown-tail moth nests, many complaints are coming in that the nests are not gathered up after they are cut from the trees. We have no doubt but that among the large number of men now engaged in the work there are some inexperienced and possibly incapable parties. It is said, however, that the men who trim the town shade trees are sometimes forgetful of the fallen nests, and some property owners who have cleaned their own trees are indignant because nests have been left in the streets and sidewalks in front of their property by town cleaners.

In view of the satisfactory way in which most of the property holders of the town are fighting the pest, it would seem that the moths would be much thinned out by next summer, and no act of carelessness should be committed which would to any extent undo the work now being carried on.

Falling Off of Tramps.

The past year has witnessed a large falling off in the number of tramps cared for by the town, all due to the law passed by the Legislature of a year ago. The total for 1904 was 1063, while for the year just closed the number was 583. The record for the closing three months of 1904 was for Oct. 73, Nov. 170, Dec. 161, and for 1905, Oct. 7, Nov. 32, Dec. 32.

The new law says that tramps must work for their lodging and food, must be housed in accordance with the regulations of the Board of Health, they must not smoke, and finally, and most harassing to the feelings of tramps, must take a bath. Winchester not being in condition to conform to these rules, those unfortunates who were housed were done so illegally. But Chief McIntosh believed it was better to do this, and have the men under his eye, than it would be to turn them loose at night to their own resources. Some cities and towns turn them away absolutely, which is sure to be cruel in some instances. The life of a tramp is, indeed, now a hard one, especially in the winter season.

Cutting Down Expenses.

The Selectmen have replaced the eight 32 candle power lamps in the clock room of the Town Hall tower with 16 candle power and reflectors thereby cutting down the cost one half, and by turning out these lights at midnight instead of running all night will save about fifty per cent. more. Thus does the meter cut down waste. Here is an object lesson for the Water Board. What a saving there might be if we could have a practical meter on all town expenditures. Here is a hint for the special committee on improvement of the town government.

Secret Societies in High Schools

Doubtless it was a slight breach of etiquette on the part of the School Committee to invite the alumni of our High school to the social reception Wednesday evening, and then allow the several speakers to berate them for belonging to the various secret societies which are at present doing their utmost to run the social end of several functions of our High school. Of the three hundred young people present on that occasion probably not a dozen knew anything about the local school societies except by hearsay. And yet, the talk was wholesome and much needed as an entering wedge in the campaign which our School Committee are making ready to engage against the organizations. So much interest has been aroused in the subject, and so much need, less criticism is heard about the streets that we are glad of the opportunity to emphasize still more broadly our views which we set forth in a recent number of the STAR. If secret fraternities are good for our High school as a whole, they should be encouraged; if they are detrimental to order and a proper democratic spirit they should be exterminated. The question of High school fraternities should not be confused with that of college fraternities. Whatever may be said for or against college fraternities, it is strictly toward high schools that our remarks are directed. Secret societies in high schools are of recent growth. They have no traditions. We can, therefore, judge them on their merits. The claim that a man who does not belong to a fraternity is not a good judge of them is untenable. A man need not be an apple tree to be a good judge of that fruit.

High school fraternities are sometimes started without evil intention, but being wrong in principle they soon become troublesome. Qualifications for membership are good looks, good clothes, and a facility in "getting into society." Their ability as students has little to do with their selection. It soon becomes exclusive, self-important, mysterious, hidden, and under censure, impertinent. They become undemocratic, clannish, and assume a ridiculous air of superiority which arouses the hostility of other pupils, and another fraternity is started to get even with the first one. At present there are six of these secret societies in our High school. Strife, discord, and ill-feeling usually follow and the school is kept in a turmoil. Exception to this condition can sometimes be found while fraternities are in the early stages of their history; while they are gaining the countenance of a principal who is afraid of making "trouble." A recent circular letter discloses the fact that high school principals disapprove of high school fraternities. The consensus of opinion seems to be: (1) That they are unnecessary for high school pupils living at home; (2) That whatever good might be claimed for college fraternities could not apply to boys and girls of high school age; (3) That public schools should be democratic and free from caste and organized snobbery; (4) That these fraternities among children do have a tendency to set up social exclusiveness and caste in the schools; (5) That they are a source of discord among the pupils; (6) That they become factional in their characteristics, and that loyalty to the fraternity generally breeds disloyalty to everything else; (7) That they dissipate the energies of the pupils and interfere with their studies; (8) That they are selfish and narrow in their aims and methods; (9) That the conduct of the pupils should be open and above board and there is no legitimate want or need in the mental or physical life of our young people which calls for secret or dark lantern proceedings; and (10) That whatever of a social nature which it is necessary to encourage in school can be done through other and better forms of society which can be under the supervision and control of the principal and the school committee. The best remedy for them seems to be, after full warning has been given, to deprive the members of participation in all school affairs outside the classroom.

What About Rubbers For the Family?

One of these days it will begin to snow and by morning the earth will be covered with a beautiful white mantle. Its beauty, however, will be marred by the dreadful thought that you have neglected to buy Rubbers for yourself and for the children. Why not fit out the family today? Goodness knows, Rubbers are cheap enough.

We sincerely hope our School Committee will deal vigorously with this troublesome matter. They certainly will have the solid support of the best people of the town, if they will do their utmost to crush these petty societies out of existence. Legally, the School Committee may not have the right to do much, but morally, they have it in their power to do the town a service for which they will deserve and receive the approbation of every man and woman who has the best interests of our schools at heart.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Porterville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Safe and Sane Investment.

The following notice of a real estate sale appeared in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Dec. 20, 1905:

$170,000 for Jamaica Farm.

Another large sale of real estate has been made to the Archer, Fisher, Llewellyn and Lewis syndicate in the western section of the town of Jamaica, known as Union Course. The syndicate has purchased about twenty acres of land south of and adjoining Forest Park, for $170,000. The sellers are Philip Steingott and Charles Stutz, who purchased the property from the Weykoff estate for $60,000 an acre and have now sold it for $3,500 per acre. This land is near some of the same syndicate sold at auction on Election Day, making about $70,000 profit, doubling the amount invested.

The above tract of land is within the Borough limits of Brooklyn and was bought by myself and two others for $100,000. We made a deposit of $5,000 upon signing the contract, and before taking title sold the property for $120,000, as stated above.

Owing to the building of three new bridges over the East River, and two tunnels under it, which will give the people of Brooklyn abundant and rapid transit facilities, there is a great rise in value of real estate. A small syndicate is now being formed in Winchester. Subscribers will elect three to represent them. I will be at home until January 1st, and will give full particulars to all who inquire.

Dockstader at the Majestic.

Lew Dockstader with his famous minstrel company of over seventy persons is playing at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, this week, to crowded houses.

Mr. Dockstader has always had the merit of producing good, clean, whole, some humor and fun in his entertainments, and this is one reason why he has established his own particular place.

The negro minstrel performance of today is a long way from the old-fashioned minstrelsy of our fathers. Like everything else on the stage, it has been changed by the demands of modern audiences, but there are certain recognized features to those who enjoy good songs, sweet music, good jokes, clever skits and dancing.

The singing in the first part of the entertainment is as good as has been heard with any minstrel company in Boston in many years. The ballad singing is uniformly good, and every soloist is encircled. As end men Neil O'Brien and John King both make hits with their comic songs, and Mr. Dockstader makes the song, "Everybody works but father," look like new money, so novel and laughable is his method of doing it.

In the second part of the performance the interest centres in Mr. Dockstader's act, which is entirely new. First is seen the "Album of minstrelsy," in which are life-size portraits of the great men in negro minstrelsy. The pages are turned, and the last page shows Dockstader in real life, but looking like a porter. A quick shifting of scenery and Dockstader is seen in a sight-seeing automobile on "Rubberneck back." He is the man behind the megaphone and keeps up a running fire at Boston, and about everything from the "district attorney to the board of police." Then with the aid of moving pictures showing Dockstader on the run, he finishes. The ending is so unexpected that the audience has two laughs, one at Dockstader and the other at itself.

After this come two sketches and clog and soft shoe features and singing of some old-time minstrel songs that will please the graybeards and the younger folks.

The company will remain at the Majestic for next week only and will play in no other New England city.

OVER THE LUNCH COUNTER BY JOHN THE LUNCH-MAN.

Tailor's model—I'll have beans to-day, John.

John—Cash running low?

Tailor's model—Yes, New Years used it up.

Workman—Beans are a good steady, John.

John—Especially after all the eating during the holidays. Simple food always tastes.

Tailor's model—The holidays now are all a number of seconds faster than my class and no limit.

Waitress—Consomme and chicken gumbo.

Workman—Give me a grape fruit salad.

Waitress—Will you have it hot or cold?

John—Speaking of no limit, we used to think Flora McFlumpsey with nothing to wear on $10,000 a year was it. I read yesterday about a woman who couldn't clothe herself even on $60,000 a year.

Waitress—I could live all my life on that.

Tailor's model—It wouldn't go far in New York or at Palm Beach.

Waitress—Fried mush for one.

Workman—Give me an order of that.

John—We have the good old fashioned corn meal mush. The meal is ground with slow stones. None of your new high speed over-heated meal here.

Tailor's model—Does any one know the difference?

John—(Turning up his nose) You Wouldn't.

Tailor's model—If I had your nose John Keith would pass them all by for me.

John—How is that?

Tailor's model—It is so expressive.

Workman—Did you train it, John?

John—Yes I suppose, now I think of it, that I have an Atomizer nose—I know I spent all last winter on it.

Tailor's model—You ought to immortalize it in verse.

Workman—Yes, John, something new deserves it.

John—(who has been writing) How is this:

MY ATOMIZER NOSE.

I used to have just a plain nose,

'Twas neither sad nor gay,

But little character it had,

Nor pug nor reticence.

In utter ignorance I fared

Regarding its rare powers,

Its wealth of humor, dazzling wit,

Its solace for sad hours.

At church in prayer I blew it loud, Wiped it at breakfast time, 'Twas used, in short, like yours and yours. A natural to our clime.

But mark, last winter came a change, The doctor was the cause. He brought an atomizer wrapped in antiseptic gauze.

Thus forced to choose between the gripper And this head-splitting toy, My nose emotions' gamut ran From gloom to feverish joy.

One moment sprayed, the next released, My feelings found full play In convolutions of my nose, Now sad, now mad, now gay.

My nose perfection has attained My various moods to show. The doctors bill I gladly paid, Life now is full of go.

Waitress—John that's splendid. Tailor's model—Makes me think of an uncle I had who inherited a lot of money. A great reception was given under the mistaken idea that show was all that made an establishment or a salon. As I thanked them while bidding them good-night, one couple said "Why we live in Brooklyn." "Oh yes, I remember," replied my aunt, "I understand there are some very nice people living there and I hope to meet some of them sometime."

How It Happened.

"How did that interviewer come to misquote you?" "I heard something shortly after he left that entirely changed my opinions on the subject we were discussing,"—Washington Star.

Hollis Street Theatre.

"De Lancey," John Drew's greatest comedy success, which had such an auspicious opening at the Hollis Street Theatre last Monday evening, and has played to packed houses at every performance since, will enjoy another week's run at that fashionable playhouse, beginning Monday evening, Jan. 8.

If the great demand for seats can be taken as a token, it is safe to say that the play during its Boston engagement will be greeted at each performance by an audience as great, as appreciative and as enthusiastic as that which welcomed this perennial favorite at its opening performance at the Hollis.

Mr. Drew's popularity has a very solid basis in the appreciation of fine dramatic art. It is undoubtedly true that in all his creations, the striking personality of Mr. Drew appears and compels recognition; but the art of this admirable actor so adroitly and harmonizes his peculiar talents to the matter in hand that in each new personification he seems the most excellent interpreter. There will be Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Refined Granders.

A whole village of well-to-do Italians speaking English with an accent is one of the most astonishing things that Italy offers to the tourist. They are retired organ grinders who have acquired comfortable fortunes in various countries and have gone back to their beloved native land to live in affluence with their families in this strange little colony which they have founded among these sweet Italian mountains.

Plenty of Talk.

"You say that public official had nothing to say?" said the editor. "Yes," answered the self-confident reporter, "but he talked three-quarters of an hour before I discovered it."—Washington Star.

Doctors as Empire Builders.

The East India company in their attempts to make headway in India were signally indebted in various stages of their progress to humble practitioners in medicine. It was in consequence of a cure effected on the favorite daughter of one of the Mogul emperors that they had first been allowed a footing in Bengal.

Later still, in the year 1715, a medical man named Hamilton, as a reward for curing the reigning emperor of an illness, obtained for the company a grant of three villages near Madras, a permission to purchase thirty-seven townships in Bengal and the privilege of introducing and conveying their merchandise from Calcutta through Bengal without duty or search.

The footing thus gained and the accompanying patronage and encouragement enabled the East India company to make such progress as to cut out all foreign rivals. So England, through the company, gradually obtained full sway over India.—London Mail.

Modern Greek Fire.

"Marine torpedoes" are the direct descendants of the Greek fire of the ancients, though the modern torch is used for defense rather than offense and prevents the surprise of a fleet through the silent approach of an enemy.

It consists of an aluminum cylinder used as a projectile. On being fired from a gun it produces no result until it falls into the sea. In its interior it contains stores of calcium phosphide and calcium carbide. The former produces phosphoreted hydrogen on contact with water, which ignites spontaneously and also ignites the acetylene gas liberated from the carbide through the action of the water. Enough of the chemicals is contained to last for ten hours, and a few of these torches thrown to the points of the compass from which attack might be expected would leave the defender in discomfiture, while not permitting the enemy to approach.

The Great Amazon River.

In South America the Amazon river does for work on the grand scale and one of the noblest achievements is the Amazon river, rising in the Andes, it flows across the continent and discharges into the Atlantic ocean at the equator. The vastness of the area which it drains, amounting to 2,288,000 square miles, will be evident when it is borne in mind that this is more than the area of Russia in Europe and Asia combined. It has a length of nearly 4,000 miles, is navigable for 2,300 miles from the sea and is fed by numerous streams, which in any other country would be ranked as great rivers. In the wet season, which lasts for about eight months, its width varies from five miles to 400. No wonder the Amazon has been called a gigantic reservoir rather than a river.

Strange Taste in Eating.

Many strange dishes were eaten by Dean Buckland, the English clergyman and geologist. At his dinner parties, which were attended by leaders of science and literature, the menus were often of a most eccentric character. On one occasion pickled horse tongue was greatly relished by the guests until they were told what they had eaten. Alligator was served up as a rare delicacy and puppies occasionally and mice frequently. At other times hedgehogs, tortoises, parrots and sometimes eels, frogs and snails were prepared for the delectation of favored guests. Henry LaBouchere said that the dean swallowed the mummified remains of the heart of Louis XIV. of France.

The First Lesson of an Arab Boy.

The very first lesson which an Arab baby learns when he begins to talk is to keep facts to himself. It does not sound very friendly but in that way, but it saves a deal of trouble. Foreigners do not understand Arabs. They ask them pointed questions and receive peculiar answers. They construe the answers to please themselves and come away to tell the world that the Arabs are a nation of liars. They are not a nation of liars. Perhaps if they should tell the foreigners to mind their own affairs and let them and their alone the foreigners would understand them better.—Exchange.

Ox Bones.

Ox bones have a considerable value. The four feet of an ordinary ox will make a pint of meat's foot oil. The thigh bone is the most valuable, being useful for cutting into toothbrush handles. The fore leg bones are made into collar buttons and parasol handles. The water in which the bones are boiled is reduced to glue, while the dust which comes from sawing the bones is turned into food for cattle and poultry.

Qualified.

"What! You marry my daughter," thundered old Ruxley—"you, a mere clerk!"

"No sir," replied young Hunter, "not a clerk, but a gentleman now. I resigned my job the moment your daughter accepted me."—Philadelphia Press.

Hardly.

Hicks—I understand somebody has discovered that there's alcohol in root beer. Wicks—Yes, but there's no fear of any old whisky drinker adopting it for a substitute.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Too Much For Him.

Breezy—Why did you resign from the Don't Worry club? Easy—I discovered that the way the rest of them got out of worrying was by telling all their troubles to me.—Detroit Free Press.

All Settled.

Miss—Glad to leave, are you? Tired of working for a living? What are you going to do then? Maid—Nothing, ma'am. The fortune teller tells me I'm going to marry money.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to chronic dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his disease, had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this pill, and since its introduction on the American continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Cassio, Me., writes: "I am now past 30 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be a mere disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physio, no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Peppin, Pepsin, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchaser price refunded. Send at once for your sample package, simple, free. Address: Albert's Little Dinner Pill, Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

Causes of Shipwreck.

It is a fact of life that one of the insurance underwriters I have taken part in the investigation of more than 200 shipwrecks. "Such a long and long list," "The cause of shipwrecks are drink, fog, lack of a competent and reliable captain, and the use of defective boats and machinery." "The most dangerous waters are off the coast of England, Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn. In the past the shifting of the currents caused a great many wrecks, but the discovery of steel pipes has changed all that. Engineers have to shift a great deal of weight from coal and iron. Great foot pipes have been used with such success as to have been thrown into the sea and if the cargo shifts at all the pipes are completely broken, and the ship is lost. The space that has been made vacant.

With a well part of the South American coast a fair number of boats with high heeled French shoes were once wrecked. The native Indians stole the shoes, but could not wear them. They used them to hold for holding gloves, giving each other terrible tips with the French heel."

The disapproval of the Attorney General of our town bylaws has created a commotion here. The laws are substantially the same as we have had for years, and why the Attorney should refuse to approve of them is a question not easily understood. The simple fact is, the state is getting altogether too important; but worse than that, little by little, it is robbing the people of their rights, and making self-government a farce. According to our form of government, and that of all real Republics, power is vested in the hands of the people, who have a right to make such local rules and regulations as they please, not in conflict with the constitution. — Worcester Journal.

Automobilists are preparing to have introduced into the Legislature of 1906 certain measures which will have as their aim the securing of a higher speed limit and the making uniform of the regulations in all towns and cities of the State. It is hoped to raise the speed limit from fifteen to twenty miles an hour on country roads. A second amendment desired is that the towns and cities should be deprived of the right to regulate the maximum speed and this shall be fixed by the general law or placing the restrictions in the hands of Highway Commission.

Another change in the law that is desired is the taking away of the monetary incentive to the towns and cities in the prosecution of automobilists, and applying the money derived from fines to the improvement of roads. A contest over these changes in the law is sure to come from the country members, some of whom are inclined to be extremely prejudiced against the autoists. The advocates of the changes noted will be prompt to oppose any legislation that may provide imprisonment as the penalty of offences against the speed laws.

Stones that Speak of the Past.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Having had occasion to take a short voyage in southern France, I could not resist the temptation to visit one of the most curious cities that one can find in our time. Those who love the old gray stones of dungeons, the high, feudal towers, capricious roads full of mystery, in a word those who would like to see a fortified town of the Middle Ages in an ensemble the most complete, have only to make a trip to Carcassonne.

When I arrived there, as the day promised to be warm, I neglected to visit the new town, which offers nothing particularly interesting, and profiting with the remaining morning freshness, I crossed the Pont-Neuf and found myself immediately in front of the old city, perched on the summit of a steep hill, half a mile from the river. Its imposing silhouette stood out clearly against the sky, and the forms of the towers, square or round, high or low and massive, pointed or simply crenated, offered a diversity that is still increased by the tall chimneys and roofs of the chateau, and the numerous habitations, the two enclosures enclose with their walls. The impression of a fortified city, such as it was in the Dark Ages, makes itself felt more strongly still, as this city, the ramparts of which were falling in ruins, has been entirely restored, and one can make there today a serious study of the art of military fortifications between the 14th and 15th centuries. The city has only two gates, the "porte d'Aude," which is for pedestrians and the "porte Narbonnaise," which is reached by a carriage road recently built, which led me there from the Pont-Neuf, leaving on the right "la Trivaille," an outside fortification which formerly defended the city. After having crossed a moat on an old bridge, protected at each extremity by two guard-houses, pierced with loop-holes, I found myself in the principal enclosure and before the large Gothic gate, flanked by two enormous towers, and surmounted by a niche, where an image of the virgin seems to be placed to soften the grim appearance of these ancient stones. At the right and at the left, the space between the two lines of walls is called "Lices," which is parallel to the moat and extends with it to the part of the enclosure where the soil rises perpendicularly. Before the dark arch of the "Narbonnaise" gate, rises a pretty fountain, original in style, where the inhabitants come to fill their curious pots enamelled with green and yellow, with drinking water.

A Unique Calendar.

The best calendar to reach the STAR office is that issued by Hammond & Son Co. of Woburn. This firm, in addition to its great popularity in selling first class clothing at low prices, always makes a hit each year in the calendar it issues to its hosts of patrons. This year it is the old bob tail car of the long ago that is used to be such a familiar sight to the older generations of this town as it passed through the centre on its way to and from Woburn.

Above the pad is a reproduction of the "old bob tail" under the management of the well known John E. Russell.

On the back of the calendar is the following descriptive:

A bill incorporating a Company to build and operate a Horse Car Street Railway, to run from Woburn centre to North Woburn, passed the Legislature in the spring of 1866.

The road was first opened for business in November, 1867, when a car was put on to connect with regular trains to and from Boston.

Castle Square Theatre.

With the production of "The Merchant of Venice" at the Castle Square Theatre next week will come the third classic revival of the season at this house. Months have been spent in preparing a new acting version of the famous comedy, and the result will be that the Castle Square audiences will see the play without the many omissions of the modern stage. Every one of its five acts will moreover, be set with scenery especially designed for this production, and every scene will represent artistically and realistically the streets, the houses, the canals and the palaces of Venice. Portia's home at Belmont will be strikingly and beautifully set, and the ducal court wherein Shylock is tried for conspiracy against Antonio will be a faithful copy of an actual Venetian scene. All the scenes will, in fact, reproduce accurately the Venice of the time of the play.

Playgoers who remember the fine performances of "Much Ado About Nothing" at the Castle Square some three months ago, will have no difficulty in expecting an equally good interpretation of "The Merchant of Venice." Shylock will be played by Mr. Waldron, Bassanio by Mr. Mackay, and Portia by Miss Kemble.

After three minutes of play one of the visitor's men started a fight with Grant of the home team. While the fight was in progress, one of the visitors shot a goal which the referee allowed. Winchester protested the goal as it was made while a foul was in progress and the puck was dead.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Potteryville, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Danvers Insane Hospital.

The following extracts are from the report of the consulting board of physicians for 1905:

"The Board's complaints are worn with repetition. To put thirteen or fourteen hundred people, all of them mentally impaired and some of them physically helpless, into a building meant for half that number is to discourage discipline, to increase labor, to invite disaster. The Board believes that a new building on the grounds for the staff would be of great service. It might be occupied by the assistants if Dr. Page prefers his present quarters. The State owes its executive officers at Danvers the decent comforts of life and the privacy of a home, especially if they happen to be married.

"The Board wishes to be recorded as once more calling attention to the possibilities of danger in the case of fire. On an exposed hill, where the wind has full sweep, in a place peculiarly difficult of access by public fire apparatus, the main building would stand but a poor chance if a fire once got under headway, and the process of getting inmates to the outer air by means of the winding stairways would be at best tedious and doubtful. The Board ventures the suggestion that to cover the communicating doors between the wards with metal might delay, if not prevent, the progress of a fire."

Warning from Supt. Kirkland.

Several complaints have come to State Superintendent Kirkland concerning persons who have made exorbitant charges for destroying brown tail moth nests on private estates, and more particularly concerning those individuals who have done poor work against the moths on such estates. Numerous cases have been reported to the State office where contractors who cleared trees of brown-tail moths neglected to destroy the gypsy moths; in other cases brown-tail moth webs have been left in large numbers on the ground without burning them. To prevent such impositions on the public, Superintendent Kirkland suggests that, in cases of doubt as to the cost or quality of work done, it will be well to withhold payment until the work has been examined by a State Inspector, or preferably by the local Superintendent in charge of the town work. There are numerous reputable contractors doing work against the moths and a list of the same may be obtained by applying to the office of the State Superintendent at 6 Beacon street, Boston, Mass. Any payment of money obtained under false pretences in connection with moth work should be promptly reported to the State Superintendent, who will assist in prosecuting the case where sufficient evidence can be obtained.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

Mrs. Mary N. Hunt, National superintendent of scientific Temperance Instruction who has been unable to leave her home for some time, keeps her pen busy and does not swerve one iota from her avowed purpose to do all in her power to have the children of this land well instructed as to the nature of alcohol.

Although the ultimate products of the American saloon are crime, poverty, misery and madness, only the ballots of a majority of the voters close that saloon. Hence the supreme importance of that majority being educated as to the evil nature and effect of the drinks the saloon has to sell, as these facts are shown by modern science. Every local option state has a good scientific temperance instruction law, has in its own hands the instrumentalities for closing its saloons. If its saloons are not closed whose fault is it.

His Other Fall.

In the memoirs of Dr. Thomas W. Evans appears this anecdote of the court of Emperor Napoleon III in Paris: "At a ball given at the Tuilleries a general, slipping on the polished floor, fell at the emperor's feet, pulling down with him his partner. 'Madame!' said the emperor, assisting the lady to rise, 'this is the second time General has fallen in my presence. The first time was at Solferino!'"

Gypsy Moth Money.

It came to the ears of our city authorities last week that the State authorities were highly wrought up and greatly dissatisfied with the way money is being spent in Woburn for the extermination of the gypsy moth, and are seriously considering the question whether, or not, to allow this city the rebate of 80 per cent. of the cost of such work, as provided by law. Immediately on receipt of this intelligence all of the men engaged in the work were discharged, and operations against the moth held up.

Woburn has laid out more than $10,000 in the last year, and it is claimed by those who pretend to know that the beneficial results of the work are less than one half of what that large sum of money should and would have yielded, if judiciously expended.

The State authorities contend that there has been waste and gross mismanagement in the prosecution of the moth work in this city, so much so that the State would not be justified in returning the 80 percent rebate. It has become a serious matter.

No doubt exists in any man's mind but that the money has been squandered, and that the State Treasury has good authority for the attitude it has taken. The Mayor, in his Inaugural last Monday, treated this subject in well deserved terms, and it appears certain that he will inaugurate a reform that will benefit the city, and satisfy the State House people, whose criticisms created a big stir and serious alarm among our authorities. —[Woburn Journal.]

Expressive Slang.

Once in awhile a bit of slang is so expressive that it becomes incorporated into the language as an allowable idiom. One of the most striking of these is "making good." It has come to have not simply a general but a specific meaning. It illustrates the idea of competition; it indicates that under intense modern methods it is only he who succeeds that can, in the long run, win recognition. Recommendations, testimonials, requests from eminent men, all fall before the stern decree that you must "make good." —Success Magazine.

Dear Sir:—I desire to say that the H. C. Water Heating System which you put into my place for heating the squash house and milk room, is doing all that you said it would do, although I was assured by persons claiming to be hot water experts that it was impossible to make water evaporate from the heater down into a coil in the bottom of an open kettle and up over the top again into the return pipe which leads to the heater. Nothing but your system is a necessity in my business and with your system I have no difficulty in boiling twenty gallons in an open kettle in less than thirty minutes. Yours truly, HANDEL'S OBSTINACY.

An Incident of the Great Musician's Childhood Days.

A child's obstinacy does not always bring as fortunate results as was the case with Handel, the great musician. His extraordinary resolution as a boy doubtless led to that great success which crowned the later years of his life. When he was some seven years of age his father had occasion to visit a son by a former wife, who was valet to the Duke of Saxe-Weissenfels. Traveling in those days—200 years ago—was tedious and expensive, and Dr. Handel did not desire to be delayed by the care of an "infant" during a journey which the demands of a responsible profession would probably make as short as possible.

But the future giant of music would go. He cried, howled and eventually ran along the road after the vehicle, until the tender feelings of the doctor could refuse no longer. In an evil moment for his jurisprudence scheme he took the child with him.

No sooner did the little fellow reach the ducal residence than he gave rein to his fancy on the keys of every instrument that he found open. The remarkable music that came from the finger tips of the child's hands was soon the object of wonder and conversation throughout the palace, and all this was intensified when he secured an opportunity of touching the keys of the chancel organ within the hearing of the duke.

Such a throb started from that chapel organ when little Handel's tiny fingers chose the keys, and the soul of the duke was touched as it never had been touched before—truly a momentous occurrence, since but for it Handel's sacred music might never have been written.

The duke's attention having been arrested, he inquired of Dr. Handel concerning the child's future, and eventually succeeded in placing him for three years' study under Zaccaria, the organist of Halle cathedral. This was the beginning of Handel's musical education.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

A good many people who call themselves critics are merely kickers.

Give any man who has paid a compliment time enough, and he will qualify it.

About the most expensive experience the average man can have is to accept gifts.

As a rule, people do not rebuke you for telling gossip until they have heard all the details.

When the members of a family quarrel some very clever things are said which no one present applauds or repeats.

It is every wife's opinion that her husband needs her to protect him, and his experience later as a widower goes to prove it.

One of these days the man who gets scolded when he complains of his wife's biscuits will drop dead when he hears her apologizing for them to company.—Aitchison Globe.

The Poison of Wealth.

Great riches, carrying with them enormous possibilities of self indulgence, may fairly be considered as a sort of poison which ruins a certain proportion of those who are exposed to it, though strong constitutions survive. As ruin destroys savages, so wealth tends to destroy persons—especially young ones, whom use and training have not gradually made immune to its effects. How that is may readily be noticed in observing the effects of newly won wealth on the families of the winners. It is a rare man and usually one very much blessed in his wife, who can combine with the ability that wins him riches the sagacity to train children born in comparative poverty so that they will benefit by a rapid and radical improvement in his circumstances.—Edward S. Martin in Atlantic.

The Fish Net.

A curious custom was at one time in vogue at Gloucester, Mass., which illustrates the sacredness which seems to surround a fish net and the protection which the law affords that class of property. Whenever it became necessary to quarantine a house because of smallpox or other contagious disease the quarantine was effected by stringing nets about the building on the outside. The penalty for disturbing a net was so great that no one dared to meddle with the barrier.

A Human Compass.

Little Jack—What did papa mean by saying that he was the captain of this ship? Ma—Oh, that is only his way of saying that he is the head of the house. Little Jack—If pa is captain, then what are you? Ma—Well, I suppose I am the pilot. Little Jack—Oh, yes, and then I must be the compass. Ma—The compass? Why the compass? Little Jack—Why, the captain and pilot are always boxing the compass, you know!

The Bitter Truth.

WESTPHALIAN WITCHES.

All the Victims Who Died at the Stake Had Red Hair.

Soest, in Westphalia, Prussia, was the Salem of the European witch burning era, and, by the way, the witchcraft delusion lasted for three or four centuries longer there than it did in the colony of Massachusetts Bay. The judicial tribunal before which all Westphalian witches were forced to appear was called the vehmgericht and was composed of the most superstitious set of bigots in the province. The trees are still standing under which this witch trying congress regularly met on the commons of Soest, and the records of their proceedings are still to be found in the archives at the town hall.

One of the most noticeable things in these queer old records of the days of bigotry and blind superstition is the fact that the pages upon which are written the proceedings of cases in which the accused were condemned to the stake are all adorned with locks of the culprit's hair. The individual hairs of this queer collection of tufts exhibit all the variations usually noticed in such assortments, being long and short, coarse and fine and straight and curly. In one very characteristic feature, however, that of color, all the locks have the same general appearance, being uniformly red.

It is passing curious, to say the least, that in a country where red hair does not predominate all the witches executed during a period covering several hundred years should have had red hair.

THE TRAMP PROBLEM.

How Count Rumford Solved It In Bavaria In 1790.

A remarkable experiment was made in Bavaria in 1790 in an effort to solve the problem of the unemployed. Count Rumford, an Englishman, after an adventurous career in America, settled in Bavaria, won the confidence of the elector and obtained permission to apply Cromwellian methods in ridding the state of all its tramps, beggars, thieves and undesirables. On New Year's day four regiments of cavalry were distributed throughout the state, and at a given hour a "drive" was made of all the undesirables. Over 10,000 were placed under arrest, including 2,000 in Munich alone.

These delinquents were afterward set to work in factories which had been specially established for their reception, and Count Rumford superintended the work of their reformation. Some trouble was at first experienced with the raw army, but by kindness, exhortation and encouragement, by the public distribution of special awards for merit, the best results were achieved, and in a few years the thriftless were converted into good citizens.

Count Rumford secured a great hold upon these people. On one occasion when he was reported to be dying a multitude of poor people marched in procession, silently and with bowed heads, to the principal church in Munich to offer prayers for his recovery, despite the fact that he was a foreigner and a Protestant.

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

LINCOLN THE ATHLETE.

How the Youth's Bodily Vigor Stood Him in Good Stead.

Young Lincoln's bodily vigor stood him in good stead in many ways. In frontier life strength and athletic skill served as well for popular amusement as for prosaic toil, and at times, indeed, they were needed for personal defense. Every community had its champion wrestler, a man of considerable local importance, in whose success the neighbors took a becoming interest. There was not far from New Salem a settlement called Clary's Grove, where lived a set of restless, rollicking young backwoodsman with a strong liking for frontier athletics and rough practical jokes. Jack Armstrong was the leader of these and until Lincoln's arrival had been the champion wrestler of both Clary's Grove and New Salem. He and his friends had not the slightest personal grudge against Lincoln, but, hearing the neighborhood talk about the newcomer and especially Offut's extravagant praise of his clerk, who, according to Offut's statement, knew more than any one else in the United States and could beat the whole country at running, jumping or "wrestling," they decided that the time had come to assert themselves and strove to bring about a trial of strength between Armstrong and Lincoln. Lincoln, who disapproved of all this "wrestling and pulling," as he called it, and had no desire to come to blows with his neighbors, put off the encounter as long as possible. At length even his good temper was powerless to avert it, and the wrestling match took place. Jack Armstrong soon found that he had tackled a man as strong and skillful as himself, and his friends, seeing him likely to get the worst of it, swarmed to his assistance, almost succeeding, by tripping and kicking, in getting Lincoln down. At the unfairness of this Lincoln became suddenly and furiously angry, put forth his entire strength, lifted the pile of Clary's Grove in his arms like a child, and holding him high in the air, almost choked the life out of him. It seemed for a moment as though a general fight must follow; but even while Lincoln's fierce rage compelled their respect his quick returning self control won their admiration, and the crisis was safely passed.

Instead of becoming enemies and leaders in a neighborhood feud, as might have been expected, the two grew to be warm friends, the affection thus strangely begun lasting through life. They proved useful to each other in various ways, and years afterward Lincoln made ample amends for his rough treatment of the other's throat by saving the neck of Jack Armstrong's son from the halter in a memorable trial for murder. The Clary's Grove "boys" voted Lincoln "the cleverest fellow that ever broke into the settlement," and thereafter took as much pride in his peaceableness and book learning as they did in the rougher and more questionable accomplishments of their discomfited leader.—Helen Nicolay in St. Nicholas.

Immaterial.

Aunt Hepsy was in ecstasies over the young lady her nephew, Ike, was going to marry. "I never saw her till last week," she said, "but I fell in love with her at first sight myself. She's good, sweet, amiable and as pretty as a picture."

"What's her name?" asked the listeners.

"Maria."

"Maria what?"

Aunt Hepsy wrinkled her forehead, pursed up her lips, looked at the ceiling and gave it up.

"I declare, I can't think of her other name."

The general laugh that followed this confession nettled Aunt Hepsy.

"What's the difference about her last name anyway?" she said explosively.

"It's only temporary. She's going to change it!"—Youth's Companion.

Old Time Astronomers.

Kepler, the astronomer of the seventeenth century, explained rather quaintly why so many mediaeval astronomers were obliged to dabble in the occult sciences. "Ye overwise philosophers," he wrote to his "Tertius Interveniens," "ye censure this daughter of astronomy beyond her deserts. Know ye not that she must support her mother by her charms? The scanty reward of an astronomer would not provide him with bread, if men did not entertain hopes of reading the future in the heavens."

Mr. Spurgeon as a Smoker.

The Rev. W. Williams in his "Personal Reminiscences of C. H. Spurgeon" tells an anecdote concerning the great preacher as a smoker. Some gentleman wrote to Mr. Spurgeon, saying he had heard he smoked and could not believe it true. Would Mr. Spurgeon write and tell him if it really was so? The reply sent him was as follows: "Dear —, I cultivate my flowers and burn my weeds. Yours truly, C. H. Spurgeon."

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husband, Pennsylvania. At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Found the Saint's Day.

An Italian newspaper gives an account of an amusing lawsuit which has taken place lately in a Russian city in which German is the prevailing language. One man sued another to recover the sum of 50 rubles, the debtor having faithfully promised to return the money on St. Henry's day. But having failed to do so for a long time the lender discovered that the Russian Orthodox church includes no such saint as St. Henry, and the judge before whom the case was tried was much puzzled as to what verdict he should give. Happily the idea occurred to him that, saint or no saint, all Saints' day included even the most doubtful, so he gave judgment that the 50 rubles should be returned next All Saints' day.

A Just Man.

A slight shower was falling, and Mr. Ferguson discovered, when on the point of starting for church, that there wasn't an umbrella in the house fit for use.

"You can borrow one from the Thompsons next door," suggested Mrs. Ferguson. "They never go to church."
"No, Laura," he answered, with iron firmness. "It is wrong to borrow umbrellas on Sunday. I should have bought one yesterday. I shall punish myself for my carelessness by not going to church this morning." Thereupon he proceeded to punish himself still further by reclining in an easy chair and reading the morning papers.—Chicago Tribune.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith Avenue, Boston, Mass., 5858, writes and tells him if it really was so? The reply sent him was as follows: "Dear —, I cultivate my flowers and burn my weeds. Yours truly, C. H. Spurgeon."

Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it. If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

Wrong Impressions.

The causes of the present agitation over the secret societies of the High school should be thoroughly understood by all parents of scholars and no opinions should be given unless they understand the matter in question thoroughly. The chief causes of complaint that overshadow all others, are first, the initiations to the societies, and second, that these societies kill the democratic spirit which is necessary to the welfare of the school, to say nothing of the scholar's future life.

Of the first cause, little need be said, as most of our residents have seen some of the numerous hazings of this fall, and the sight of any one of them has, we venture to say, been more silly and disgusting than amusing. For a High school scholar to parade the streets in tramp clothes, carrying a beer or whisky bottle, we all agree is not elevating.

As regards the second cause, it seems equally and obviously harmful. One society excludes all scholars except a chosen few; they group together and patronize the others—and nothing galls a boy more than that. The result is—another society is formed, which ignores all members of the first. And so it continues, with the school divided into sets and cliques, while all are grouped together in one building to achieve a common end and become good citizens. Secret societies have existed in the High school for some time—longer than most of us imagine, but so long as their influence was for the good, no one even heard of them, but when the influence was changed, protest was at once heard.

It would seem, then, that the mere fact of a society in the school aroused no feeling, but when this society, or others, bred discontent, jealousy and horse play, the protest arose from many. It is not the society in itself, but the bad results the formation of this society causes, which is objected to.

School Census.

According to the school census the number of children 5 to 16 years (inclusive) was on Sept. 1, 1904, 1645, while for last year, on the same date, the number was 1656. One hundred families, with children under 16 years of age, left Winchester during the year ending Sept. 1st, 1905, while only about 75 families usually leave during the year. In 1904 the number of children between 4 and 5 years of age was 148, while last year there were 150; between 15 and 16 years in 1904 there were 143, while for year just closed the number was 98. A good many families have left since Sept. 1st, leaving the actual attendance in school, at this time, a little less than at the same time last year. The increase has been in one part of the town, and the decrease in another. Next September with the natural increase, there should be as many pupils as last year, even if nothing comes to take the place of the workers at the United Shoe Machinery Plant.

Playground Deadlock.

Up to last evening, from all appearances, it would seem that the question of flooding the playground had arrived at a deadlock—a deadlock so effectual that nothing would be done towards another attempt at flooding the field again this winter. In the meanwhile the freezing weather necessary for the successful accomplishment of the work had arrived, and the number of skating accidents in the town limits continue weekly, although as yet none have resulted fatally. As the matter stood, the facts were something like this: The expense of running the steamer to pump the river water on to the field is about $14 a day, and the fire engineers objected to footing the bill. The water board report that the town water is extremely low for this time of the year, and wished to have a small portion of the field experimented upon and the scheme proven a success before allowing the use of the town water.

Contractor Fitzgerald had prepared the small portion of the field for the experiment, but lacked the means to flood it, and thus the matter stood. The latter part of the week, however, the fire engineers decided to allow the use of the steamer on Thursday evening to flood the small portion of the field to be experimented upon, and should this prove a success, then the scheme may possibly be carried through to the satisfaction of everyone.

Electric Light.

The complaints of users of electricity against the contract system of lighting have led Mr. Louis R. Wallis, the former superintendent of the Woburn company, to give his views on the question. These are published in another column. Mr. Wallis' letter and tables will be read with interest. He is thoroughly qualified to discuss the matter from an unbiased point of view, and this he has done. We hope it will be to the satisfaction of the readers of the STAR.

The Edison company have also contributed a letter relative to the complaints, which we print this week, and that they desire to use all parties taking electricity in a fair and square manner in evidence. From the company's letter, it would seem that the trouble must lie chiefly in the fact that too many consumers have been receiving more light than they were paying for but their offer to explain the matter to customers and to change or adjust their rates certainly proves that the company has no desire to impose upon those using the current.

Letter from Edison Electric Illuminating Co.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston
General Office, 3 Head Place,
Boston, Mass., Jan. 9, 1906.

EDITOR,
WINCHESTER STAR,
Winchester, Mass.

Dear Sir:

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston has now standardized its prices and is withdrawing all the old special prices that have been made in the past.

In changing some of the old customers in Winchester to the regular standard prices as paid by everybody else, we understand there has been some complaint. We wish first to ask if anybody has signed an application card or contract to The Edison Company under misapprehension, or if any misstatement has been made by any representative of The Edison Company, that we should be informed at once in order that we can take the matter up and straighten it out.

2nd. We wish to say that The Edison Company has two rates, known as Contract and Non Contract rates.

The Non Contract corresponds to a single ticket on a railroad, while the Contract rates correspond to a season or commutation ticket. In some cases one is cheaper and in some cases, the other.

If any customer has taken a rate that is not the cheapest for him, we wish to say that the Company will change the rate at once when notified and will adjust the last bill or the last two bills to the cheaper rate.

3rd. As some cases of increased bills have occurred, we wish to point out that these increases are in the great majority of cases not caused by the change in rates but are due to the fact that in the past many customers have not paid for what they used.

The old Woburn rates were based on a capacity charge corresponding to the maximum number of lights used at one time and an additional charge for current. For instance, we find customers paying a capacity charge for five lights but using 10, paying a capacity charge for 16 lights but using 33, paying a capacity charge for 8 lights but using 17, etc., etc.

If these customers in the past had paid for what they used, their bills would have been much higher in the past and would not have been increased by the change to Edison rates.

We wish to repeat that the Edison Company wishes to be fair to all and treat everybody on the same basis and if there is at any time any complaint due to misapprehension or misunderstanding, that we shall welcome an opportunity to take the matter up and straighten it out. THE EDISON ELECTRIC ILLUMINATING COMPANY.

Bowling.

Calumet again failed to score a decisive victory on Monday evening, and after tying A. B. C. for the second string and losing it on the roll-off, it split even with them—2 and 2. The home team rolled a good game and should have scored at least three points, but fate was again against them. Farrington was the high man for Calumet with 274, while both he and Littlefield got singles of 113.

The score:

ALLINGTON.
Wheeler	1	2	3	Totals
Forbes	35	38	111	384
Littlefield	91	86	86	263
Gray	38	35	89	162
Burgin	104	81	87	272
Totals	481	442	464	1387

CALUMET.
Farrington	1	2	3	Totals
Boonies	113	88	95	296
Omsted	89	94	81	264
Gray	91	83	101	275
Littlefield	81	81	51	213
Totals	400	442	406	1248

The next game of the home team will take place Monday evening, Jan. 15, at the home club, with the Colonial club as opponents.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy Absolutely Harmless.

The fault of giving children medicine containing injurious substances, is sometimes more disastrous than the disease from which they are suffering. Every mother should know that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is perfectly safe for children to take. It contains nothing harmful and for coughs, colds, and croup is unsurpassed. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Secret Societies in Schools.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The discussion in your columns in regard to High School fraternities is rapidly degenerating from "the sublime to the ridiculous."

The idea that the "social life" of our children is to be handed over to any one's dictation is absurd. Parents in these free and United States will not be dictated to in this respect by either secret societies, writers of open letters, school boards or newspaper editorials.

I believe that every parent in the town of Winchester has welcomed any evidence that his or her child, through any agency whatever, has been guilty of a breach of conduct becoming a lady or gentleman. It affords them an opportunity to take steps to prevent a repetition of the offense. In so far as your columns have disclosed the fact that some of the boys and girls in the course of so-called public initiations have made themselves offensively conspicuous, you have rendered a welcome service. I believe the parents may be trusted to see to it that this kind of horse play is "cut out" in future.

Personally, I am a firm believer in our public school system and the democratic spirit it engenders—where the best ball player gets on the team and where one vote is as good as another.

While I may have a great esteem for the dear old maid who is so full of maxims as to the proper care and training of children, and enjoy her artless prattle, I would hardly think of regulating my own nursery by her wide experience. In the same way, it seems to me that those people who have carefully removed their own children from the fine democratic air of our public schools to some private institution, are hardly qualified to theorize and instruct for the benefit of parents who have real live babies of their own in the public schools.

In all seriousness, Mr. Editor, you may as well argue that because the members of the "Athletic Spread Eagle" ball nine at Symmes' Corner, as individuals, are enrolled in the public schools, they shall not organize their little Symmes' Corner team without inviting all the school boys at Cutter Village to belong, as to attempt to say that any group of boys or girls who as individuals are loyal members of our public schools, interested in every phase of school work and endeavor, but who from environment or temperament are thrown much together, shall not to some extent pick and choose when it comes to the dinner and the dance. You may call these groups the "A. B. C. Club" or the "X. Y. Z. Secret Society" or anything else you or they see fit. In school you will find them all in a true spirit of democracy and friendly rivalry, working for the best interests and good name of their school and class, in their studies, on the school paper, in athletics, in every common interest, but when school "lets out" and they are at liberty to look for some social relaxation, they will seek it within the circle of their own particular friends. You, and I, and the School Board, and the open letter writer, have neither the power, nor the disposition, I hope, to prevent it.

Incidentally, it seems quite possible that the mothers of the town may prefer to continue deciding for themselves what social functions of their children they may properly honor with their presence as matrons.

Safe and Sane Investment.

The following notice of a real estate sale appeared in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, Dec. 20, '05:

$170,000 for Jamaica Farm.

Another large sale of real estate has been made to the Archer, Faber, Llewellyn and Lewis syndicate in the western section of the town of Jamaica, known as Union Course. The syndicate has purchased about twenty acres of land south of and adjoining Forest Park, for $170,000. The sellers are Philip Steingott and Charles Stutz, who purchased the property from the Wyckoff estate for $100,000 an acre and have now sold it for $8,500 per acre. This land is near some of the same syndicate sold at auction on Election Day, making about $70,000 profit, doubling the amount invested.

The above tract of land is within the Borough limits of Brooklyn and was bought by myself and two others for $100,000. We made a deposit of $5,000 upon signing the contract, and before taking title sold the property for $120,000, as stated above.

Owing to the building of three new bridges over the East River, and two tunnels under it, which will give the people of Brooklyn abundant and rapid transit facilities, there is a great rise in value of real estate. A small syndicate is now being formed in Winchester. Subscribers will elect three to represent them. I will be at home until January 1st, and will give full particulars to all who inquire.

HEART OF LOUIS XIV.

How It Came to Be Buried in Westminster Abbey.

A remarkable story regarding the heart of Louis XIV. and how it came to be buried in Westminster abbey was told in London Truth by Henry La-bouchere, who said the story was told to him by the late Colonel Harcourt and was confirmed by his brother, the late Sir William Harcourt. A Harcourt who lived during the first French revolution had many connections in France and invited many of the emigrants to visit him. Among them was the canon of St. Denis. On leaving the canon expressed his thanks for the kindly hospitality of his host and produced from his pocket something that looked like a piece of dried leather an inch or so long, which he presented to him. "I was," he said, "in the cathedral when the royal tombs were broken open and the coffins scattered to the winds. This heart is that of Louis XIV. It was kept in a separate receptacle, and I managed to get away with it." The heart thus came into the possession of the Harcourt family and was occasionally produced for the inspection of visitors as a curiosity. The late Dr. Buckland, dean of Westminster, was on a visit when it was brought out for his inspection. He was then very old and had some reputation as a man of science, and the scientific spirit moved him to wet his finger and rub it on the heart. He put the finger to his mouth after that, and before he could be stopped he put the heart into his mouth and swallowed it, whether by accident or design will never be known. Very shortly afterward he died and was buried in Westminster abbey. It is impossible he could ever have digested the thing. Consequently the heart of Louis XIV. must now be reposing in Westminster abbey inclosed in the body of an English dean.

SHE HAD HER SAY.

A Girl's Revolt Against an Award of Valedictory Honors.

"I think the greatest shock I ever experienced and the biggest revolt against my discipline occurred when I was teaching in a country high school," said the schoolteacher. "It was in a school where the valedictory honor was awarded by popular vote of the school, a most unjust method, by the way, but one to which I was forced to succumb. The girl who received the most votes was by no means the best scholar, and the pupil who ranked highest in scholarship was plainly indignant."

"Every boy and girl in the class was obliged to write and read a graduation essay, and it was my task to look these essays over and aid in the rewriting of them. The pupil who ranked the highest in the class handled in her essay to me with some defiance, and in it I found some reference to the valedictory honor being rightly hers. I cut it out and told her plainly that nothing of that sort should go into her paper. She agreed to leave it out."

"The graduation exercises were passing off splendidly when it came her turn to read her essay. She had a facile way of writing, and I was proud of her, but when she reached what I knew was the conclusion she stepped forward a little and proceeded to deliver two pages of regulation valedictory. She bade farewell to the class, the school and the teachers, and of course we could not stop her. It took all the skills out of the chosen valedictorian, who followed, and after the exercises there was much waiting and hot words. We couldn't do a thing, as the sinner was now a graduate of the school, and we had no right to punish her, but it took me all summer to get over the effect of such a stunning performance."—New York Press.

Progressive Matrimony.

"You can always tell a young husband from an old one by the way he acts when he goes after a bucket of water," says Uncle Hiram. "Three months married, he swings the pump handle, whistles and casts covert glances at the house as though some one were looking at him from the window. One year married, he swings the pump handle more slowly, smiles occasionally and seems to be annoyed because the wheel is late. Two years married, he looks sour and glum, kicks the cat over the coal house and looks at the house as if he would like to choke somebody. Three years married, he sits on the doorstep and smokes while his wife works the pump handle."—Kansas City Journal.

The Great Chain.

The "great chain," the links of which were two and one-half inches square and one foot long, each link weighing 140 pounds, was stretched across the Hudson river at West Point, just below Fort Clinton, May 1, 1778, to prevent the British warships from ascending the river. The total weight of the chain was 120 tons, and its length was 450 yards. Parts of it are still preserved at West Point.

Real Detectives at Work.

"That was a terrible crime committed yesterday." "It was so. Have the police made any progress toward apprehending the guilty parties?" "Oh, yes. They've persuaded the newspapers to take the matter up."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to chronic dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who specialises in his disease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this pill, and since its introduction on the American continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casco, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no opium, no acid, alkali, ginger, Pepsin, Pancreatic, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of opium, or in fact any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price refunded. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

The Bishop and the Senator. A visiting bishop in Washington was arguing with a senator on the desirability of attending church. At last he put the question squarely, "What is your personal reason for not attending?"

The senator smiled in a no-offense-intended way as he replied, "The fact is, one finds so many hypocrites there."

Returning the smile, the bishop said: "Don't let that keep you away, senator. There's always room for one more."—Philadelphia Post.

VOL. XXV. NO. 30.

WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JANUARY 19, 1906.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

ELECTRIC LIGHTS COST.

How the Edison Company has Increased the cost to all in Winchester.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company, in their letter to The STAR, try to throw dust in the eyes of Winchester people by implying that the increased cost of electricity is due to some people having previously paid too little, and that the new prices are simply an evening-up process.

That is nonsense. The company is simply charging everyone more than before. They are giving no better illumination than did the old Woburn Company and their system of charging compels an unjust increase in cost to every consumer. Mr. Wallis gave last week in the STAR an analysis of the Edison charges under their "Non-contract" system and under their "contract" system. These tables are repeated below and with them is given a table showing the amount the same consumer would have paid under the Woburn Company, using the same quantity of light and the same maximum number of lamps.

These figures show that the Edison's present lowest rate is enormously more than the old rate.

The injustice of the Edison rate lies in this: If you use 7 lamps regularly every night for thirty days in a month and then happen, in case of sickness or emergency, to light a dozen lamps for a brief period on one single night, you will be charged in the first big item on your bill just as much as if you had used 12 lamps every one of the thirty nights. No sane man can call that fair.

No one would object if the Edison Company put in any sort of apparatus to limit the power when the consumer happens to run over the maximum number of lights he agrees upon, but everyone must and will object to the Edison Company charging him for current he has not used.

The facts are, the Edison Company has an unjust system and by it the company raises the cost, not to a few consumers, but to all consumers, some more than others but everyone raised, and raised beyond reason and justice.

A program suitable for children's day will be given, which will be followed by refreshments.

Mrs. Charles E. Dyer of Grove street has been quite ill with a cold, which confined her to bed for a few days this week.

A vote of thanks was offered to Miss Pond for her long and faithful service.

Special Town Meeting Called.

A special town meeting has been called for Jan. 29, when action will be taken on the report of the committee appointed to consider changes in methods of transacting town business.

A Winchester Boy's Progress.

We have seen a Colorado newspaper which compliments a former Winchester boy. It has a half page ad. of the C. W. Knox Machinery Co. which sells mining machinery, and in a two page story of the enterprises of Boulder, a half a column is given to an account of the business and it is stated that 10 different plants have been installed by this Company during this last year and that they expect double the business this year. In another part of the paper is an article headed "Good bye, Sharks. Enterprising Boulder man opens a vigorous warfare upon the loan sharks of the county." Chester W. Knox says, "Mining, I know is injured by these sharks in human guise." "Good men, temporarily embarrassed, lose their all in efforts to pay five to ten per cent. a month interest and other cruel exactions."

"I propose that whenever a man has good security to let him have money at one per cent a month. This is not philanthropy for my object is reasonably selfish of course but I shall be much mistaken if it does not result in great good for our city."

Mr. Knox is treasurer, engineer and manager of a small gold mine in active operation, which met with a fire loss last month of $5,000 by destruction of the mill at the mine. The building had a fair amount of insurance on it but the machinery, all new, was insufficiently covered, so that quite a loss is sustained.

Country Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Country club will be held at the club house on Monday evening, Jan. 29th, at eight o'clock. The usual amount of business will come before the meeting, including the matter of changing the membership dues for golf and tennis privileges and associate membership.

The new officers will also be elected, and the following nominations have been made:

President, John W. Suter. Vice-president, Marshall C. Bouve. Treasurer, George G. Kellogg. Secretary, John Abbott.

Board of directors, John Abbott, Joseph L. S. Barton, Marshall C. Bouve, Frank L. Hunt, George G. Kellogg, James Nowell, William D. Richards, John W. Suter, Frank E. Barnard.

Special Notice to the Epworth League and all Friends.

Tickets for the banquet to be given Jan. 30 at the Methodist Church, must be obtained at once, as the number is limited to one hundred. After Friday, Jan. 19, friends outside of the League, can obtain tickets by applying to Charles H. Dunning or Frank Finemore. All tickets must be sold on or before Jan. 25.

Installation and Presentation.

The following officers of Court Pride, 196, F. of A., were installed on Monday evening: Chief Ranger, A. F. Mullen; Sub Chief Ranger, W. J. Wallace; Fin. Sec., A. F. Forten; Treas., J. H. Holland; Rec. Sec., Jerry McCarthy; S. W. W. M. Waters; J. W. W., Daniel Lydon; S. B. William Rogers; J. B., Daniel O'Leary; Lecturer, J. F. McNelly; Trustee, J. E. O'Connor; Physician, Dr. C. F. McCarthy; Druggist, J. F. O'Connor. Grand Senior Beadle, E. E. McGanty and Past Grand Junior Beadle, J. Labarbard, addressed the meeting on matters appertaining to the order. Chief Ranger, C. Strubbs, of Aberjona Court of Woburn, and members were present, also Chief Ranger, John Lundholm, of Court Norden of Woburn, and members of Court City, of Medford. After the installation, Bro. J. F. McNelly was escorted to the platform, by Supreme Auditor, A. F. Forten, or K. S. F. Whereupon Bro. McNelly was presented with a gold mounted meerschaum pipe, in a few well chosen words, on behalf of Court Pride, by Grand Senior Beadle McGanty, showing the esteem and appreciation of his services as treasurer of the court for the past four years. Bro. McNelly was taken by surprise to such an extent, that he was unable to respond in the manner he would have wished to.

Those present were then invited to retire to the banquet room, and partake of an oyster supper with other refreshments, which were served by the social committee of Court Pride 196. The brother Forsters departed after the repast with a feeling of gratitude and satisfaction.

Generous People Asked to Help a Deserving Case.

A young woman with four children, in age from one and a half to eleven years, has been left a widow, her husband dying of consumption. To support these and an aged blind mother, she has been working out by the day until the last few weeks when evidence of the same disease began to appear and she is not now able to work as hard as before. Arrangements have been made to send her to the State Sanitarium at Rutland but her expenses there, $4.00 per week and the care of the family here, must be provided for.

One gentleman on hearing the circumstances gave $25 and with this the extra expenses during the last month has been met. With the help provided by the committee it will probably cost about $200 to keep the patient and provide for the family long enough for her to get benefit from the treatment. You are asked to send such portion of this sum as you may wish, to Mr. George H. Carter, Town Clerk, at the Town Hall, or to Mrs. M. A. Cummings, 69 Church street.

Souvenir Postals.

Do not forget that Wilson the Stationer has an exclusive set of souvenir postal cards of Winchester comprising 23 different views of the town. Just let us name them again: Winchester Centre in 1851, Winchester Centre today, Old Episcopal Church, New Episcopal Church, Unitarian Church, Baptist Church, Pleasant street, Town Hall, Wadleigh school, High school, Gifford school, Highland school, Mystic school, Winchester in 1830, three views of the Winchester Boat Club, Calumet Club, two views of the Common, Old Bacon House, Old Blackhorse tavern, Rangely and the Winchester Savings Bank.

In addition to these views we carry a line of 48 of the best Boston views and a number of Cambridge views.

Remember these Winchester views can be had only of Wilson the Stationer.

Letter Carriers Elect Officers.

Winchester branch No. 243, National Association of Letter Carriers, held a very important meeting Wednesday afternoon and elected officers for the ensuing year. After a very lively contest Mr. Chas. T. Kimball was re-elected President, making his sixth year as president of the branch. D. Frances Foley was unanimously chosen secretary and John J. McNally Treasurer.

Mr. Kimball gave a short but eloquent speech, pointing out the needs of the branch and asking for stronger support for the coming year.

After cigars were passed around the boys returned to duty, fully delighted with their worthy president, and confident of meeting with future success under his administration.

Have the Numbers Been Changed?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

When did the town change the numbers of the houses on Washington street? I notice from my water bill that not only the number of my residence has been considerably advanced, but likewise my neighbor's. This may be a mistake in addressing the envelopes, but if this is not so, then who is responsible for the changes. My number has been moved a long distance up the street.

WASHINGTON STREET.

The Woman's Guild of the Parish of the Epiphany will meet in the choir room of the church on Tuesday afternoon. They will be addressed by Rev. T. S. Tyng of Japan. Tea will be poured by Mrs. Ham and Mrs. Putnam.

FRANK A. CUTTING.

President of the Middlesex County National Bank of Winchester. This bank is one of the town institutions, and while its years are not many, it stands in the front ranks of the suburban or country banks. Since the introduction of the bank in this town it has been found of great convenience to the business men, and scores of people who make Boston their workshop, also to ladies while shopping in the city who use check books instead of money, thus eliminating all danger of accidental losses and pickpockets.

Baptist Annual Meeting.

One of the best annual meetings in the history of the church was held on Monday evening. The reports of the work done during the year were so gratifying that in the midst of the meeting, on motion of the chairman of the Standing Committee, all stood and sang heartily, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow." The treasurer reported all bills paid, and a balance of $66.09 in the treasury. Every report was handed in in writing. The total receipts for the year for expenses and benevolences amount to nearly $3500. The meeting throughout was pervaded with a spirit of profound gratitude to God for His goodness during the year. The following officers were elected and committees appointed for the year 1906:

Moderator, F. A. Sanborn; Clerk, Wallace P. Palmer; Treasurer, Arthur L. Winn; Auditor, Harry C. Sanborn; Standing Committee, Willard A. Bradley, Frederick S. Osgood, Arthur L. Winn, Henry E. Langham, Forbes D. Smith; Deacon for three years, Henry E. Langham; Deacon for one year, Geo. A. Weld; Superintendent of Sunday School, Arthur P. Briggs; Assistant Superintendent, William J. Arcanum Officers Installed.

The newly elected officers of Aberjona council, Royal Arcanum, were installed Tuesday evening by S. D. G. R. A. W. Russell, and he was assisted by Grand Regent Tilley of Rhode Island. The officers installed were:

Regent, Orion Kelley; V. regent, Charles S. Adams; orator, J. H. Mosher; secretary, Warren F. Foster; treasurer, F. A. Parsley; collector, H. G. Young; guide, F. E. H. Heath; chaplain, Charles Lawson; warden, Harry H. Hatch; sentry, F. H. Swan; P. Regent, F. S. Pratt.

After the installation there were speeches, a pleasant social hour and refreshments. Aberjona Council is prosperous and flourishing.

Remarks were made by Deputy Russell, Grand Guide Jones of Elliott council, Regent Orion Kelley and others. The regent who has been elected to serve another term, was presented with a past regent's badge.

Eventide Service.

Next Sunday at 4.30 p. m. in the main auditorium of the First Congregational Church Rev. W. B. D. Gray will give an address upon Missionary Work along the firing line. Mr. Gray is the Superintendent of Sunday school missionary work in Wyoming, which is in the very front of the frontier of our country. Rev. George M. Boynton, D.D., says of him: "He is an indefatigable worker and an unusually interesting speaker. I have never heard of his failure to interest and move a congregation." Come and hear him. All seats free. Mrs. Willard will sing. Collection will be received for the Cong'l Sunday School and Publishing Society.

Fortnightly Whist.

A most novel and successful whist party and luncheon was that given under the auspices of The Fortnightly Club at the Town Hall on Wednesday forenoon. The affair was attended by a large number of ladies, and the whist most thoroughly enjoyed from ten until twelve. There were forty-six tables, and a very social and jolly crowd passed back and forth among them during the morning.

One of the pleasant events of the morning was the gift of two bouquets of very beautiful flowers, roses and pinks, to the winners of the whist by Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn. The fortunate ladies who received these flowers were Mrs. R. E. Lane and Mrs. F. V. Wooster.

The whist was followed by a lunch, served by the H. J. Hienz Co., and the ladies of the club. This was preceded by a short demonstration talk by Miss Bullock the Heinz representative. Coffee was also served through the kindness of F. D. Richardson grocery of this town.

The ladies who had charge of the serving were: Mrs. George Goddu, Mrs. C. H. Little, Mrs. Fred A. Parsley, Miss Sophia Wilson, Miss Georgia Stone, Mrs. George E. Morrill, Mrs. George H. Root, Mrs. Fred Symmes, Mrs. J. Edson Young, Mrs. W. E. Atherton, Mrs. Cherrie Knapp and Mrs. Almy A. Hazlett.

There was a large attendance, about 240 ladies sitting down to lunch, and all voted a very enjoyable morning.

The committee in charge were: Mrs. H. E. Wellington, chairman, Mrs. A. H. Richardson, Mrs. F. N. Kerr, Mrs. J. D. P. Wingate, Mrs. E. L. Dunning, Mrs. G. S. Littlefield, Mrs. N. M. Nichols, Mrs. J. S. Woods and Mrs. L. W. Ham.

Lights Went Out at an Opportune Time.

Just after the close of the firemen's ball in the Town Hall last Friday night, the electric lights went out, from a fuse burning out. In anticipation of such an accident while the dance was on, the large gas chandelier in the centre of the hall had been lighted previous to the opening of the festivities, for if this had not been done, and the electric lights had gone out in the midst of the ball, there would undoubtedly have been a panic because of the large crowd present. There is a grave fault in the wiring of the Town Hall building and that is the different circuits are not tagged, so that it is impossible to ascertain where the burned out fuse is without tracing up the wires and testing the different circuits. This simple and necessary matter should be attended to so that when a similar accident happens it can be looked after promptly by the janitor and not have to wait and procure the services of an electrician.

The usual appropriations were voted. Repairs on roof were recommended, discussed, and referred to new Standing Committee for further consideration and recommendation.

Secret Societies do Not Sow Discord.

Let me as a member of a society at the High school say a few words in defence of the societies. First, it has been said that while in school, members of the different societies are in strife and discord. That is not so. While in school we are all comrades helping each other, and doing things for each other as if there were no such thing as societies. Societies are forgotten and a member of X society will be helping a member of Y society, as would brothers. As soon as school is out it is perfectly natural that members of one society should be seen together and chum together.

Second, as to initiations, that these initiations are not elevating is perfectly clear to all of us, they are not supposed to be elevating in any respect, they are just a test of endurance for a candidate for a society, and if any one thinks that they are disgusting, what does he or she think of the actions of the candidates at Harvard or of any college in the U. S.?

Why should the High school of Winchester be picked out from all the suburban High schools, and the societies and their influence questioned? Do not the same, or practically the same, initiations exist in every High school?

On my life I can't think of anything to say more in regard to the societies, only that they are alright and their influence far from bad.

P. S. D.

Oh, Law!

The horse dealers in Boston think they have the laugh on the members of the North Suburban Association. The law which went into effect Jan. 1st, and which was supposed to prohibit the objectionable features of the horse traffic at the North end, seems to have been rendered inoperative by a foxy little amendment which was tacked on to the original bill.

The bill provided that on and after Jan. 1st, 1906, no horse auction stables should be allowed within the building district of Boston, and that stables not in existence at the time of the passage of the act should cease from doing business in the territory named at new years.

The bill was also calculated to prohibit the exhibiting and speeding of horses on the public streets, a particularly objectionable feature to patrons of the north station.

Right here a harmless appearing amendment was introduced as a sop to the horsemen, providing that horse auctions already established should not be made to close provided the auctions were conducted in doors and that horses offered for sale at the auction were not exercised in streets for the purpose of effecting a sale. The bill as amended was approved May 2nd, 1905.

The law went into effect and after a few days North suburbanites noticed the same old familiar and objectionable features that the bill was supposed to remedy. The police officials were informed of this, and proceeded to take names of the offenders for the purpose of prosecuting, whereupon E. B. Hale, counsel for the stablemen, called on the board of police and asked for a conference before any prosecutions were made. He was referred to Commissioner Emmons, the only lawyer on the board, to whom Mr. Hale pointed out the obvious fact that under the new law the stablemen who were established in their present locations before the bill was adopted are not affected by it, and that the horsemen, acting by the advice of counsel, never take their horses out in the streets and exhibit them on auction days.

Mr. Hale further maintained that the bill, as amended, does not prohibit the stablemen from speeding and exhibiting their horses when they are trying to make private sales and he claimed that the horsemen have a perfect right to take out their horses and exercise them on days when auctions are not being held. Mr. Hale maintains that the only change imposed upon the stablemen by the new law is that they shall not show off their horses on the streets on auction days, namely Wednesdays and Saturdays.

As a result of this conference the board of police has instructed the police of division one to go no farther with the threatened prosecutions. As they construe the law, if the horsemen do not speed their horses in the street on auction days, they cannot be molested by the police. On other days the new law does not effect the privileges they have previously enjoyed; and the smiles of the stablemen become still more expansive from the fact that the law protects them from additional competition, as under its provision no new firms can come into the district.—[Mentore Reporter.]

The U. S. Machinery Co.

Lucky Beverly. The United Shoe Machinery Company is in need of additional quarters, and there are excellent prospects that a big addition will be made to its already tremendous plant in the Garden City, to accommodate 1200 more workmen with a payroll of something like $40,000 a week. Whether or not the addition goes to Beverly it is said remains with the citizens. There is a great demand for tenements in the city, there not being sufficient accommodations to care for the army of workers employed now by the company. It the people of Beverly will supply homes, it is understood that the big addition will be erected in Beverly in preference to Winchester. Too bad that Gloucester has not some high official in the Shoe Machinery Company, who is strongly interested in Gloucester and who would use his influence to steer that big addition down this way. It is under similar conditions, it is understood, that Beverly got the present big plant.—[Gloucester Times.]

There is not the slightest prospect that the additional quarters will be erected in Winchester, but Beverly, where the company has an abundance of land. There is not much prospect that the plant here will be used again even temporarily.

Winchester Public Library.

JAN. 1-20, 1906.
Exhibition of photographs loaned by the Library Art Club. Velasquez, the most famous of Spanish painters, and one of the great masters of the world, was born at Seville, in 1599. He went to Madrid, where his talents were brought to the attention of the king, Philip IV., who appointed him court painter. At Madrid he remained, with only two brief intervals, until his death in 1660, and in this capital, in the gallery of the Prado, are to be seen the most celebrated of his paintings.

Newsy Paragraphs.

The lack of continuing cold weather has led some people to think that the ice dealers must be alarmed over the prospect of a shortage this winter. The average time for cutting is along about Jan. 25. In 1890 many dealers had to go to New Hampshire for their supplies.

The Melrose postal service has been consolidated with the Boston office. It is the intention of the post office department to ultimately bring all the offices in cities and towns close to Boston into that office.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislature exempting town halls as places of amusement and permitting theatricals. If this bill should become law then there may be no occasion for enlarging the exits in our Town Hall.

The success that attended the sale of Boston city bonds has led to the thought that it might be worth the while for towns and cities throughout Massachusetts to consider the advisability of placing town notes and bonds among their own people, making the pieces small enough so that people of limited resources could become an owner of the town or city debt. An experiment of this sort would be worth the trying.

Souvenir postal card albums—all sizes at Wilson the Stationer's.

There was one paragraph in Mayor Fitzgerald's inaugural address which applies to the municipalities of Greater Boston as well as to the Hub itself. In speaking of taxation for metropolitan park purposes the new mayor declared: "The present assessments are simply extortionate." To which all the cities and towns in the district will heartily say "Amen!"—[Wakefield Item.]

The Medford Mercury has just issued over 3000 books of about 60 pages each containing over 100 large half tone pictures, reproduced from photographs taken in or near Medford, of gypsy and brown tail moths, caterpillars, nests, ravaged woodland and orchards, etc. While the books are very expensive to print on account of over $1000 invested in half tone cuts, our citizens who are interested in the suppression of the moths may obtain a copy while they last, for the price of postage, about ten cents.

The project of many of the Boston politicians to build the new city hall on the noted public garden, raises a howl throughout the state. It is not only the pride of Boston, but is the Mecca of those who come from all over the state seeking scenes of peaceful rest and real beauty, which are found there. It certainly would be an ideal spot for the heels and hangers-on.

Prefer to Live in the Towns.

In the current bulletin of the municipal statistics department of Boston is a study of the increases and decreases of Boston's population by wards, together with a presentation for comparison of similar changes in the other cities and towns included in Greater Boston. It is found a remarkable growth of the suburbs at the expense of the metropolis, the figures being of unusual interest in view of the plans for a metropolitan district council. The increase of population in Boston from 1895 to 1905 was 19.81 per cent. for the towns in what is known as the Greater Boston district, which includes Winchester. It was about 35 per cent. The cities in the district not including Boston show a gain of about 25 per cent. This only goes to show that a majority of the people prefer to live in towns and under a town form of government rather than in cities.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Fotterville, California. "There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy."

The Firemen's Ball a Big Success.

The concert and ball of the Winchester Fire Department last Friday evening in the Town Hall was a big success both socially and financially, and was the most largely attended of any similar event in many years. The various committees, assistants and aids showed that they had made all the necessary preparations for the comfort and convenience of the guests so that everything passed off like clock work.

One of the events of the evening was the hose coupling contest for which there had been a large number of entries. Rivalry ran high among the many teams and the out of town spectators, and this served to keep interest on the keen edge. However, there were too many contesting teams so that toward the close the spectators were becoming tired.

The times made in the contest follow: J. H. Hammond and William Rupp, Woburn, 15 1/4 s; James A. Pratt and Leonard Melanson, Lexington, 16 1/2 s; E. V. Gay and J. Tierney, Arlington, 17 s; This team was tied with Tansey and Newhall of Stoneham and third prize was divided between the two teams. N. J. Pero and F. C. Griffin, East Lexington, 18 s; J. J. Cook and G. N. White, Arlington Heights, 19 s; D. H. Kerrigan and W. J. Hammond, Woburn, 20 s; H. Dotten and George Nelson, Winchester, 20 1/2 s; E. J. Long and A. Cuneo, Woburn, 20 3/4 s; W. W. Butterfield and H. J. Nutt, East Lexington, 24 1/2 s; John Tansey and J. S. O'Leary, Winchester, 25 s; Ralph Anderson and Harry Kempton, Winchester, 27 1/2 s; E. Stewart and C. W. Stevens, Saugus, 19 1/4 s; T. Murphy and J. McGuire, Belmont, disqualified, 22 1/4 s; F. Callahan and A. Cunningham, Woburn, disqualified, 17 1/2 s; Fred D. Graham and L. B. Winters, Wakefield, disqualified, 16 1/4 s.

The judges were: Fire Commissioner G. A. Judd, Everett; Capt. Edw. Shallow, Ladder 1, Boston; C. H. Hooper, Peabody; Ex-Chief Arthur Symmes, Medford; Time Keeper, George S. Hudson.

Among the out of town firemen present were Chiefs Cade of Wakefield, Sturdivant of Stoneham, Littlefield of Woburn, Gott of Arlington, Phillips of Lexington, Packard of Attleboro, Ex-Chief Casey of Cambridge and Capt. Brophy of Boston.

About $500 was cleared which will go for a Firemen's Memorial Fund and will be used to decorate the graves of past firemen each year, the date of the observance to be the second Sunday in June.

Greater Boston Scheme.

A bill was offered in the House Monday by Representative Marsh G. Bennett of Boston, urging the necessity of legislation for control of the metropolitan district.

The bill proposes the creation of a metropolitan district council, and provides that to the cities and towns of the metropolitan district and such others as may be joined, either of all of them, is granted authority to establish a metropolitan district council, which shall consist of the mayors of cities and the chairmen of selectmen of towns, who shall serve without pay.

This council shall meet in the City Hall, Boston, on the second Wednesday of January in each year, and at such other times and places as may be necessary for the performance of the duties of said council. They shall be called to order at their first meeting by the mayor of Boston and shall proceed to choose a president and secretary by ballot, and such other officers as may be necessary.

Section 3 provides that no legislation which involves additional expenditure payable by the metropolitan park, water or sewerage districts shall take effect until accepted by a two-thirds vote of the said metropolitan district council at a meeting regularly called, and by a call of the yeas and nays, provided, however, that no representative of any city or town not included within the district or districts affected by the legislation upon which a vote is taken, shall have the right to vote upon its acceptance.

Each city or town shall be entitled to cast one vote for each 100,000 inhabitants it has, or major fraction thereof, provided that no city or town shall be deprived of one vote.

The park, water and sewerage commissioners shall, when requested to do so by the council, appear before it and furnish such information as the council may require.

The cost of the necessary clerical assistance and other contingent expenses of the council shall be paid by the treasurer of the commonwealth when authorized by the council, and shall be included in the annual assessment of the cities and towns comprising said district.

Simplicity Needed.

If the electric light company had some simple system of charges that was intelligible to the people, there would be less cause for complaint. As it is now, not one person in a hundred knows how the company determines the cost for the use of electricity. K.W. hours, lamp hours, kilowatts and amperes are just so much Dutch to them. There should be some simpler system in arriving at the cost for electricity.

Hot water in the shower bath all the time. We say this for the benefit of those who have often times asked about the hours when hot water may be had. The cost of a bath at public bath houses is 25c. Two baths each week will amount to $5.00 per year. A membership fee in the local association costs but $5 annually, and as many baths as one desires may be taken. The membership fee does not stop them. The annual fee includes membership in the social and physical department as well. In the gymnasium, classes meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings for exercise under a competent instructor. In the social department, a pool table in good condition may be used with a small additional expense 2c per cue, or 6 for 10c. Checkers and chess are interesting games, while base ball holds the lead upon Tuesday evenings. Base ball introduced by Mr. Jordan has captured members of the senior as well as Junior departments.

The lecture by D. W. Howard, and concert by the Mozart (ladies) quartette given in Town hall last Monday evening has been pronounced as a decided success. Everyone seemed perfectly pleased. The pictures can be described only as superb. The bold and rocky coast line of New England and the numerous summer resorts were described and illustrated in song and story. It seemed almost as if one were sailing along the coast and enjoying in reality the scenes as they were thrown upon the screen. A description of our own coast can hardly be described. Its grandeur and beauty is second to none. Next to a sail along the coast is a description of a summer outing, on sea and shore, and this pleasure was given by Mr. Howard in this lecture. The lecturer understands his subject thoroughly and being familiar in every detail with the coast line is able to interest and please an audience as he did last Monday evening. The audience was invited to take a month's vacation and spend the greater part of the time upon the yacht "Má belle." For the yacht a party of singers (Mozart ladies quartette) entertain the excursionists, as they sail along. A program of beautiful songs were given which were arranged for this entertainment and were descriptive of passing scenes.

A neat "official score" card for the base ball league has been arranged, all the interest of a regular game, save the noise of cheering, is manifested. A bulletin neatly arranged hangs upon the wall and contains the correct standing of all clubs to date. At the close of the series five positions will be given instead of three, thus giving all a better opportunity to compete.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

In one corner of Oklahoma, a few miles from the Indian Territory line, there is a saloon from which have come in four years ten murders, sixteen assaults with intent to kill, and eighty-one cases on the commission's docket for the illegal introduction of whisky into Indian Territory.

It is fitting that we should go back to the beginning of the W. C. T. U. and think about the methods used and the spirit manifested by our leaders who have passed to their reward. Read the following resolution presented at the first convention by Miss Francis E. Willard.

"Resolved, that recognizing the fact that our cause is, and will be, combatted by mighty, determined and relentless forces, we will, trusting in Him who is the Prince of Peace, meet argument with argument, misjudgment with patience, denunciation with kindness, and all our difficulties and dangers with prayer."

At the annual meeting of the Winchester Union, Friday, the officers were re-elected.

Mrs. Ramsdell was reported as being seriously ill.

An attempt is to be made to induce the Legislature to repeal the laws restricting the exhibition of horses in the streets at the North Station. The North Suburban League will vigorously oppose a repeal of the laws.

SPINACH A LA MARGUERITE.

Spinach should be washed several times in order that it may be entirely free from sand. Fill two pans with cold water and pass the spinach from one to the other, rinsing the sand from the pans as it settles. Let it stand half an hour to freshen. Put one-half peck in a covered kettle with a little boiling water and let it cook from twenty to thirty minutes. Be careful not to cook spinach so long that the leaves become a soft paste and the stems stringy, but as soon as a fork pressed against the side of the kettle will cut it take it up and drain. Chop coarsely and season with salt and a tablespoon of butter. A tablespoon of cream may also be added.

Pack in a bowl for two or three minutes, then turn on to a hot plate. Boil one egg for thirty minutes and drop into cold water, cut the white into eighths and garnish the top of the spinach in the form of daisy petals with the long strips of egg and grate the yolk into a little round mound in the center.

Cut small triangles from thin slices of stale bread; toast and arrange in a row of points at the base of the mound of spinach.

THE AMERICAN THEATER.

It Should Not Be a Toy—It Should Be Made an Educator.

To claim that the stage, no matter how improved, could work an immediate revolution in the manners and taste of our people would be manifestly absurd, but it is entirely safe to say that the theater could, in the matters which are apparently so important in life, yet which mean so much, be an important factor in molding at least the externals of our national character. This means, however, that, busy as we are, we should give the theater a more important place in our thoughts and in our scheme of popular education than that at present allotted to it. Nor is the claim that the theater might be made a teacher of improvement in the minor things of life the only one that can be made for it. It might be made the medium for the elevation of the popular taste in all the arts and in literature and even for the inculcation of the principles of lofty thought and right living. It may seem strange that a people so clever as we are have neglected this potent influence for good and have regarded it only as a toy for our amusement, to be shaped and fashioned by the toy merchant solely with a view to making it catch the fancy and therefore become a salable and profitable article of merchandise. But, as we are a busy and, on the whole, a self-satisfied people, beyond our pursuits and ambitions we look only for the amusements which shall be the least burden to us. —J. S. Metcalfe in Atlantic.

"PELE'S HAIR."

A Product of the Gigantic Hawaiian Volcano Mauna Loa.

Mauna Loa, the gigantic Hawaiian volcano, has two craters or openings, one of which, Kilauea, is the largest active volcanic crater in the world. The mountain is 14,100 feet high and Kilauea is situated on the eastern side about 4,000 feet above the level of the sea. This marvelous crater is really a vast lake of boiling lava which rises and falls continually by the action of subterranean fires. In tossing to and fro like a troubled sea of molten metal the lava is dashed against the cliffs and hardens there in the form of long glassy filaments, gigantic knobs, miniature trees and in imitation of grass, leaves, etc.

Another form of glassy filament to be found along the shores of this fiery lake is in the shape of queer bunches and tufts of lava made up of an aggregation of vitreous threads which the natives call "Pele's hair." Pele being the goddess to whom the mountain is dedicated. These glassy threads appear to be caused by the passage of steam through the molten lava. In so doing small particles in the shape of bubble-like balloons are thrown into the air, leaving a tail behind like a comet. When the scene of these miniature steam eruptions is near a rock or shore all solid and cool surfaces are found covered with bunches of "Pele's hair." This "hair" was formerly used in mystic native ceremonies.

Canal Locks in China.

The contrivances for locks along the Grand canal in China are very simple—stout boards, with ropes at each end of them, being let down edgewise over each other through grooves in the stone piers. Boats are dragged through and up the sluices by means of ropes communicating with large windlasses worked on the bank, which haul them safely, but very slowly. Artificial basins were hollowed out in the banks of the canal at these locks, where boats might anchor securely. The sluices which keep the necessary level are of very rude construction. Soldiers and workmen are constantly in attendance at these sluices, and the danger to boats is diminished by coils of rope hung down at the sides to break the force of possible blows.—Technical World Magazine.

A Phenomenon.

A handy word much misused is "phenomenon." The London Globe once heard a man explaining its meaning to a friend. He did it as follows: "Now, if you see a cow in a meadow," he said didactically, "that's not a phenomenon. It's a pretty animal and what not, but it ain't a phenomenon. And if you see a thistle in a meadow that ain't a phenomenon. Nor if you see a lark in the meadow that ain't a phenomenon. It's a pretty bird and what not, but it ain't a phenomenon. But if you was to see that cow sitting on that thistle and singing like that lark that would be a phenomenon." His friend said, yes, he saw now.

The Bull of Perilous.

Perillus of Athens is said to have invented for Phalaris, tyrant of Agrigento, 570 B. C., a brazen bull which opened on the side to admit victims who were to be roasted by the fire which was built underneath. The dying groans of the sufferers resembled closely the roaring of a mad bull. Phalaris greatly admired the invention and by way of test roasted the inventor first. Later the populace rose in rebellion and burned Phalaris.—Philadelphia North American.

WHIPS OF FLAME.

Picturesque and Puzzling Fire Dance of the Indians.

Mysterious are many of the ways of the red man. Dr. Matthews of Washington gave an interesting account of a fire dance which he was fortunate enough to witness in the far west. The spectators were seated about a large open space, in the center of which burned a ruddy fire.

Suddenly sounded a loud blowing of buffalo horns, mingled with a strange cry like the call of a sand hill crane. Nearer and nearer it came, and then there bounded into the circle ten men, naked to the waist and bearing long bundles of shredded cedar bark.

Round and round the fire danced the little procession, chanting and waving the flexible fagots. After some time the leader abruptly stopped and lighted his fagot of bark. The others followed his example.

Now began a wild race. At first the Indians kept close, spitting upon each other's back a substance supposed to have medicinal virtue. Soon they ran without concert, the long, brilliant streamers of flame flaring behind them. As they sped over the ground round the circle they applied the fiery brands to the bodies of themselves and comrades. Not a man turned as the vigorous, burning blows descended on his naked back. Sometimes they would seize the brand in their hands and rub it over their flesh as if it were a sponge and they were giving themselves a bath of flames. On they danced and whipped and rubbed until all seemed a dazzling ring of fire to the onlookers.

And were there sore and blistered backs the next day under the carelessly worn blankets? Apparently not, for Dr. Matthews saw and talked with the actors directly after the dance, and they seemed to experience no discomfort.

His explanation of the secret does not include the mysterious compound which the Indians spat upon each other. That, he thinks, was probably of no value. But cedar bark ignited at a low temperature, and the white earth with which the men were thickly coated was an excellent nonconductor.—Youth's Companion.

A VENERABLE FICTION.

The Ceremony of Carrying the Purse in the House of Lords.

When the lord chancellor enters the house of lords to preside over its deliberations he is accompanied by his "purse bearer." This functionary, however, does not carry the purse of the lord chancellor, which would be a weighty responsibility, as his lordship draws a salary of £10,000 a year. The purse the "purse bearer" solemnly carries as, arrayed in court dress, he precedes the lord chancellor to and from the house of lords is a gorgeous satchel embroidered with the royal arms and other heraldic devices in white and gold and lined with the richest silk. It is supposed to contain the great seal. As a matter of fact, that emblem of a mighty sovereignty is never in the satchel. If it were, the responsibility of the "purse bearer" would be greatly increased indeed than if he had to bear a purse that carried a salary of £10,000 a year.

The ceremony of carrying the purse in the house of lords is but one of the many venerable fictions which play a picturesque part in the parliamentary procedure. The purse is placed on the woolsack. It indicates that the lord chancellor is in possession of the great seal and therefore entitled to perform his duties as speaker of the house of lords.—London Globe.

THREE WAYS TO SUBDUCE.

A Story of Buddha and the Trainer of Elephants.

From Hindu tales that have come through the Chinese, who give us most of our Indian records—the rishtis were dreamers and not recorders—we have this story of Buddha:

The lord demanded one day of an elephant trainer what were the means he employed to subdue his beasts.

"Three," said the mahout. "One applies to the mouth a hook of iron, which he attaches to breast clasp, and the elephant cannot lift his neck. Then one gives less and less food till thin and weak and finally beats."

"And what does one accomplish by these means?" asked he-of-the-yellow-light.

"The croquet de fer serves to overcome the resistance of the head; the deprivation of food and drink, the violence of the body; the stick subdues the spirit. After this, all is easy."

The nimble-bronze-one said:

"I also have three ways to subdue. First, by perfect sincerity I control what goes forth from the mouth; by affection and charity I harmonize the irregularities of the body; by inward vibration of thought I calm the spirit. Did you ever think of trying these on the elephant?"—Everybody's Magazine.

FAMILY HISTORY.

Universal Interest in Knowing What Our Forefathers Did.

"Why don't you trace your family history?" The common reply to this question is summed up in the words, "If I knew how to go about it I should enjoy doing so." For few are the individuals who do not at times feel a longing to open the book of the past and read the records of their ancestors. Edward Everett felt that longing when he wrote, "There is no man of any culture who does not take some interest in what was done by his forefathers." The desire to trace the descent of one's family and to transmit the record to one's successors is as old as life—a strand in the binding cord of filial love.

So prevalent has the desire been among all nations to which either history or tradition extends that it has been regarded by many writers as an instinct in human nature. Observing its universality, the historian Hume began his history of England with these lines: "The curiosity entertained by all nations of inquiry into the exploits and adventures of their ancestors commonly excites a regret that the history of the ages should be involved in obscurity, uncertainty and tradition."—New England Magazine.

How to Roast the Succulent Oyster.

Select large oysters and have them scrubbed thoroughly, then place them in the oven in a large tin with the round side of the shells down, so that when they open the liquor will not be lost. As soon as they do open remove the upper shell, sprinkle them with salt, pepper and chopped parsley, add a little butter and serve hot as possible on a bed of water cress. Oysters served in this way make an excellent first course at dinner if accompanied by thin slices of brown bread and butter.

A Counter Attraction.

A recent visitor to Beaconsfield churchyard asked a middle-aged native of the village to be directed to the graves of Burke and Waller. The man said he had no recollection of any such persons having been buried there. "But," he added, "you see that little chemist's shop over there? That's the shop where Devereux, the trunk murderer man, used to be an apprentice."

Not There.

"Judge," said Mrs. Starvem to the magistrate, who had recently come to board with her, "I'm particularly anxious to have you try this chicken soup." "I have tried it," replied the magistrate, "and my decision is that the chicken has proved an alibi."—Exchange.

Startling Example Showing the Danger of His Calling.

Of all causes of boiler deterioration, says H. P. Watson in the Engineering Magazine, by far the most numerous are those arising from the presence of scale and its twin sister, incrustation; but broken braces can give an engineer a very bad quarter of an hour. A steamer plying on the great lakes many years ago carried very high steam for those days—fifty pounds per square inch on a very large and light shell. The engineer on watch was down in the fire room looking around when a loud bang came from one of the boilers. Instantly divining the cause, he looked questioning at the head watch tender, who replied, "Be jabbers, I hope that ain't next door neighbor to the one that let go on the other watch."

That startled the engineer, for he had not been told of the other broken brace. He at once stopped the blowers, opened the doors, shut the stop valve between boilers and put on the feed pumps as rapidly as they could go so as to reduce pressure. The deck department was notified that it would be necessary to stop, and they hauled to one side of the channel and waited for the coming up of another boat in the same line passed a few miles back. The passengers (there were 1,000 on board) and mails were transferred, and the boat returned with the injured boiler out of business.

Upon examination the next day it was found that three braces had given way at or near one another, two letting go simultaneously apparently, and that the precautions taken against a disaster (which would have been terrible if it had occurred) were none too soon. This was merely an episode within the everyday duty of an engineer and carries its own warning.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Mrs. Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

Why?

West Medford, with a population less than half as large as Winchester, has three mail carriers, while Winchester has but four. Postmaster Richardson has done his best to get an additional man, but has been unable to do so. Two days a week he employs a man and pays for his services out of his own pocket.

Made Scapegoats Of.

The Bank Commissioners are made the scapegoats of the Legislature and the lobby. Had the commissioners been given the authority they asked for from the Legislature some years ago such institutions as the Provident Securities Co. and the Italian banks would not have been allowed to do business in this State. The commissioners were, however, weak, and their removal was justified.

Change Likely to be Popular.

The change inaugurated by the Boston & Northern Street Railroad Co. whereby cars of the Arlington-Winchester line are to go through hourly to Wakefield, will be of considerable convenience to Winchester people. The change went into effect Monday. Instead of all cars going to Reading as formerly, now every other trip will be made to that town leaving the centre of Winchester at 35 minutes past the hour. The car that goes to Wakefield will leave here at five minutes past the hour, so that the schedule between Winchester and Arlington and Stoneham will remain the same. The reason for the change is the light travel between Stoneham and Reading and the more heavy patronage between Stoneham and Wakefield. Those persons having occasion to pass over the more travelled route to Wakefield will be greatly convenienced.

Greater Boston Scheme Again.

With more lives than that of the proverbial cat, the greater Boston scheme is again before the Legislature. There is only one other measure that annually comes before that body that antedates it and that is woman suffrage. The greater Boston measure is one that looks solely to the political reformation of Boston, although the promoters do not say so in plain language.
In order to accomplish this, these well intentioned gentlemen are willing to surrender to the experiment the loss of the individuality of the cities and towns within the Metropolitan district with no compensating advantages. The graft and rotten politics of Boston are not an encouragement to the scheme, and as a result the people living in the suburbs are more set than ever against becoming a part of Boston. The bill that was introduced in the Legislature last week can be found in another column.

cause of the small attendance at the hearing held in the Selectmen's room recently.

The citizens are interested in the outcome of the investigations of this committee, but the great mass of them did not feel as if they were conversant enough with the conduct of town business to appear and offer intelligent suggestions wherein improvements might be made. It is easy to suggest this or that change, but unless they can be backed up by practical suggestions, the committee are given no information of real value.
There is no doubt but what the committee have acquired a pretty good insight into the manner in which the town does its business at the present time, and that their report will be read with a great deal of interest, not only by the town officials, but by the citizens at large. Furthermore, whatever the nature of their report, it will be accepted, and whatever recommendations they may make adopted for this investigation has been thorough and absolutely free from bias, and solely for the best interests of the town.

One of these days it will begin to snow and by morning the earth will be covered with a beautiful white fit out the family today? Goodness knows, Rubbers

Oil Painting for Prince School.

The School Committee received this week a handsome half length oil painting of the late Hon. Frederick O. Prince, which has been presented to the School
Department of the town by his children.
This picture was copied from a painting of Mr. Prince, and is handsomely framed and finished. The original painting was made during his residence in Winchester.

The picture is at present in the Superintendent's office at the High school, where it will remain for a few weeks, that it may be viewed by any so desiring. The office will be open for such to anyone every school day afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock.
The picture will later be hung in the Prince school.

Hon. Frederick O. Prince, after whom the Prince school was named, was a former Mayor of Boston and resident of this town. He was a member of the first School Committee after the incorporation of the town in 1850, and the first Representative to the State Legislature from Winchester. Two of the donors of the picture are well known citizens of Boston—Frederick H. Prince, the banker, and Dr. Morton Prince, a prominent physician.

At the annual meeting of the Stock holders of the American Graphophone Company, of which the Columbia Phonograph Company is the sole sales agent, held at Bridgeport, Conn., on the 5th instant, the report of the President was received and showed not only a sound and healthy condition of the Company, but a continuation in growth and enlargement. In view of the rapid growth of the business and the constantly increasing demand for the Company's output making a further increase in capital desirable, it was voted, upon the recommendation of the Board of Directors, to increase the capital stock of the Company from $5,000,000, which had consisted of $2,500,000 preferred and $2,500,000 common stock, to $10,000,000 consisting of $2,500,000 preferred and $7,500,000 common stock. It was also voted to change the par value of the stock from $10 to $100 per share, and to increase the number of directors to seventeen.

is considering raising the membership

Safe and Sane Investment.

The following notice of a real estate sale appeared in the Brooklyn
Daily Eagle Dec. 20, '05:

$170,000 for Jamaica Farm.

Another large sale of real estate has been made to the Archer, Faber, Llewellyn and Lewis syndicate in the western section of the town of Jamaica, known as Union Course. The syndicate has purchased about twenty acres of land south of and adjoining Forest Park, for $170,000. The sellers are Philip Steingotten and Charles Stutz, who purchased the property from the Wyckoff estate for $6,000 an acre and have now sold it for $8,500 per acre. This land is near some which the same syndicate sold at auction on Election Day, making about $70,000 profit, doubling the amount invested.

The above tract of land is within the Borough limits of Brooklyn and was bought by myself and two others for $100,000. We made a deposit of $5,000 upon signing the contract, and before taking title sold the property for $120,000, as stated above.

Owing to the building of three new bridges over the East River, and two tunnels under it, which will give the people of Brooklyn abundant and rapid transit facilities, there is a great rise in value of real estate. A small syndicate is now being formed in Winchester. Subscribers will elect three to represent them. I will be at home until January 1st, and will give full particulars to all who inquire.

"Veronique" has the distinction of having had a run of 500 consecutive nights at the Apollo Theatre, London, and was brought to this country in October where it has been running at the Broadway Theatre, New York, ever since. The piece was adapted from the French by Henry Hamilton, and the music is by that distinguished composer, Andre Messager, conductor at the Covent Garden, London. Miss Ruth Vincent, the star, who was seen in this country last season with "The Medal and the Maid" will enact the title role, that of "Veronique." Mr. Edwards has surrounded Miss Vincent with a strong and capable cast including Miss Kitty Gordon, Miss Valli, Miss Lena Matland, Miss Emmie Santer, Mr. Lawrence Res, Mr. Aubrey Fitzgerald, Mr. Ralph Nairn, Mr. John Malcolm and Mr. John LeHay.

Matinees will be given Saturday of each week at which performance the curtain will rise at 2 o'clock sharp. The curtain at the evening performances will rise at 8 o'clock sharp.

Castle Square Theatre.

The production of "Madame Sans Gene" at the Castle Square Theatre next week will bring the name of Sardou again into local prominence. It is scarcely more than a few weeks since his "Cleopatra" and his "Diplomacy" were brought out at the Castle Square, and so warmly were they welcomed that there can be no mistake in presenting a third play of his within so brief a period. "Madame Sans Gene" is one of Sardou's most recent plays. It is a romantic and historical comedy, and with the great Napoleon as its central figure, it has attracted widespread attention. Other great personages of the time surround him during the course of the play, in which there are many strongly dramatic, as well as frequent comic situations.

"Madame Sans Gene" was played here by Sir Henry Irving and Ellen Terry, and other stars, but never before by a stock company. At the Castle Square next week, every scenic detail will be carefully attended to, and the cast will be as strong as possible. Napoleon will be played by Mr. Waldron, and the title heroine by Lillian Kemble.

Hockey.

Last Saturday afternoon the Newtowne Athletic Club played the Winchester Hockey club and were defeated by a score of 2 to 0. Newtowne's forwards and cover point were from the crack Stone School team, among them was "Don" Cutler formerly of Winchester.

The work of Gifford of Winchester in goal was fine and he saved the game for Winchester by not letting the opponents drive the puck through the line. Thurbur played well for Newtowne. The score:
Newtowne—Hollombe; Thurbur; Wittenmore; Brown; Snow; Saul; Taylor; Jordan.
Winchester—Gifford; Goads; Nowell; Russell; Referee—Richardson; Umpires—Hovey; Fuller. Time: Two twenty minute periods.

Calumet Club Notes.

A smoke talk will be held at the club on Saturday evening, January 20, when Rev. William J. Lawrence will talk on Japan. Mr. Lawrence's talk will be an unusually interesting from the fact that his knowledge of Japan and its people has been gained by a number of year's residence in that country.

J. HERBERT DWINELL,
President of the Calumet Club.

Ladies' night will be observed at the club on Tuesday evening, January 23. The entertainment will be given by Mr. Frederick W. Bancroft in old ballads. This will be followed by dancing and light refreshments.

New names posted this week for membership to the club are Frederick B. Reynolds and Marshall C. Bouve.

George W. Purinton has had a magnificent moose head hung in the billiard hall. The head has a spread of 43 inches and 14 points. For several years it has hung in the Hub billiard parlors in Boston. In addition to this head, three other heads which formerly hung in the hall of the club house, have been placed in the billiard room, as well as the clock, which formerly hung in the president's office.

Experiments are being made with 100 candle power electric lamps in the club hall in place of the four 30 candle power lamps which are now on each chandelier. New glass shades are also being placed on all the lamps.

Reciprocity in Canadian Furs.

In connection with the agitation for reciprocity with Canada it is interesting to note that while Canadian raw furs are admitted into the United States duty free, last year was the first to see a Canadian fur house establish a branch in this country. The fur trade has been closely associated with the early history of Canada, and for more than 200 years the Hudson's Bay Company contributed a large portion of the world's supply of furs. The climatic conditions of Northern and Eastern Canada produce many of the finest furs known to commerce. The first Canadian house to take advantage of reciprocity in furs, although long established in Canada, is the Dunlap, Cooke Company, Limited, 167 Tremont street, which is incorporated under the laws of Massachusetts.

John J. McAttee Married.

Mr. John J. McAttee, one of the most popular employees of Kelley & Hawes, and known to almost every family in town as a driver of their parcel delivery wagon, was married on Wednesday evening of this week to Miss Martha Power of this town.

The ceremony took place at the parsonage residence at 730 o'clock and was performed by Fr. Henry J. Madden. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the groom, No. 31 Nelson street, followed by a reception.

The bride was dressed in a gown of white voile over white silk and carried brides' roses. The bridesmaid was Miss Jessie Camera of Danvers, who wore green silk muslin and carried pink roses. The maids of honor were Misses May and Kitty Harrold and Miss Grace Sullivan, who wore blue and white and carried large bouquets. Mr. James Boston of Long Island City, N.Y., cousin to the groom, was the best man.

After the wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. McAttee entered the parlor to the wedding march, which was played by Miss Ruth Hannagan of Waltham. They then received over 200 of their friends, who wished them every happiness and joy. During the evening Miss Eva Stowers gave several piano selections and at the close of the reception the couple left on their wedding trip. They will reside at No. 31 Nelson street upon their return.

The beautiful presents of cut glass and silver of every description, testified to the good will of Mr. and Mrs. McAttee's many friends. Among the gifts was a handsome upholstered rocker from the local order of Pilgrim Fathers, a mahogany table and several rugs from the Pilgrim Degree Staff, a sideboard from the employees of Kelley & Hawes, as well as a substantial check from the same firm, a large picture from the Supreme Trustee of the Pilgrims and a clock from the Supreme Governor. Mr. McAttee presented his wife with a mahogany upright piano.

Friends of the couple had made arrangements to carry off the bride, but Mr. McAttee fooled the crowd. Five men were to seize her as she came down stairs, put her into a hack and drive off, leaving the groom to find her as best he could. He was wise to their intentions, so both parties descended a ladder from the second story of the house, jumped into a hack waiting on Washington street and drove off on their honeymoon. The chaperoned tormentors admitted that it was a sick move on the part of Mr. and Mrs. McAttee.

A Treasure From the South Seas

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1904, by Charles W. Hooke

"M. TERRY would like to see you, sir," said the office boy, and then, perceiving that the name conveyed no meaning to his chief, he added: "Tinker Terry. That's what he says. Tell Mr. Austin it's the 'Tinker'."

Austin blinked at the boy with the manner of one who is waking from a dream, and, in fact, he had been recalled from thoughts scarce nearer to reality than dreamland is.

"Tinker Terry is dead," said he slowly. "He was drowned two years ago last April in the middle of the Pacific ocean."

"He looks it, sir," responded the boy, with a timid grin.

"Send him in," said Austin.

Presently there appeared at the door of the private office a man who had indeed been drowned. Fathoms deep had he gone down amid the whirlpools of this world, and the engulfing billows had sung in his ears.

He was short of stature and of a starved leanness; his worn, shiny black clothes hung in folds and drooped as if they were wet; a weather beaten hat was in his hand, and the hair of his head was sleek on top, like a swimmer's, falling over his ears in streaks of black and gray, though the man was under thirty.

He closed the door hastily behind him and, without waiting for a welcome, drew a chair up to Austin's desk and began to pour forth a wild "odyssey" of the south seas. He had a fiery gift of narrative style, and Austin's natural dread of what are called "hard luck stories" vanished in the inside of one minute. His interest took hold upon the tale; he followed it with eagerness, even with envy, for there lurked in him a great unsatisfied appetite for adventure.

"But what was the object of all this?" he demanded when Terry paused. "What the deuce were you after out there? Why were you so anxious to reach this island of—what do you call it?"

"Halelui," said Terry. "That's its name. And now I'll show you what I was after."

He drew from his pocket a little metal box which had once contained wax matches, but was now full of irregular fragments of a yellowish white substance like the dried root of some plant.

"This is my treasure," said he. "I faced fifty deaths to get it, and, by jingo, I succeeded. There's a ton of it stored in San Francisco in my name."

"A ton of it?" gasped Austin.

"Oh, I can get as much more as we need," said Terry. "I've made all the arrangements."

"But what's it for? What can you do with it?"

Terry nervously selected a bit of the root and put it into his mouth, and throughout the subsequent conversation he chewed it as if it were his soul's sustenance. But he did not delay to answer Austin's question. Between them on the leaf of the desk he laid a book which had once been a handsome product of the printer's art, but was now battered and torn and shrunken with many writtings. Austin recognized it for a volume of south sea sketches by an author so illustrious that his name must be suppressed in this affair. Terry opened the book at a place where a leaf was folded and pointed to a passage that ran as follows:

"THIS IS MY TREASURE."

"It is not in the nature of this world's governance that an Isle should be so blessed as Halelui above all its fellows and not have an appropriate curse to balance the account. This little land of plenty in the barren sea is no safe residence for strangers. It is the ancestral home and present headquarters of the plague of rheumatism, and, though you shall have found yourself immune in every other corner of the earth, here the invisible rack of torture waits for you, and within one week you shall be stretched upon it howling. The natives indeed protect themselves by the use of a simple root which grows in vast abundance somewhere in the interior. Its secret is preserved from visitors and from resident whites as well. These must buy from the chief, whose charge is moderate, considering the possibilities of extortion which lie in such a monopoly. As for the virtues of the remedy I can testify from personal experience. An hour suffices for the cure, and a handful of the root will guarantee immunity from pain for many weeks. The natives call it kanitu, a coined word replacing an older name now out of use."

Terry had been following Austin's eyes from line to line of the paragraph, and at the precise moment when the end was reached he cried:

"What do you think of that? Did you ever hear of such an endorsement? How has this jewel lain so long buried? Man, do you realize the worth of it?"

Austin closed the book and for some seconds contemplated the author's name, half effaced, upon the cover.

"I love this man like a brother," said he, "yet he was no physician."

"Physician he hanged!" exclaimed Terry impatiently. "I'd rather have the patient's word than the doctor's any day. He says he was cured. That's what the public wants to know."

"Do you mean to say that you're going to try to put this stuff on the market?"

"Am I?" rejoined Terry in a sort of subdued shriek as he sprang to his feet.

"Man, do you fancy that I like to be poor? Is this my taste in the matter of attire? Ha, ha! And, besides," he added, with a change of tone pathetic and absurd—"besides, I am in love."

Austin drew a deep breath and seemed about to say something serious. Then he checked the utterance and began to laugh silently and with increasing enjoyment. Terry sat down, but was too nervous to sit still.

"What's the joke?" he demanded when he could restrain himself no longer.

"I'm in love, too," responded Austin. "And her father has the rheumatism. Marvelous coincidence!"

Terry's eyes blazed.

"You give him some of this," said he. "If the man has any gratitude!"

"It's not a question of gratitude," interrupted Austin. "It's a matter of propriety. My pecuniary situation does not warrant me in falling in love with a young lady who has been favored with all the advantages of wealth. I am generally supposed to be a sharer in this fairly prosperous business, but the fact is that I am only the salaried manager on a yearly contract. I haven't $10,000 of my own in the world; so there's the end of it."

"You put your $10,000 into kanitu," said Terry, with dire earnestness, "and you'll have a fortune within two years."

He supported this assertion with the most moving arguments, but Austin was obdurate. He would not risk his $10,000 on kanitu, nor would he consent to experiment with that remedy in the case of the gentleman whom he dreamed of calling father-in-law. This latter refusal Terry seemed to take harder than the other, and he said it was downright heartless of Austin to deprive a sufferer of his only earthly hope.

"Just tell me who he is and give me his address," pleaded Terry, "and I'll make a new man of him."

"Not for gold and precious stones," said Austin. "And at this Terry abruptly took his leave after heroically declining a loan of money."

In the evening of the second day thereafter Austin called at the home of the queen of his heart and upon being shown into the drawing room found himself alone with her father, Mr. Douglass Harland, who was pacing the floor and chewing as if for a wager.

"How are you, Austin?" he cried, with amazing cordiality. "Glad to see you. How's your friend, Mr. Terry?"

Austin paused, speechless, and his gaze was so intent upon Harland's jaw that it sufficed for a question.

"Yes; that's it," said Harland—"kanitu. By George, sir, this stuff is heaven's best gift to man!"

"You don't really believe that it's done you any good?"

"Believe?" cried Harland, and he tossed his arms high. "If I'd done that yesterday morning," he added, "the pain would have killed me. My dear fellow, I'm going to chew this stuff all the time. I'm going to learn to chew it in my sleep. You did me a good turn when you sent Terry to my office. He's—"

"When I did what?"

"He's a bright fellow in his way," continued Harland, not noting the interruption. "He's got a good thing, and he knows how to push it. Of course I understand your position. Terry said that you couldn't go in deeper than $10,000 and that you didn't think it was enough. Your view of the matter, as Terry disclosed it to me, showed sound business sense. It gave me a very favorable impression of your judgment. As you told him, the game ought to be pushed hard at the start."

"I never authorized Terry!"

"Certainly not," said Harland hastily. "You never authorized him to tell me all this, but you know the man. He's honest and simple hearted as a child. He just babbed the whole story right out. He said that you saw the merit of the thing as clear as possible and that it was wholly a question of capital wish you."

"But I didn't say—"

"Wait," said Harland, with an appropriate gesture which seemed to give him positive delight because it didn't hurt him. "Just grant me the floor, for I've got only one minute. Mrs. Harland and I are going out, and the carriage is at the door. This is what I want to say: Of course this kanitu business isn't big enough for me to give it my personal attention, but if you want to drop in your little ten thousand and run the thing I'll put up the balance of the capital, whatever, we may figure out that it ought to be. We'll talk that over tomorrow. Goodbye for the present."

And he shook hands vigorously and skipped away as lightly as a boy. Austin remained in a dazed condition, from which he was unable to emerge even in the presence of Celia Harland.

In his apartments, however, and under the calming influence of good tobacco he was able to analyze the situation, and he beheld it in three branches:

First.—Terry is the son of the father of lies, but he meant to do me a kindness. Shall I betray him and wreck his hopes?

Second.—Mr. Harland has been stricken with the fortunate delusion that I am a good business man—the only kind of man he likes or understands. If I tell him the facts and reject this scheme he will think I am a donkey. Can I risk that?

HE CAUGHT TERRY BY THE SHOULDERS.

Third.—Mr. Harland has looked into this game, and he believes that it will win. His opinion is worth two of mine. To go into this with him and prove my ability under his eyes and drive this enterprise to success is the short road to heaven on earth for me. Shall I ever have such another chance?

No one will be in doubt about the decision which Austin made from the facts of the case as stated under those three headings. Within a week the partnership was formed, the money banked, the game begun. Within a month there were indications of success. Terry's advertising matter had begun to appear and to excite phenomenal interest. Within a year a flourishing business had been built up. And one evening in his bachelor quarters Austin announced his engagement and accepted the cordial congratulations of his friend Terry, now changed almost beyond recognition and clothed to the edge of fashion.

"I tell you, my son," said Terry, "there's no limit to a brave man's hopes in this big world. 'Nil desperandum'—there's the only motto. And if any man has a right to bear it I have. You've never realized, you've never understood, what I went through. Two years—two years, by jingo—I struggled to reach that rascally island and never saw it. No, sir; I was never within 500 miles of it."

"Certainly not. At the end of all that cruising I landed in San Francisco with only a sailor's wages in my pocket and my hopes no nearer than they had been at the start. What did I do? Despair? Not much! I could not get this confounded kanitu. Very well. I said to myself that I would not be beaten. I made the stuff."

"Made it?"

"Yes, sir. Listen to me. Ten years ago there'd been a great rheumatism cure on the market, but it failed because the proprietors didn't know how to advertise. Now, I knew how to advertise, but I hadn't any cure. Very good. I raised a hundred dollars—beggared it—and bought the formula of Hawkins' Old Home Remedy, the best thing that ever was. I experimented with a kind of snakeroot and discovered that a little stick of it the size of a cigarette would soak up near a tablespoonful of the Old Home Remedy and that the stuff worked better taken that way than out of the spoon. By jingo, it knocked rheumatism silly!"

Austin strode across the room and caught Terry by the shoulder with a grip that nearly broke his bones.

"Do you mean to tell me that I have bunked both the public and Douglass Harland?"

"Bunked!" cried Terry. "Why, man, you're a public benefactor. From first to last, have we heard of a single case where our remedy has failed? No, sir, we haven't."

"But, Mr. Harland? How can I tell him? I have cheated him. I have stolen his daughter. I—"

"My dear fellow, Mr. Harland knows all about it—has known from the start. I had to tell him or he wouldn't come in. 'If you've got to depend upon a cannibal chief for these goods,' said he in our first interview, 'you'll get stuck. Your supply is beyond your control. It's a fatal weakness.' Then I told him the truth. 'That's all right,' said he, 'but don't mention it to Austin. He's got one of those New England consciences. They don't prevent men from going into games like this, but they make them uncomfortable. He'll do better work if he doesn't know.' So I've kept mum."

He drew himself up to his full height of five feet four inches and tapped himself proudly upon the bosom of his immaculate dress shirt. Austin sank into a chair, covered his face with his hands and laughed.

Christmas in England.

When Cromwell ruled England he issued an edict against all festivities at Christmas. The festival was altogether abolished, and the displaying of holly and mistletoe and other emblems of the happy time was held to be seditious. In 1644 the long parliament commanded that Christmas day should be observed as a strict fast, when all people should think over and deplore the great sin of which they and their forefathers had been guilty in making merry at that season. This act so provoked the people that on the following natal day the law was violently resisted in many places. Though these scenes were disgraceful, they served their purpose and put an end to an unjust order. When Charles II. regained the throne the populace once more made Christmastide a time of rejoicing.

The Great Bed of Ware.

In Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" Sir Toby Belch urges Sir Andrew Aguecheek to pen a challenge and to put in it "as many lies as will lie in the sheet of paper, although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware." This enormous bed, which was a wonder in Shakespeare's time and still exists in Ware, is seven feet six inches high and ten feet nine inches square, so that twelve people can be comfortably in it. Beautifully carved, it is a splendid specimen of antique furniture, dating from the days of Queen Elizabeth. This wonderful bed is naturally an object of curiosity and interest to many visitors. In the same room there hung a pair of horns, upon which all strangers formerly were sworn.

Evils of Anxiety.

Anxiety is the poison of human life. It is the parent of many sins and of more miseries. In a world where everything is doubtful, where you may be disappointed and be biased in disappointment, what means this restless stir and commotion of mind? Can your solicitude alter the course or unravel the intricacy of human events? Can your curiosity pierce through the cloud which the Supreme Being hath made impenetrable to mortal eyes? To provide against every important danger by the employment of the most promising means is the office of wisdom, but at this point wisdom stops.—Selected.

The Simple Life.

For a cultured person to relinquish his wonted mode of life, to dwell in a three roomed cottage, to be clad in corduroy or flannel and to fare sumptuously every day on beans, cabbage soup and black bread would not be a return to the simple but to the sordid life. One can live a simple life just as well in a castle as in a cottage.—Race Builder.

GETS PLENTY OF LIGHT.

One Hotel Guest Who Travels Prepared For Emergencies.

"I called on a friend at one of the New York hotels the other day," said a man, "and found him in a room that was far, far away from daylight. There was one electric light, which did not make the apartment lustrous. We had some papers to look over, and I instinctively moved over near the air shaft window.

"I can do better than that," he said, going to his satchel and taking out an electric bulb. "I carry this around with me for just such occasions," he laughed. "That one does well enough for transient guests who are not in their rooms except to sleep, but sometimes I need more than sixteen candlepower, and I carry a thirty-two."

"He unscrewed the sixteen, and in a jiffy had on his thirty-two. The current was there, all right, and we had no more trouble about too little light. Later he carried me a large gas tip which he showed along for hotels that used gas instead of electric light. This needed a pair of pliers in addition, but he had them in his small box, and he told me it was a mighty poor quality of gas and a powerful low pressure that wouldn't respond with the goods when he put on his accommodation tip. There is nothing grafty about that little scheme possibly, but just the same he is getting something the landlord is paying for."—New York Press.

ST. PETERSBURG.

The Terrors of Its Climate in the Spring and Autumn.

"There is something repulsive in the climate of St. Petersburg in the early spring and autumn," says a writer, "when the thermometer often falls 30 degrees in a few hours, when the roads are ankle deep in snow brot or mud, when the winds blow raw and cold from every quarter of the compass and the quick moving droskies shower the abominations of the roads impartially upon noble and peasant. It is no consolation to the visitor to know that the Neva is sealed by ice early in November or late in October. Long indeed before the frost king has stalked down to the latitude of St. Petersburg the lordly river is completely blocked. Great ice sheets from stormy Ladoga float down the current. They crash against the mighty buttresses of the bridges, cling to the banks and gradually accumulate until the whole length of the river, which unites the greatest lake in Europe with the gulf of Finland, is completely choked. The ice is reared higgledy piggledy at every conceivable angle. It is a strange sight, this broad stretch of water, impassable and icebound while the temperature of the surrounding country is often many degrees above freezing point."

PELICAN ISLAND.

Home of All the Pelicans of the East Coast of Florida.

In that long, narrow lagoon on the east coast of Florida known as Indian river there is a muddy islet three or four acres in extent. Originally it doubtless did not differ from hundreds of similar neighboring islets, but, for some reason past finding out, this islet, and this alone, forms the nesting resort, the home, of all the pelicans of the Indian river, if not, indeed, of the east coast of Florida. The brown pelican, unlike its white cousin, nests normally in low trees and bushes, and there is evidence that when the original pelican colonists landed on the islet which now bears their name it was well grown with black and red mangroves, in which the birds placed their scaffolding of sticks. Exceptionally low temperature and high water—perhaps also excessive use by the birds, which sometimes build as many as seven nests in a single mangrove—have killed tree after tree, until at present only three serviceable trees remain. Still the birds come back, the impelling motive which prompts them to return to this particular spot being evidently stronger than that which induced them to nest in trees.—Frank M. Chapman in Century.

Two Kinds of Ambition.

Men have two kinds of ambition, one for dollar making, the other for life making. Some turn all their ability, education, health and energy toward the first of these, dollar making, and call the result success. Others turn them toward the second—into character, usefulness, helpfulness—life making, and the world sometimes calls them failures, but history calls them successes. No price is too great to pay for an untarnished name.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

His Usury.

"Now, Willie," said the boy's mother, "before you go to sleep you must try to recall any little sin you committed during the day and be truly sorry for it." "Yes, ma'am," replied Willie, "I guess I was guilty of usury, for one thing." "Usury?" "Yes; I found a nickel and used it."—Philadelphia Press.

A Rule of Life.

In all the affairs of life let it be your great care not to hurt your mind or offend your judgment. And this rule, if observed carefully in all your department, will be a mighty security to you in your undertakings.—Epictetus.

Example.

One watch set right will do to set many by. One that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighborhood, and the same may be said of example.—Dilwin.

The good things of life are not to be had singly, but come to us with a mixture.—Lamb.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casco, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be some disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Phos. no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Pepsin, Pancreatin, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Send drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

The Whole Thing.

Jackson Park. What do you consider the two most important places in the world? Gotham—Oh, that's easy, of course—Jackson Park. Oh, don't say New York for one, Gotham—I wasn't going to. I was going to say "Manhattan and the Bronx," of course.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Making a Splash.

"I see that our friend has taken a hand in politics."

"I am not sure," answered Senator Sorghum, "whether he has taken a hand in it or merely put his foot in it."

There are an interesting lot of souvenirs on exhibition at Parker & Lane's coal office these days. The articles are of both historical and artistic value, and were gathered by Mr. Charles A. Lane on his recent visit to the Pennsylvania coal mines. Among the articles are several paper weights of coal, nicely rounded and polished, a cigar holder, made from a lump of coal, which stands about eight inches high upon a five inch square base made by a 17 year old boy at the mines, and a lump of coal from the original Franklin mine. In addition Mr. Lane has several curios gathered in the mines by himself. His description of the mines, miners and works is very interesting, and when given by this eloquent gentleman proves most entertaining.

In all grades the annual increase has been fixed at $50 instead of $25 as formerly. VOL. XXV. NO. 31.

WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, JANUARY 26, 1906.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

EDISON RATES ARE NOT TOO HIGH.

Customers Now Paying for What They Use, says the Company.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, General Offices 3 Head Place.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 22, 1906.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Dear Sir:

Referring again to the price of electric current in Winchester, it is undoubtedly true that the bills for electric light have in many cases recently been increased.

This is not because Edison rates are too high, but because customers are now paying for what they use instead of paying for 5 lights and using 25 as has been the case in many instances in the past. If customers had in the past paid for what they used they would have paid much more.

We have recently taken the accounts of 70 Winchester customers at random and compared the bills under Woburn and Edison rates and find that in 33 cases the Edison rates were higher and in 37 cases the Edison rates lower. In addition, of course, free lamps are supplied on the Edison rate.

The actual bills in the past for some of these customers have been less, but only for the reason that the customers were not paying for what they used.

Comparing the actual rates in some nearby towns, we take from the last report of the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners the following:

Belmont,	16 cents per K. W. H.
Reading,	13 1-2 cents per K. W. H.
Wakefield,	18 cents per K. W. H.
Malden,	16 cents per K. W. H.
Fitchburg,	19 cents per K. W. H.
Brookline,	18 cents per K. W. H.
Cambridge,	14 1-2 cents per K. W. H.
Hyde Park,	20 cents per K. W. H.

When it is noted that the highest Edison rate of 9-10 of a cent per lamp hour for the primary current is substantially 18 cents per K. W. H., that the use of the indicator in many cases gives the customers considerable portion of their current at 6-10 of a cent, or 12 cents per K. W. H., that this price includes free lamp renewals, that these lamp renewals are the very highest quality of lamps, giving 16 c. p. for less than 50 watts, while the ordinary lamp that has to be bought and paid for by the customers of municipal plants takes from 55 to 60 watts to give 13 candles, and that the Edison service is 24 hour service, while the service in most towns of the size of Winchester is not kept on during the day time, it must be acknowledged that the Edison rates are certainly very reasonable.

We think our Winchester customers want to pay for whatever they use in the future entirely independent of what may have happened in the past.

We repeat that if there has been any misrepresentation on the part of any of our agents or any misunderstanding on the part of any customer, that we shall be only too glad to take the matter up and straighten it out.

The calculation given in your recent issue is entirely unfair. If the calculations there given are repeated for 10 kilowatt hours instead of 60, all other figures remaining the same, it will be found that the Edison non-contract rate is much the cheapest and of course a customer may take either Edison contract or non-contract rate, whichever he finds the cheaper for him.

For the next month we will have a representative at 186 Main street, Winchester, every day between four and five o'clock who will be glad to meet any of our customers and make any explanations possible.

Very truly yours,

THE EDISON ILLUMINATING COMPANY.

Children's Day at the Fortnightly.

The "children's day," given by The Fortnightly at the town hall on Monday afternoon proved a great success. It was attended by about 350 guests and members, fully half of which number were children, many of whom were unattended, having used the privilege accorded them by presenting a member's card.

Mrs. Nathaniel M. Nichols, chairman of the Current Events Committee, had the afternoon in charge and arranged an interesting program for the children of a musical nature. This was composed of a piano solo by Master Harold Fultz and a violin solo by Miss Helen Ordway, accompanied on the piano by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Ordway. All three of the young artists gave their selections to the entire satisfaction and pleasure of all.

Following the music came a program of readings, poems and stories, given by Miss Frances Bent Dillingham, a well known magazine writer of children's stories and sketches. Miss Dillingham's contributions entertained the children immensely.

At 4:30 the small hall was opened to the children. Two large tables had been erected, from which all received a bountiful helping of ice cream and cake. Upon the tables a miniature picnic grove had been made, with real sand and trees and gypsies, birds, etc. The young folks were formed in line, and as they marched around to see the novelty, they were served with their refreshments by caterer Gray. Their happy faces told their appreciation of the care and interest taken to provide for their entertainment.

Dancing Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Abbott of Ravenscroft road entertained a large number of their friends at the Calumet club on Monday evening. Dancing was enjoyed by forty couples during the evening, and the party was one of the prettiest and most social given in Winchester in a long time. Poole's orchestra was in attendance, conducted by Mr. Poole personally. The hall was decorated with green, and many palms added to the tasteful arrangement, while for the german favors, bouquets of handsome flowers were used. During the evening a collation was served by Miss Nellie Nourse, assisted by a caterer. This was in charge of Mr. Arthur H. Richardson, Mr. Louis R. Wallis and Mr. W. F. Flanders.

Among the eighty odd guests who were present were, Mr. and Mrs. Munn, Mr. and Mrs. Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Gilmour of Brookline and Rev. and Mrs. W. I. Lawrence of Winchester.

Mrs. Ellen Meskell.

Mrs. Ellen Meskell, wife of David Meskell of Clark street, died at the Mass. General Hospital on Sunday, the twenty-first, where she had been sick for two weeks. She was born in Ireland, and had made Winchester her home for the past thirteen years. Her age was 40 years. She is survived by her husband and four children, and one sister in this town, Mrs. Frank McManus.

Funeral services were held at St. Mary's Church on Tuesday, high mass being celebrated by Fr. Madden. The bearers were David Coleman, Daniel McGann, Patrick Hennessy, Frank W. McManus, Michael Crampton, and Michael Callahan. Burial was in Calvary cemetery.

More new colortypes this week. Will on the Stationer.

Will Ask for an Explanation.

The following taken from the report of the committee to investigate the conduct of the town's official business, has caused considerable comment among town officers:

"We are surprised to learn that in some of the departments supplies were purchased by one member without the knowledge or consent of the other members and without the authority of a vote by the Board."

"Such methods lead directly to an overdraw of the appropriation and a weakening of the mutual confidence among its members, which confidence should always exist and its vitally necessary to its success. We recommend a discontinuance of these methods and the adoption of the system of buying in the open market and exclusive of friendly or family connections."

Officials are asking what departments the committee refer to, and some of them say that they will ask for an explanation at the meeting Monday evening as the accusation is so broad.

Church Unity.

We have had occasion more than once to comment upon the remarkably cordial relations that exist between the churches in our community. Their cooperation, and the frequent union services have caused Winchester to have an enviable reputation throughout the State. The "January Union Service," which occurs next Sunday morning, is in some ways the most significant of any held during the year, since it is held, not to celebrate any day or event, but only to prevent too long time elapsing without such a service. On next Sunday evening, at the Unitarian church, the united congregations will have the pleasure of hearing the eminent Professor Nash of the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge, and of hearing specially prepared music sung by a male quartette and a double choir. But to most the chief attraction will be the spectacle of five churches, with historical and theological differences, uniting in common worship. These union meetings are coming to be, as they deserve to be, regarded as important and distinguishing features of Winchester's life.

Hours of the Collector.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In the report of the committee to investigate the town's official business is the statement that the Collector of Taxes is at his office from 2:30 to 5 every day except Wednesday and Saturday evenings. Now from personal observation the Collector is at his office every day and almost every evening in the week, although he does not advertise to be present in the evening only on Wednesday and Saturday. The Collector does his work thoroughly and conscientiously and gives his whole time to the duties of the office, and what more can the citizens ask?

We are all growing old, yet I do not believe that Winchester is yet ready to adopt Osler's theory in the cases of its tried public officials who faithfully perform their duty.

A BELIEVER IN THE SIMPLE LIFE.

Giving for a Deserving Cause.

As a result of the request printed in last week's STAR for help in the care of the poor family whose mother is now at Rutland in the State Sanatorium, contributions to the amount of $67 have already been received, with promises of about $15 more.

This is about half the amount necessary, and everyone is asked to give what they can to make up the remainder, sending the amount to Mr. Geo. H. Carter at the Town Hall, or to Mrs. Cummings, 69 Church street.

Electric Light Hearing.

A public meeting will be held under the auspices of the Selectmen in the small Town Hall, Thursday evening, Feb. 1st, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of hearing all citizens who care to submit evidence or be heard in regard to the matter of public and private electric lighting expenses.

Favors a Municipal Lighting Plant.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I have read the explanation made by Mr. Wallis of the new method of charging by the Edison Electric company, but I must say it sounds very complex. One thing is plain, however, this method of charging seems to make our bills about twice what they used to be.

Isn't it about time for the citizens of Winchester seriously to consider the establishment of their own plant? Is it wise for our town, or indeed for any town, to purchase anything that is controlled entirely by one concern? Human nature is about the same the world over, and I have never found many people, given unlimited power in such matters, who considered the public welfare.

There is much that can be said against municipal ownership of a lighting plant. In the case of a large city, as the management is likely to become a part of the political machine; but in our own town, where we have always been remarkably free from anything of this kind, this argument has no weight, and many of us feel that the time has come when we should manufacture and furnish our own electric light.

EDWIN GINN.

The Epiphany Club.

The men of the parish of the Epiphany who recently formed themselves into an organization called the Epiphany Club, held their first formal meeting as a club at the residence of Mr. A. P. Weeks Wednesday evening. About forty members were present and an impetus was given to the club which will, it is hoped, make it an important force in the parish. The object of getting together the new men and making them acquainted was attained to some extent, and it is hoped that by the next meeting all the new members of the parish for whom this club was primarily organized will be present and enrolled. The President, Mr. F. B. Tracy, in opening the meeting, suggested that the first object to which the club should address itself might be the building of a parish house and the suggestion was very favorably received and a campaign in that direction is to be begun. The Secretary, Mr. Chas. H. Eastwick, read the minutes of the organization meeting and the by laws which were generally signed.

The address of the evening was given by Rev. J. W. Suter, rector of the parish, who gave some reminiscences of Phillips Brooks, as derived from his intimate acquaintance with the great rector of Trinity. No more resume of this talk is possible or would it be adequate to give an idea of the beauty of the conception which Mr. Suter gave of the character and the soul of Phillips Brooks. His talk abounded with illustrations of the spiritual and the devout side of the preacher's nature as well as his little excursions into fun and ridicule. It was a source of inspiration to all present to listen to such a tribute and get such a glimpse of such a man. This was one of the first ends for which the club was organized.

There Will be a Hot Time.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

There will be a hot time in the town meeting Monday night over the recommendations of the special committee on improvement of the town government. The committee has given a great deal of time to the matter and is entitled to have careful consideration given to its report by the citizens, and many of its suggestions will undoubtedly be received with favor, but not all. Of course those whose toes are trod on and their friends will be hostile anyway and besides these, many others will disagree with some of the committee's findings. For instance, why should Collector and Town Clerk be consolidated in the same man and be also made general clerk? Why not let the Collector's offices alone and give the Town Clerk the clerkships proposed and also Water Registrar? The scheme proposed for one superintendent for streets, sewer, water and parks does not appear to be as good a one as to consolidate the boards would be. Certainly the Sewer and Water Boards could be easily and advantageously joined; this has been done by the Commonwealth and by many cities and towns. Fees ought all to go to the treasury. Bills should be made out by the Auditor. Payments should be made to the Collector. Purchases should be made by a purchasing agent. Members of boards should view the work of their men more. Collector and Treasurer should be on first floor. Citizens should attend caucuses and town meetings and vote at elections. People should doubt and kick but not grumble and growl.

His Record as a Republican.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In answer to your correspondent of last week asking how many Republicans there are in town who have voted for all the Republican Presidents from John C. Fremont down to President Roosevelt, I desire to give my record. I have voted for all the Republican Presidents that have been nominated, also for Van Buren the Free Soil candidate in 1848, also attended the convention at Buffalo that nominated him. Have met Presidents Lincoln, Grant, Cleveland, Hayes, Garfield and Harrison, and have heard the former deliver some of his inimitable jokes. Have slept and dined at the White House on a number of occasions, have rode in the President's carriage, have stood on the reviewing stand at the White House and witnessed processions with Presidents Grant, Hayes and Garfield with their cabinets, members of the Supreme court and prominent army officers. All these have been pleasant experiences in my life.

Now, having answered the question of your correspondent, I will ask him a few. I have voted for every free soil and Republican candidate that has been nominated by the party, have been personally acquainted with the most of them. That is my record. Can you beat it? One more question: I think that I have attended every annual town meeting for 50 years, not missing more than one. Can you beat that? If so I will ask some more questions.

SAMUEL W. TWOMBLY.

Walter E. Chamberlain of Wildwood street, returns next week from a month's business trip through the west and south.

TO IMPROVE TOWN BUSINESS.

Radical Changes Recommended that are Causing Much Thinking.

At the town meeting in June a vote was passed instructing the Moderator to appoint a committee of five citizens, which, after thorough investigation and careful consideration, shall report in print to some future town meeting what changes, if any, would in its judgment result in the improvement of the conduct of the official business of the town.

After full discussion of the question with the town officials, and at a public hearing at which no one in the service of the town was present, your committee is impressed with three important facts:

First. That Winchester has ceased to be a small country town, and has outgrown the old-fashioned manner and methods of conducting its official affairs. It is now a town of more than eight thousand inhabitants, with a valuation of $10,000,000; transacts business of more than two hundred thousand dollars yearly, and would be greatly benefited by the application of modern business methods to the details of its affairs.

It needs a business head to some of its departments, with concentrated responsibility and authority. Its clerical force needs systematizing and its clerical force should be consolidated.

Second. That the town is extremely fortunate in securing for its officials so many men who serve from a sense of public duty and without compensation. We are convinced that such service in the various departments is better for the town than the labors of a Board of Public Works, with or without a salary. The duties of such a board would demand considerable time of its members, and competent men in active business, such as have so many times served the town without pay, would not be willing to assume so heavy responsibilities or feel called upon from a sense of public duty to give so much of their time as would be required to perform the duties of the combined offices. And any salary likely to be offered would not attract men of the caliber whom the town has heretofore been able to secure on boards and committees where less work was expected; in short, the great danger would be that sooner or later this board would become largely political. The faithful and efficient service many of our officials are rendering and have been rendering for many years should be kept clearly in sight at this time. One of the most hopeful signs of healthy progress in Winchester today is the public spirit and self-sacrifice of these unsalaried town officials. We therefore do not recommend at this time a Board of Public Works.

Third. That the time has come when the town should employ at least one official with regular office hours in the Town Hall building; that the office should be open from 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., and on Saturday evening from 7 to 9, and this official should be accessible to the citizens and the public at all times during these hours. He should be a working official, with an office assistant who should be a stenographer and typewriter.

Realizing the growing needs of the town, and fully appreciating the services our present town officials are rendering, we recommend the following reorganization and consolidation, fully believing it will, if given a fair trial, result in the improvement of the conduct of the official business of the town. That the citizens may clearly understand how much time is required in the discharge of official duties of some of its officers, and the amount of money now being paid for such services, we call attention to the following data:

HOURS PER DAY, ETC.	SALARY
Collector of Taxes, office hours, 2:30 to 5 every day except Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and fees of office	$1,400
Town Clerk, one hour per day, and fees of office	250
Clerk of Assessors, small part of the day, May to August	300
Clerk of Selectmen, one-half hour a day	200
Clerk of Sewer Board, very little time	200
Assistant Water Registrar, one-half hour a day	150
Clerk Cemetery Board, very little time	100
Assistant to Clerk Assessors, during assessing work	100
Registrar of Voters, as Town Clerk, very little time	50
Clerk Fire Engineers, very little time	50
Fees, Office Town Clerk, estimated	250
Fees, Tax Collector	400
	$3,450

We recommend that one and the same person be nominated and elected to the office of Collector and Town Clerk, and that he be required to discharge the duties of the above-named offices and clerkships at a salary of $2,000 per year.

That he be empowered to employ a stenographer and typewriter, who shall also be a general clerk in the office, at a salary of $500 per year. That this office be kept open on all working days during the hours of 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., and on Saturday evenings from 7 to 9.

We recommend that the town accept the act of the legislature whereby the Town Clerk can be elected for a longer term than one year, and that he be elected for a term of three years. This consolidation of the above-named offices and clerkships under one head, with an assistant, need not suggest to the citizens that these two officials are to be overworked or that the town's business will suffer thereby. Such will not be the result, in the judgment of your committee, but rather the clerical work of these various offices will be more promptly and satisfactorily attended to, and in a more businesslike manner than is the case under the present conditions. In short, your committee believes that once this office is organized and put into working condition, the chances are largely in favor of more duties being assigned to it and a better result accomplished than even your committee anticipate at this time. If every board and official in town will give to this plan the encouragement and assistance needed that it may have a fair trial, as some have already offered to do, your committee feels positive that it will not only be a success as a business proposition, but that the citizens will soon perceive a change for the better in the manner of conducting town business in the Town Hall building.

The salaries of the offices and clerkships which we recommend to be consolidated, together with fees, amount to not less than $3,450. We recommend:—

Salary of Collector and Town Clerk	$2,000
Salary Assistant Clerk	500
	$2,500

A saving of $850 per annum.

If this report is accepted and its recommendations adopted, and the citizens do their duty at the polls, we feel sure this official and his assistant will be constantly employed, will earn the salaries paid them, and the town's official business will be more systematically attended to.

CONSOLIDATION OF SUPERINTENDENTS.

Your committee recommend that all street, water, sewer, and park work be under the control of one superintendent, with suitable working foremen over each department, who is to hire and discharge all men employed on such work. He will be responsible to the Selectmen for all street construction work; to the Water Board for all work on the water works; to the Sewer Board for all work on the sewers, and to the Park Board for all work in the parks.

We feel sure this consolidation will save money in many of the departments and prevent the unnecessary digging and filling of our streets, so noticeable in the past.

This idea of one man serving the different boards and doing it successfully is nothing new in this town. It is being done today in the person of the Town Engineer, who is what his title calls him—an engineer for all the town departments. The evidence of all boards and officials before us, given independently, without exception, was that the engineering work is done in a manner satisfactory to the heads of all these departments and without friction or confusion.

The Superintendent of Streets must be appointed under the statute by the Selectmen, and if this recommendation is accepted the same man should be selected by these four boards in joint session to act as superintendent for all. The success of this ideal arrangement depends entirely upon two conditions:—

First. The working together of the boards in harmony and unity, mindful only of the best interests of the town which they serve and to which they are responsible.

Second. The ability of the man appointed and his disposition to serve pleasantly and faithfully these four governing boards.

We believe this consolidated authority and management of all work in the streets will prove to be a wise and economical move and conducive to the best possible results, as well as a saving in salaries, as shown by the following data:—

HOURS PER DAY.
Superintendent of Streets, full time, and keeping of horse	$1,500
Superintendent of Water Works, full time, and house rent, estimated	900
Superintendent of Sewers, part time	500
House rent, Superintendent of Water Works	$2,900
	300
	$3,200

We recommend the salary as follows:—

Superintendent of Streets, Water Works, Sewer and Parks, Extra pay to foremen	$2,000
	400
	$2,400
	$500

A saving of $500 per annum.

FEES.

The statute provides that certain fees may be retained by the Town Clerk and Collector. The estimate of the amount of these fees received annually by these officials, as stated in the earlier part of this report, we believe to be conservative, and somewhat less than the amount actually received.

There are also fees going to the Chief of Police, amounting to about twenty dollars per year, given him for his services as Sealer of Weights and Measures instead of a salary, as provided by law.

ANNUAL SUPPER AT CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The annual supper of the Congregational church and congregation was held at the church last evening. There was a large attendance, provision being made for about 400. The affair was made entirely a church observance, and admission tickets were used. An informal social and reception was held from 6:30 to 7 o'clock, after which supper was served. The tables were in charge of the following ladies: Guests table—Mrs. Joseph Stone, Miss Eugenia Elliott and Miss Georgia Stone, Mrs. F. N. Kerr and Mrs. Emma Swan, Mrs. N. H. Taylor and Miss Florence Richardson, Mrs. H. L. Larrabee and Mrs. A. B. Grover, Mrs. H. E. Butler and Miss Alice Chapman, Mrs. William Watt and Mrs. N. A. Knapp, Mrs. J. B. Boyce and Miss Marion Simonds, Mrs. F. A. Bradford and Mrs. C. P. Lees, Mrs. Daniel Kelley and Mrs. Wm. R. McIntosh, Mrs. Arthur K. Harrison and Mrs. Walter Berry.

A very pleasing program of music and toasts had been arranged for by the chairman, Mrs. Frank L. Ripley, which followed after all had enjoyed the bountiful supper.

The program was as follows:

Trio, Rev. D. Augustine Newton, Toastmaster.
	Miss Tolman, cello
	Miss Fletcher, violin
	Miss	piano
Toast, "Our New Comers"	Rev. M. Kneeland
Solo, "Our Gentlemen"	Mrs. W. F. Edlefson
Violin Solo, "Our Ladies"	Mrs. H. A. Wheeler
Toast, "Our Growing Daughter"	Miss Fletcher
Solo, "Our Community"	Mr. S. J. Elder
Toast, "Our Growing Daughter"	Mrs. W. F. Edlefson
Cello Solo, "Our Community"	Rev. Mr. Dwight
Toast, "Our Community"	Miss Tolman
Trio, "Our Community"	Mr. E. J. Rich

The toasts were most pleasing and wittily responded to by all the speakers, and their remarks were listened to with interest and cordially received by all.

The vestries were very prettily decorated for the occasion by a committee headed by Miss Bertha Smith. The supper was one of the best in the series, and the following committee are deserving of much credit:

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Best Made.

"In my opinion Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best made for colds," says Mrs. Cora Walker, of Potomac, California. There is no doubt about its being the best. No other will cure a cold so quickly. No other is so sure a preventive of pneumonia. No other is so pleasant and safe to take. These are good reasons why it should be preferred to any other. The fact is that few people are satisfied with any other after having once used this remedy. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Last fall's revelations of the corrupt state of Boston's politics and the extravagant condition of its municipal affairs are not apt to impress the average suburban resident with the advantages of annexation to Boston. In the nature of things the present would seem to be a very inopportune time for proposing legislation looking toward the consolidation of Boston and the surrounding cities and towns.—[Melrose Journal.]

It Keeps the Feet Warm and Dry.

Ask to-day for Allen's Foot Ease, a powder. It cures chills, blisters, swollen, sore, aching, damp feet. At all druggists and shoe stores, 25c.

Little knew the Selectmen of Bar Harbor, Me., what a proposition they were up against when they announced they would give 50 cents each for brown-tail moth nests. Early the same afternoon 200 had been received and $100 in good money paid out. It was the limit of the appropriation but by no means the limit of the nests. Sunday hundreds of men were scouring the island and Monday morning the Selectmen's office was besieged by a crowd, each man and boy and several girls with from one to half a dozen nests. Great concern and resentment was manifested when the selectmen announced that payment had been suspended until a new scale could be established.

Stomach Troubles and Constipation.

"Chamberlain's stomach and liver tablets are the best thing for stomach troubles and constipation I have ever sold," says J. R. Cullman, a druggist of Potomac, Mich. They are easy to take and always give satisfaction. I tell my customers to try them and if not satisfactory to come back and get their money, but have never had a complaint. The following notice of a real estate sale appeared in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle Dec. 20, '05:

$170,000 for Jamaica Farm.

Another large sale of real estate has been made to the Archer, Faber, Llewellyn and Lewis syndicate in the western section of the town of Jamaica, known as Union Course. The syndicate has purchased about twenty acres of land south of and adjoining Forest Park, for $170,000. The sellers are Philip Steingotten and Charles Stutz, who purchased the property from the Wyckoff estate for $60,000 an acre and have now sold it for $8,500 per acre. This land is near some which the same syndicate sold at auction on Election Day, making about $70,000 profit, doubling the amount invested.

The above tract of land is within the Borough limits of Brooklyn and was bought by myself and two others for $100,000. We made a deposit of $5,000 upon signing the contract, and before taking title sold the property for $120,000, as stated above.

Owing to the building of three new bridges over the East River, and two tunnels under it, which will give the people of Brooklyn abundant and rapid transit facilities, there is a great rise in value of real estate. A small syndicate is now being formed in Winchester. Subscribers will elect three to represent them. I will be at home until January 1st, and will give full particulars to all who inquire.

TO IMPROVE TOWN BUSINESS.

We believe the salary of all town officials should be fixed and that all fees should be turned over to the Treasurer monthly, with a detailed statement of the same, and do so recommend.

INSPECTOR OF WIRES.

We believe the proper person to inspect all street wires and wiring of houses is the electrician of the fire department, and we recommend that in future all inspection of this nature be under his care and control. His duties as electrician take him to all parts of the town, and having charge of all fire alarm wires it seems eminently proper that he should have the care of all wires, both inside and outside of houses and on the poles in the town. The Superintendent of Streets should have oversight of all poles in the highways, and we so recommend.

The salary of Inspector of Wires, now $100, should be discontinued, and we so recommend.

PURCHASE OF SUPPLIES.

First. We are surprised to learn that in some of the departments supplies were purchased by one member without the knowledge or consent of the other members and without the authority of a vote by the Board.

Such methods lead directly to an over-drawing of the appropriation and a weakening of the mutual confidence among its members, which confidence should always exist and is vitally necessary to its success. We recommend a discontinuance of these methods and the adoption of the system of buying in the open market and exclusive of friendly or family connections.

Second. We recommend the purchase by contract of all supplies in competition and with sealed bids in the various departments, except for small amounts and quantities. These small orders should be bought only on a written order printed for the purpose, and signed by the party making the purchase. A small, well-assorted stock of the more necessary tools, etc., under the control of the Superintendent of Streets would result in a saving to the town.

Third. Preference should always be given to the home markets when possible, that as much of the town's money may be spent in town as is consistent with economy and fairness.

COLLECTION OF ALL TAXES, ETC.

All payments, taxes or otherwise, due the town should be received by the Collector and turned over by him to the Treasurer. The Treasurer shall receipt for such payments to the Collector, and such receipts would be accepted by the Auditor and would serve as a check upon both officials.

The Auditor is the Town Bookkeeper, and should send out all bills due the town for material, rent, etc., and be responsible for the collection of said bills.

The town should not contract uncollectible bills, and it should be a rule in all departments where labor is performed that the payment or a deposit should be made before and not after the work is done. One such case has been called to our attention wherein the town is to lose a bill contracted by a neighboring corporation because no one in the employ of the said corporation knows anything of the bill or will approve it.

All the above suggestions, we feel sure, would work for the general good of the town, and we so recommend.

POSTING NOTICES, DISTRIBUTING WARRANTS, ETC.

Your committee is of the opinion that more work in the line of posting notices and distributing warrants and tax bills could and should be done by the police, one constable already being a member of that force, and we suggest that at least one more policeman be elected a constable, thereby saving the town something like $100 annually, the amount paid last year for this purpose, and we so recommend.

NO CHANGE RECOMMENDED.

School Committee. As the office of this committee is now in the High School building, it would not be practicable to unite the duties of the clerk of this board with those of the Town Clerk.

Overseers of the Poor. The duties of the clerk of this board are of so special a nature and so different in character from the other clerkships that we do not recommend that they be consolidated with any others.

Water Registrar. From the evidence presented to the committee it was quite clear that the duties of this office should be performed in the Town Hall building in regular office hours, and not in any private office. His official hours are Tuesdays and Fridays from 5 to 6, and while we do not deem it advisable at this time to recommend that his duties be wholly performed by the Town Clerk, we have provided that his assistant shall be accessible to all citizens during regular business hours. We recommend that all official business of this office be transacted at the Town Hall building by him, or, in his absence, by his assistant.

Unanimous in its conclusions, your committee presents this report as the result of careful consideration of the subject submitted to it, and fully convinced of the importance and necessity of the changes proposed.

Increased efficiency at a decreased cost will, in its opinion, be the result of the acceptance of these recommendations and, as we do not know of a more sound business doctrine than that, we heartily recommend it for your consideration.

No Hope of Controlling Brown Tail Moth.

Prof. C. H. Fernald of Amherst Agricultural college, says that in the case of the brown tail moth there is no hope of exterminating or controlling it in woodlands, but property owners should be able to protect their shade and fruit trees. The gypsy moth is a slowly spreading insect, confined to a limited section of New England, and with sufficient funds it can be held in check. Without means for a thorough campaign of suppression, a further spreading is bound to take place. In protecting herself Massachusetts has protected at least the rest of New England. If ever a state was entitled to national aid in a worthy cause, that state is Massachusetts.

The report of Supt. Kirkland suggests the following changes in the existing law: That the state superintendent be given sufficient authority to prevent the use of ineffective methods against the moths; the state or local authorities should be given power to control the transportation of wood, timber and other objects infested by the moths; that the provision of the civil service acts be extended to all those engaged in the work of gypsy and brown tail moth suppression; that the appointing of local superintendents be placed in the hands of mayors of cities and selectmen of towns.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

It is an accepted fact that no other organization in existence has ever attempted to carry on so many lines of reform, philanthropic and educational work with so small an income as has the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Were the details of our work more generally known it is probable that we would occasionally share in distribution of money made by generous people of wealth to worthy causes. Our National organ the Union Signal is the best source of information.

The church people, and others, of Whiting, Ind., directed the eyes of the Mayor to what saloons were doing in that town. The Mayor is superintendent of the Standard Oil works in that place, and following the statements of the agitators he found that fifty of the saloons kept open night and day to pour trouble down the throats of 3,000 of his employees. Violations of the Nickolson law are officially ordered stopped. It pays to look after municipal officers.

On Monday, Jan. 29th, from 2 to 5 p. m., there will be a special half day of Prayer at Pilgrim Hall, 14 Beacon street, in charge of the unions of the state. Different leaders each hour. A cordial invitation to all.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion, and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other oils in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, uric acid, catarrh of the bladder and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for every thing but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work and in private practice, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper, who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles are Home of Swamp-Root, sold by all good druggists. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Union or No Union.

The N. Y. Manufacturers' Bulletin says: This peculiarity is noticeable in Beverly. Everything about the U. S. M. Co. plant is "open shop." No union men need apply and if they are employed they must remember that silence is the price of the keeping of their job. Labor agitators and walking delegates are not tolerated and at the recent municipal campaign a candidate for mayor was not allowed to speak on the grounds. He was defeated at the election. When the plant was erected a union card was not required and when the hundred dwellings were put up nobody asked whether a union man used a union hammer to drive a union nail. Many union men worked on the job but they kept their mouth shut or quit. Nobody complains about wages.

In another part of the city the union has things their own way. You cannot buy a loaf of bread without the union label. You cannot get a union man to lay a brick if a "scab" put in the foundation, and a union plumber would throw up his job if asked to fix a pipe in the house which was painted by a man from an "open shop." About the only thing you can do in this section without consulting the union is to be buried. The street car men are unionized but the hackmen are not.

The contractors signed for the union contract without a murmur as it was expected they would charge the extra cost to the customers, but while the small fry has to stand and deliver the money for short hours and big wages the big concerns go elsewhere.

The musicians organized and not only formulated a price list but decided just how many men constituted an orchestra, but with the U. S. M. Co. came an orchestra which didn't give a rap for the union and they are getting plenty of business and rapidly springing into popular favor.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother has been a sufferer for many years from rheumatism," says W. H. Howard of Husham, Pennsylvania. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I presented her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications, she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

St. Nicholas.

St. Nicholas, the good man, is a native of Asia Minor. That was not his real name. He was an infant and named St. Nicholas. He afterward became archbishop of Myra. At the latter place he died and was duly buried. In May, 1087, his remains were carried by some pious Italians to Bari, on the Adriatic coast. They are now at rest in a splendid church which bears his name. The people around about make a pilgrimage to his shrine every year. No one seeking food on that occasion is refused it by the priests, while accommodation is given to as many pilgrims as the edifice will hold. On St. Nicholas' day, Dec. 6, a great celebration takes place in his honor. Early in the morning the populace take his image from the priests and carry it through the town. At night the city is grandly illuminated.

Humming Birds.

Scientifically humming birds are "trochilidae," and those who make a special study of them are "trochilidists," although the birds are not identical with the old Greek "trochilus," or "turner," bird, which, according to Herodotus, entered the jaws of the sleeping crocodile and obliged its big friend by pecking leeches from his throat. The Spanish name for the humming bird is "tomito," meaning a third of a dram and referring, of course, to the bird's minuteness. But the prettiest names are those, such as the French "from from," which refer to the humming noise sometimes produced by the almost incredibly rapid vibration of the wings. "Purring with her wings" is the expression of Thomas Morton (1832), the first English writer to mention the humming bird.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We long to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a fine and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

No charge to be less than 50 cents for first insertion.

Attend the Meeting.

Every citizen should attend the special town meeting to be held Monday evening. Action on the report of the committee on improving the official business of the town will come up for consideration, and as this is a most important matter every citizen should manifest his interest by being present and voting for or against the recommendations of the committee. Fair treatment of the members of the committee who have devoted a great deal of time to this question should cause a large turnout of the citizens.

A Good Suggestion.

The business men of the town were much pleased to read in the report of the committee appointed to investigate the conduct of the town's official business the recommendation that "Preference should always be given to the home markets when possible, that as much of the town's money may be spent in town as is consistent with economy and fairness." This is right. The local business men pay taxes in town, their help live in Winchester and every consideration should be given them. The business men are under obligation to this committee for the suggestion. Every dollar spent in Winchester benefits the whole town.

Unjust Quibbling.

A bill has been introduced into the Legislature to change the fire insurance laws, whereby it is required now that before placing additional insurance the consent of the first company must be obtained. Because of a failure to do this a woman lost a large amount of insurance, through the court ruling against her. Insurance companies have always consented to additional insurance being placed upon an insured property, but in this case because the consent was not obtained by the insured through oversight, or ignorance, said company set up this technical defence to avoid any payment whatever. If fire insurance companies doing business in this commonwealth are going to assume the position of taking advantage in every case of technicalities regardless of the good faith of the insured, it is time that the standard form of policy should be so changed as to protect the ordinary policy-holder as he is not an expert in insurance matters.

Considerable curiosity is manifested to see what the Legislature will do with this bill.

A Beautiful Winchester.

From the days of the Village Improvement Society to the present time the people of this town have taken a lively interest in making Winchester one of the most attractive places of residence in the suburban district. At the present time we wish to call attention to one particular aspect of this subject and that is the thoughtless disregard of lawns and grass plots which is occasionally shown. Those who travel much about the town must often have noticed the

ELECTRICITY.

Experience proves the Electric Light to be the best household artificial illuminant known. It is clean and saves draperies and walls and ceilings. It is safe. It is economical when properly managed, and proper management is easy.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

What is proper management will be explained when you write our Contract Agent, or when you telephone, or if you'll call when Boston.

The Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, 3 Head Place.

short cuts which old and young alike are inclined to take across school grounds, the common and other small parks, church grounds, and also private lawns. The general absence of fences, one of the features adding materially to the beauty of the town, is naturally somewhat of a temptation to indulge in such trespassing. Undoubtedly the school children and paper-boys should be held responsible for their share of the fault, and so far as pupils in the schools are concerned it is evidently the duty of the teachers and other school authorities to check or prevent this action to such an extent as it is in their power to do so; but careful observers will not have failed to notice that adults are not without blame in this matter, and in their case there can not be urged the excuse of thoughtlessness, or of a lack of proper appreciation of the desirability of respecting such lawns and public places as indicated above. We are quite sure that this word of caution and suggestion will suffice to bring about a better condition of affairs.

Conduct of Town Business.

The report of the special committee appointed to investigate the conduct of the town's official business, printed elsewhere in this paper, was a complete surprise to about all the citizens. Changes were hardly looked for in the direction of those recommended in several instances by the committee, but these gentlemen who have given the whole question thorough consideration have, no doubt, ample reasons for the suggestions that they make in their report, and which will be forthcoming at the town meeting next Monday evening. That the clerical work of the town needs systematizing, there is no question in the minds of all citizens and it was to be expected, naturally, that the committee would recommend that around the Town Clerk would focus the clerical work of the other departments, but that the duties of the Collector of Taxes would be merged into those of the clerk, was, to say the least, unexpected. The placing of the street work under one head—street, water, sewer and parks—will no doubt be an improvement over existing conditions, as all work of this class can then be done under the direction of one head, and still be supervised by the present superintendents.

The Star fully agrees with the Committee that the town should have a well informed official in the Town hall building throughout the day, and that he should be accessible to the citizens and the public at all times between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., and also on Saturday evenings. Town Clerk Carter has covered this work as far as possible, as he is at his office practically every day, and as far as he could answered all questions.

The committee turned down the question in regard to a Board of Public Works and compliments those citizens who are giving so freely of their time to the work of the town without compensation, but who would not on such a board

What About Rubbers For the Family?

One of these days it will begin to snow and by morning the earth will be covered with a beautiful white mantle. Its beauty, however, will be marred by the dreadful thought that you have neglected to buy Rubbers for yourself and for the children. Why not fit out the family today? Goodness knows, Rubbers are cheap enough.

Every good kind of Rubber Footwear is here—Sandals, Footholds, Storm Rubbers, Overs, Alaskas, Arctic, Rubbers for Men, Women, Misses, Boys and Children. Nothing is left out of our line of Rubbers that's worth having.

Postal Service.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

We note your editorial comment in last issue, bewailing the insufficiency of our mail facilities and the futile efforts of our postmaster to increase same and also contrasting West Medford's service of three postmen with our more than double its population and service of only six postmen.

To our mind the matter of the location of the P. O. is of far more importance than securing the services of an additional carrier. If the office could again be established somewhere near its old position—say near the intersection of Main, Pleasant and Church streets—where both electric lines would pass the door or nearly so, and within easy access of the business section of the town so that much of what is now delivered by carriers could be obtained by citizens themselves, it would materially relieve if it did not fully solve the difficulty, and the present force of carriers might be found sufficient.

Since Wedgemere attained the prominence it now enjoys, much the larger percentage of citizens residing west and south of Bacon street take the cars at that station, and nobody can deny that the East side and Cutler Village would be much better served if the P. O. could again be located in the centre, so that the section between Main and Bacon streets is the only section adequately served under the present arrangement.

Another grievance and one that ought to be speedily remedied, is that no collection is made from the street boxes in the centre after 5 p. m. and one must trot across the Common to deposit a letter in the P. O. in order to ensure its going out by the evening mail.

If half the cost of maintaining an additional carrier could be added to the present rental and new and up-to-date apartments secured in the centre, the public would be much better served than as now, and why shouldn't the P. O. be "in our midst" and not stuck over at one side as though it were at odds with the rest of the community and desired to "flock all by itself." R.

A Fine Lecture.

The lecture upon Japan, given by Rev. William I. Lawrence before the members of the Calumet club on Saturday evening last, was one of the finest of its kind to be given at the club for a long time. Mr. Lawrence resided in Japan for a number of years, and his scenes and descriptions of the country were given in a most interesting manner and backed by practical knowledge and experience. The largest audience of the year listened to his remarks, which were cordially received by the thoroughly interested gathering.

I Give Honor to Whom it is Due.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y., cured me of Bright's disease and Gravel. Four of the best physicians had failed to relieve me. I have recommended it to scores of people with like success, and know it will cure all who try it.—Mrs. E. P. Mizer, Burg Hill, O. Price $1.00, all druggists; 6 bottles, $5.00.

Mrs. Geo. H. Guernsey of Eaton street has been visiting her daughter at Worcester for a few days.

Last Friday evening a number of the Y. P. S. C. E. from the Congregational church took the 7:07 train from Winchester to conduct the services at the Merrimac Street Mission. Mr. Arthur W. Hale was the leader.

Chicken pox is very prevalent in the schools. On one short street in town eight children are afflicted with the disease.

At a pleasant Highland Avenue home on Sunday a hammock was swung, and in use, and it did not seem out of season considering the temperature.

Bowling.

Calumet failed to score a decisive win over Towanda on Monday night, and the best the home club could do was to split even with the visitors—2 and 2. The first and last strings were won by Calumet, each by the comfortable margin of one pin, while the second string and the total went to Towanda. The game was witnessed by the largest gallery of any home game yet and the enthusiasm was intense. "Lucky" Brown, of Towanda, broke the record for high single string, rolling 136, and beating the old record by two pins.

A remarkable score rolled in the league on the same night was that of Gray of the Arlington Boat Club team. Gray rolled three strings of 131, 120 and 116 each, with a record total of 367. The score of the home team follows:

Calumet	1	2	3	Totals
Purinton	85	97	91	273
Rooney	130	94	84	308
Olmsted	81	86	95	262
Cory	84	80	102	266

Totals	477	446	481	1404

Towanda	1	2	3	Totals
Dow	96	95	104	295
Buckman	96	88	105	289
Smith	88	100	90	278
Bolewine	95	102	81	278
Brown	104	106	100	310
Totals	476	521	480	1477

Castle Square Theatre.

One of the few modern plays of Southern life that have held the stage for any considerable period, "Alabama," is certain to renew old acquaintances and make many new friends when it is revived at the Castle Square Theatre next week. Its author is Augustus Thomas, who shares with Clyde Fitch the position of "The American dramatist," and his "Arizona," "In Mizoura," "On the Quiet," "The Other Girl," "Soldiers of Fortune," and a dozen more plays have all shown his skill as a dramatic author.

"Alabama" deals with life in the South at a pleasant period when the echoes of the Civil War had all died away, and in its vein of comedy it shows Mr. Thomas at his best. The characters are picturesque in the extreme, and the entire play gives a faithful, dramatic and amusing picture of life in the Southern state from which the play derives its name. At the Castle Square next week, it will be acted by the stock company that has proved itself the best organization of its kind known to the Boston stage in recent years. The leading characters will be acted by John Craig, and Lillian Kemble.

Creeks' Medicine Man.

The medicine man of the Creeks will not eat anything scorched in cooking. In treating a gun or arrow shot wound he as well as the patient will fast four days, only drinking a little gruel.

He will not allow a woman to look at his patient until he is well or dead. If his patient dies, the medicine man takes a lot of medicine himself in order to cleanse himself from the fumes or odor of the dead. The pallbearers, as we might call those assisting in the burial, also take the same cleansing process.

And, again, when an Indian committed murder, even in self defense, he went to the medicine man and took the cleansing remedy, claiming the remedy apposed the crime and the trouble to his mind.

At the full of each moon it was the custom of the backs to drink medicine made by the medicine man to cleanse their systems. In camp the Indian killed nothing which was not eatable.—Indian Journal.

Reconciled Science and Religion.

A clergyman is quoted in Everybody's Magazine as confounding an advanced young woman who was demonstrating to him that science had disproved religion with this little parable. "Madam," he said, "I once knew a member of your sex who perfectly reconciled science and religion. She is a prominent member of the Young Women's Christian association, and she was making an address to a large gathering of women, which was interrupted by a terrible thunder shower. She shared with many the awful fear of thunder and lightning, and, with the others, she trembled in silence for a few moments. When a blinding dash was swiftly followed by a frightful clap of thunder she struggled to her feet and began to pray, 'O Lord, take us under thy protecting wings, for thou knowest that feathers are non-conductors.'"

The Men of Turkey.

With the exception of the Mussulmans the men of Turkey are laborers, one and all. Usually in the villages (for there are no farms as we understand the term and every one lives in a hamlet or a city) the men own the property in common with the rest of the family. When a girl marries she goes to her husband's home to live, and when her children become old enough they take their turn in tilling the fields and marketing the produce. Agriculture is the main occupation everywhere, and it is of the simplest form. The farmer rises with the dawn and in company with his wife, sons and daughters repairs to the fields. One woman only remains at home to prepare the meals and set the house in order.—Southern Workman.

December.

"Nobody is worried nowadays by the fact that the twelfth month of the year is called the tenth, December," says a writer, "and no doubt even the ancient Romans soon got used to the anomaly when the new year was shifted back from March to January, though the old names of the months were retained. But there was one of them who made ingenious use of it—Laelius, a rascally procurator at Lyons under Augustus. He insisted on having certain monthly payments made fourteen times a year, arguing, when December came round, that as it was the tenth month of the year and there ought to be twelve there must be two more to be accounted for."

Fed Them on State News.

In the British arctic expedition of 1875 one of the chaplains had a file of the London Times twenty years old, containing the Crimean war reports. One copy was given out to each ship daily. The officers had it first, then it went to the forecabin, and soon every one was as keen about the news as if the war had been proceeding. The clergyman in control of the press was besought to issue an evening edition, and when Sevastopol was about to be taken excitement ran so high that the newspaper office—a locker—was almost stormed. The editor, however, was firm and continued with his daily issue, the interest being kept up to the end of the expedition.

"In God We Trust."

The word "God" never appeared in any government act until the year 1864, when, at the suggestion of the director of the mint, former Governor Pollock of Pennsylvania, "In God We Trust" was stamped on the copper two cent piece. Before that time "E Pluribus Unum" had been the motto. Strange to relate, "E Pluribus Unum" on coins never was authorized by law.

An Inference.

Mrs. Jackson—Did you see Mrs. Briggs' collection of rare old china? Jackson—Yes. Her family must have been quite poor. Mrs. Jackson—No. Why do you think so? Jackson—Well, if they had been able to keep servants she never would have had that collection of rare old china.

Explained.

"Pop!"
"What is it, Willie?"
"Why is it a 'w' in 'sword'?"
"Ahem!" For the same reason that there is a 'k' in 'knock,' Willie."
"Thank you, pop!"—Kansas City Independent.

Showed Her Age.

Grace—They say that Miss Forty-eight was named after her Aunt Georgiana. Gwendolyn—She looks as if she was named before her Aunt Georgiana.—Judge.

If men would consider not so much wherein they differ as wherein they agree there would be far less uncharitableness.—Addison.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casco, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for Dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physic, no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Peppermint, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called Dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit on the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

There is hardly any one who is not a little bit of a skeptic. That is why good and generous men and women have shrunk into oblivion by a distrustful look or stampeded with the report of a proceeding from bad motives by a mysterious and senseless whisper. Look into companies of those whose gentle natures should disarm them; we shall find no better account. How often does the reputation of a helpless creature bleed by a report—which the party who is at the pains to propagate it belies with much pity and fellow feeling—that she is heartily sorry for it; hopes in God it is not true; however, as Archbishop Tillotson wisely observes upon it, it is resolved in the moment to give the report her place, but at least it may have fair play to take its fortune in the world to be believed or not, according to the charity of those into whose hands it shall happen to fall.—Addison.

A RAILROAD RIDE IN PALESTINE.

Scenes in Ancient Joppa and a Reminder of Its Terrible Experiences.

A Journey Through Territory Crowded with Great Historical Events.

BY REV. S. WINCHESTER ADRIANCE.

A railroad ride anywhere in the world ought not to seem a novelty in the twentieth century. Yet it did seem queer enough to hear the bell on the locomotive ring, the whistle blow and to know that we were gliding through the fields of Judea along the rails of a modern railroad. Everything was most comfortable too. Ours was a special train made up of first class English compartment coaches, along whose sides were stretched long strips of cloth bearing the printed inscription "Clark's Oriental Cruise." We had anchored in the rather insecure harbor of Jaffa at some distance from the shore, early in the morning. A line of ugly looking rocks stretches across the entrance to Jaffa's harbor, looking like the fangs of some marine monster waiting to tear in pieces the boat which should try to enter. In reality the same ugly looking rocks are what constitute Jaffa a harbor. They are its only breakwater against the seas which come rolling in. It is exciting landing at best, and very dangerous when there is much of a wind from the sea. Excursion parties are often delayed at Jerusalem far beyond the advertised time of their stay there, while the huge waves make it impossible for them, if they should return to Jaffa, to be taken aboard their vessel. The Arab boatmen, as we came down the gangway, almost lit us bodily into the row boat at the opportune moment, and when all were aboard bent themselves to their long oars. They have a leader who chants in Arabic a brief strain in minor key, and the rowers immediately answer back. So we went ashore to the tune of this odd, antiphonal dirge. Nor were they unmindful of their back-sheesh, for just as we were in almost the worst spot, a man passed the hat, with almost a fierce demand for back-sheesh. It savored of the demand of the courteous highwayman, with his pistol at your head, and his ingratiating request, "your money or your life." Not a few passengers were made seasick in this passage from ship to shore. As the boat mounted the crest of a wave and then sank down into the trough so that all land was hidden, the portly gentleman who sat next to me clasped my arm, with a convulsive clutch, and thus, affectionately embraced, I was brought to land at Jaffa, after an exciting though brief trip in which we shipped some gallons of water, and some passengers lost their good Arabic breakfast.

We found Jaffa a busy place. Its history runs away back through many centuries. The name in ancient times was Joppa. Far, far back it was a Phoenician colony. Then when Joshua subdued the country, this section was assigned to the tribe of Dan. This part and Haifa at the foot of Mt. Carmel, are the only ports of Palestine. Jonah started from there in his fruitless endeavor to escape the unpleasant task of preaching to the people of Ninevah. When Solomon built his temple at Jerusalem, the materials were carried to Joppa in ships or floats, and from Joppa moved, probably on the backs of camels, over the roadway to Jerusalem, thirty-five miles distant among the mountains to the southeast. It was the scene of fierce struggles in the times of the Maccabees, but at last yielded to the Romans. Peter visited it, and there had the vision which broadened greatly his views of life and duty. The first place we visited was the old house where, according to tradition, Peter falling asleep on the roof, had his dream, and was summoned to meet the messenger who had come to find him. The present building is a very old one, probably erected on the site of a former building. From its roof is a splendid view taking in Jaffa with its fine gardens and yellow fruited orange trees and beyond, as far as the eye can reach, the blue Mediterranean. The oranges of Jaffa are noted for their size and sweetness. The trees were loaded with fruit, and the oranges very large and sweet. They were very cheap, too, and we revelled in them. The ship took on a plentiful supply of them to add to our provisions, and at breakfast and dinner for many days after leaving Jaffa we had abundant reason to remember the place happily. It is a most peaceful city of ten thousand people now, and it is difficult for the imagination to conjure up the exciting time when the Romans besieged it, captured it and then murdered its people, or the no less stirring times of the crusaders, when the turmoil of battle resounded there, and it was several times captured and lost.

But we must not linger longer at Jaffa, even though the oranges are so luscious, and its lovely bower outdoors with its inviting chairs and singing birds tempt one to stay. We cannot realize that it is the very beginning of March and that our minds at home are in the midst of a wild winter blizzard, and are forcing stoves and furnaces to do their best.

"All aboard for Jerusalem!" It was odd to hear our director shout the word down the line. There stood our train of many coaches bearing in a long streamer attached to the side of each coach the letters "Clark's Special." Not much this, like the days not so long ago, when on horseback over a hard road, the traveler made his way to the sacred city. Only yesterday I read in a book of travel on the Holy Land these words: "they talk of building a railroad from Jaffa to Jerusalem, but in my opinion it will never be done." Yet here we were shut in by the guard in our compartment of a first-class English coach, and the train was slowly moving out into the country. It was now 1.18 p. m. o'clock, and we had almost four hours of railroad travel before we should be landed at Jerusalem. This did not seem very rapid transit, when it is remembered that it is only fifty-four miles from Jaffa to Jerusalem, a speed of about fourteen miles an hour. But traveling is a very deliberate matter in the eastern countries. Each stop occupies a good many minutes, and even after the big cow-bell at each station is rung to give notice of the departure of a train, some time must elapse before the signal is given to start.

As the train steamed out of Jaffa, it was a fair sight we witnessed, of orange trees loaded with their golden fruit, and on the right an immense vineyard. The sight of camels bearing their heavy loads soon became too ordinary to be noticeable. So in an immense orange grove was dashed through by the train, the loaded trees extending far away on either side. Fine farming land was on both sides. For miles in the Plain of Sharon six to ten miles wide and one of the lovely valleys of Palestine. It was springtime, and picturesque farmers could be seen plowing the fields. Here was a man plowing with oxen, yonder another plowing with a camel, and over there farther a picture-like fellow with flowing garment caught at the waist with a girdle, wearing a bright colored head piece, and plowing with an ox and a camel hitched together. On the right we passed the little village of Cezar, which was captured by Joshua when he entered Canaan, and was afterward taken by the King of Egypt and subsequently given by Egypt's monarch to Solo non as a wedding dowry bestowed with his daughter, whom Solomon married. Then we passed through immense olive orchards extending mile after mile far away on both sides of the track. The train stopped at Lud, the Lydda of the New Testament, where Peter came and healed Aeneas, who had been palsied for eight years. This old town is Lud or Lud, and around this place too the din of battle raged in the times of the crusaders. Here too St. George, the patron saint of chivalry, is said to have been born, though other places have contested for this honor. We grew familiar with the sight of the large cactus or prickly pear plant, for they are everywhere, large, fleshy, leaved plants with most venomous looking thorns. The fruit is edible, and we frequently saw the camels enjoying even the leaves, their tough mouths apparently only tickled pleasantly by the sharp spines.

Our second station was Ramleh, near which is the traditional scene of David's successful encounter with Goliath, the giant warrior from Gath. Ramleh is thought by many to be the same town which was afterwards called Arimathea, where lived the noble rich man who obtained from Pilate permission to take down the body of Jesus from the cross, and with Nicodemus tenderly prepared it for burial and laid it in his own new tomb. Here two centuries afterward the brave crusaders battled, and we could see from the train the huge crusader's tower, 120 feet high. Here at Ramleh, before Israel had any king, Samuel judged the people, making it one of the stopping places in his official circuit. After we left Ramleh, we were treated to an unexpected diversion in our compartment. One of our party was a judge, who began excitedly to ransack his many pockets, and then announced that he had lost his pocket book, containing his ticket, all his silver and gold, and all of his American express checks. From the next station he telegraphed back to the Arabic at Jaffa, and returned next morning from Jerusalem, to find all safe under his pillow in his cabin, where the steward had found them and had replaced them after making his bed. Such is the unexpected spice which lends variety to travel.

We passed Ekron, where the Ark was sent from Ashdod after it had been taken from the Israelites in battle, and brought ruin to the Philistines. This is in the Electric Light Hearing.

A largely attended meeting of citizens was held in the Town Hall last evening under the auspices of the Selectmen to protest against the increase in electric lighting. Chairman Carter presided. Protesters were made by Edwin Ginn, N. M. Nichols, C. E. Redfern, D. L. Smith, E. L. Baldwin, W. F. Prime, W. L. Tuck, Rev. Mr. Kneeland, Henry Weed, S. S. Langley, Frank Cutting, P. G. Gray, and others. Mr. F. E. Barnard offered a motion which was carried, that Messrs. Lewis Parkhurst, John Abbott and W. E. Beas be a committee to investigate the advisability of the town establishing a municipal lighting plant and also to hold a conference with Edison officials and report to the town at the annual meeting, an article to be inserted in the warrant for that purpose. The sentiment was decidedly in favor of a municipal plant.

The company was represented at the meeting by two of its officials, who tried to explain that the cost of electricity was fair and just.

Explains His Attitude

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Dear Sir—Permit me to state my position in connection with the meeting on lighting held last night. It was, in my opinion, the duty of the Board of Selectmen to call a hearing on account of the excessive charges made for lighting current by the Edison Company, which were brought to my attention by the general dissatisfaction expressed by the citizens of Winchester.

I had hoped to find out at such a hearing whether the consumers favored the Board's petitioning the Gas and Electric Light Commissioners for a revision of the system of charging, and a reduction, as that was the method of relief prescribed by law, or whether they favored the appointment of a committee to consider the establishment of a municipal plant, which committee should be appointed at the next town meeting.

Usually the Board has awaited a petition or formal request for a hearing in matters to be brought before it, but in this case the initiative came entirely through the Board, and the meeting was called to find out which of the two methods, or both, it seemed advisable to undertake.

The appointment of a committee to take up the municipal lighting scheme and confer with the company, may be a step in the right direction, but the Board of Selectmen, who gave the hearing, had no authority to appoint a committee to report at the town meeting and I heartily concur in the ruling of the chairman of the Board to that effect.

That the meeting should appoint such a committee from its numbers, I see no objection to, and the motion as revised was entirely competent, the committee an excellent one, and I for one most assuredly hope for good results from its efforts. I am at a loss, however, to know whether the Board of Selectmen is expected to appeal at once to the Commissioners or await the report of the committee.

As the statute provides that twenty citizens may petition the Commissioners, I hope the committee will at once circulate a petition and deliver the Board of that duty, as the meeting evidently meant that the whole matter should be left in the hands of the committee, and the Selectmen, by taking the initiative now, might interfere with the work of the committee.

A little tact and consideration at the meeting would have brought out more facts and avoided all complication. I believe that the Commission should be appealed to at once; that it will do no harm to discuss the matter freely with the company; that the establishment of a municipal plant should be carefully considered, and I am heartily in sympathy with every effort that is made to reduce charges which we are all agreed are exorbitant.

Yours truly,

GEORGE ADAMS WOODS.

Three Remarkable Men.

We had the pleasure this week of seeing a group photograph of three gentlemen whose combined ages foot up 248 years. The dean of the group was Mr. Edward A. Brackett of this town, sculptor, artist, poet, and now and for many years a member of the Mass. Commission on Inland Fisheries and Game, aged 87 years; Walter M. Brackett, the well known artist of Boston, 82 years, and Col. G. B. Brackett, head of the pomological department at Washington, 79 years—all brothers. The three brothers happened to meet in Winchester during the Christmas season, at the suggestion of a member of the family, went to Higgins' studio where an excellent photograph of the three was taken. Higgins caught the men just right and the result was an artistic group picture. In many ways these men are remarkable, and each has been a leader in his chosen profession. They are all in the enjoyment of good health and the happy trio promises to remain unbroken for many years to come.

Capt William A. Snow Promoted.

The many friends of Capt. William A. Snow are pleased to learn of his promotion to a Deputy Collectorship at the port of Boston from the office of chief clerk in the warehouse division, a position that he had held for many years. Capt. Snow is well known in grand army circles, and was born in Chelsea about 60 years ago. At the age of 21 he enlisted as cavalry private and served four years, rising to the grade of captain. At the close of the civil war he went South as clerk in the internal revenue service, and after five years was transferred to the custom house in Boston, where he has been employed since 1876. Capt. Snow has resided in Winchester 30 years, and has always been deeply interested in all measures tending toward the promotion of the welfare of the town. For many years he was cashier of the local savings bank and is at the present time the secretary of the Winchester Mutual Benefit Association.

Let the Good Work Go On

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The work of the town committee to ward consolidating the business of certain town offices is certainly to be praised, as Mr. Tuck said on Tuesday evening. Also what Mr. Tuck boldly said about the high pay some officers receive when compared with the time they spend on their work, is as true as gospel. The work of the committee should certainly continue although the committee itself has ceased to exist. Some of these "nest eggs" might be consolidated also. In many towns the selectmen are also assessors of taxes, in others the treasurer, and collector is one and the same person. When the town pays the bond, this is a good arrangement and gives one financial head to the town. It is strange the committee did not even allude to these consolidations which would certainly save money for the town. But what the committee did do was to set the people to thinking and that is a good thing. Now the people should tackle the whole subject next March, not half of it. Let's consolidate and save money all along the line. We cannot have too much of a good thing.

PROGRESS.

Burned While Playing.

On Monday afternoon a sad accident occurred in town, when little Mary Lawrence of Spruce street was fatally burned while playing near a bonfire. Mary, with other children, was playing about a bonfire prepared by her grandfather to destroy moth nests he had cut from trees on his premises. Companions say Mary had been jumping over the fire, and a spark caught her dress. Screaming with pain and with her clothing blazing, she ran towards the house.

The cries of the sufferer brought her grandmother, Mrs. John Callahan, to the door just as Mary staggered up the steps. Mrs. Callahan caught her in her arms and strove to beat out the fire that had already burned through the child's skirt and left a trail of smoldering sparks. But Mary, almost insane from pain, writhed out of the aged grandmother's grasp, dashed down the steps into the street and ran to and from the group of terror-stricken playmates.

Jeremiah Sullivan, who lives at 8 Spruce street, witnessed the spectacle from his window. In a moment he had reached the scene and thrown a heavy coat around her. Mr. Sullivan was obliged to use force, and bore the little girl to the ground, clutching the burning cloth from her body and rolling her from side to side.

While Mr. Sullivan was working over the quivering form John T. Cosgrove, hearing the screams, came up and quickly tore Mary's clothing off and threw it aside.

She was then tenderly carried into her grandmother's house, where Dr. McCarthy, who was called, prepared her for removal to the Massachusetts General Hospital. The child's left side and limbs were terribly burned. Mrs. Callahan's hands and arms were severely scorched.

Little Mary Lawrence died on Tuesday at this hospital of her burns. Her age was ten years and she was a member of the Chapin school. She was the daughter of Mrs. Percy Lawrence and had made her home with her grandparents. Funeral services were held on Thursday afternoon at 2 p. m. from her grandparents' home on Spruce street. Dr. McManion officiating. The burial was in Calvary cemetery, Montvale.

Epworth League Reception and Banquet.

The climax was reached in the series of Epworth League socials, Tuesday evening when the "First Annual Reception and Banquet" was given in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The affair was one long to be remembered by those in attendance. All came expecting good food, good fellowship and good fun, and those with whom we have spoken, went home perfectly satisfied with the evening's festivities.

Rev. Vincent Ravi made an ideal toastmaster and introduced the speakers in a very witty manner, the speakers being old college chums of his. Rev. Webster H. Powell of Dorchester spoke very vigorously on "Rejuvenation." He urged that the hope of the young people's societies as a whole, was in excluding all who had reached middle life from the society and letting the boys and girls run it their own way. Rev. Philip L. Erick spoke most interestingly on "The Problem of Life, or Tao and Two." He was very direct and convincing.

Miss Ethel F. McDonald, vocalist, is a young lady of rare ability and quality of tone, and her selections delighted the audience. We cannot fail to praise the fine work of the Epworth League Orchestra.

Gentlemen Won Prizes.

The gentlemen's whist at the Calumet Club on last Saturday night was largely attended by the members of the club. The winners of the evening received some of the handsomest prizes ever offered for a similar event by the club. Mr. Frank A. Cutting captured the first prize which consisted of a dozen cut glass tumblers. For second honors the gentlemen, Frank W. Winn and Louis R. Wallis were tied. Mr. Winn won the deciding cut, and was presented with a gold framed mirror, while Mr. Wallis received a leather collar and cuff box. Mr. George A. Burgess won the prize for the least number of points, and was the recipient of a stein.

Petty Thieving Stopped.

Several petty breaks have been made in the stores in the centre lately and this week Chief McIntosh captured two Winchester youths charged with the offence. He also is after two other boys whose homes are in Boston, but who are well acquainted with Winchester. The Winchester boys arrested were George Nowell and Drew Wells. Their case comes up in court this Friday. Two of the markets in town were broken into and a junk dealers shop on Middlesex street. The boys will be tried for these breaks.

Odd Fellows' Smoke Talk.

The members of Waterfield Lodge of Odd Fellows are to give a smoke talk on the evening of Monday, Feb. 19.

The grand lodge officers are to be present and assist in the good speaking that is promised. A collection will be solicited and a most enjoyable evening is anticipated. The smoke talk is for the purpose of extolling the merits of this great and beneficent order, with the hope of securing additional members. Invitations are being sent out to men who are not members of the order.

Entertained at Whist.

Mrs. Irving S. Palmer of Dix street entertained seventy-two ladies at bridge whist on Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. William I. Palmer won the first prize, Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn, the second, and the consolation prize was given to Mrs. Ralph Redfern. A dainty luncheon was served by the hostess after the whist.

REPORT ADOPTED.

To Consolidate Offices of Collector, Town Clerk and Other Clerks.

Also a General Superintendent for Streets, Water, Sewers and Parks.

Two weeks ago in referring to the forthcoming report of the committee to investigate the conduct of the town's official business the STAR was correct when it said, "Whatever the nature of their report it will be accepted, and whatever recommendations they may make adopted for this investigation has been thorough and absolutely free from bias, and solely for the best interests of the town." This was a pretty bald prediction, and the STAR's attention was called to that fact several times by prominent citizens since the report of the committee was made public. However, this only goes to prove that if the right men are appointed on a committee, the citizens will have confidence in them and are pretty sure to agree to what they recommend. The report was a surprise, and the hearty support given it was also a surprise.

The meeting Monday evening was an unusually large one, even in the case of an annual meeting. The south gallery was filled with ladies who were interested during the proceedings. The discussion throughout was free from bitterness and personalities, and we do not recollect in a long time of attending a more orderly meeting where the subjects under debate were so important and far reaching.

It was eight o'clock when Town Clerk Carter called the meeting to order, and at the conclusion of his reading the warrant, Ralph E. Joslin, Esq., was elected moderator.

Selectman Carter said that in view of the drastic manner in which the Attorney General had eliminated town by laws, he offered certain rules for the guidance of the meeting which were adopted.

On motion of Tree Warden Guild article five was first considered and $2000 voted for the suppression of the moths, the money to be taken from corporation tax account. Mr. Guild said that this was to be used as an emergency appropriation until the annual meeting in March.

On motion of Mr. W. L. Tuck, it was voted that the Selectmen be instructed to ask Cong. McCall to use his efforts to secure an appropriation to suppress the moths in the New England States.

TELLERS APPOINTED.

The Moderator then appointed the following to act as tellers of the meeting: Messrs. Sullivan Shaw, G. G. Stratton, Joshua Kelley, Chas. H. Eastwick.

ACTION ON REPORT OF COMMITTEE.

Mr. John L. Ayer, chairman of the special committee appointed to investigate the conduct of the town's official business, moved that the report as printed and distributed be received. For the committee, he said that they were somewhat in doubt as to what they were expected to do, and they did not think they were called upon to investigate town officials. They had, however, taken up the question from a broad viewpoint, and did what they considered for the best interests of the town. They had no friends for places, neither did they have any candidates. This was up to the citizens. All the town officials had been given a hearing, and also a public meeting had been held, and from the facts gleaned the committee had made up its report, supplemented by numerous letters of inquiry received from towns in the State. Increased efficiency at reduced expense to the town had been the keynote of the investigation. When the report had been received, Mr. Ayer moved that the recommendations be adopted.

Selectman Carter said that this was the third committee that had been appointed by the town and all had reported in favor of a consolidation of the clerkships. Winchester's progress had been due to the fact that it had never stood still, and this report was on the line of further advancement. The question of investing the duties of Collector and Town Clerk in one man will have to be settled at the polls. Mr. Carter wanted to know if the assistant clerk was called upon to do the work of the Water Registrar, whether the latter was still to receive his usual salary of $400 a year. Under the by-laws, the Water Board has the sole power to appoint a Registrar, and fix his salary, and he believed the Board would accede to the wishes of the voters.

Mr. W. L. Tuck was in favor of the adoption of the committee's report and its being passed entire. He believed that Winchester was governed too much. He moved that the duties of Water Registrar be performed by the Town Clerk.

Edgar J. Rich, Esq., favored dividing the report, so that action might be taken separately on the different recommendations. This was agreed to, and on Mr. Ayer's withdrawing his motion that the report be adopted as a whole, offered a vote that "The same person be nominated and elected to the office of Collector and Town Clerk, and that he be required to discharge the duties of the offices and clerkships, printed in the report, at a salary of $500 per year. That he be empowered to employ a stenographer and typewriter, who shall also be a general clerk in the office at a salary of $300 per year. That this office be kept open on all working days during the hours of 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., and on Saturday evenings from 7 to 9.

Mr. Arthur E. Whitney, while not wholly opposed to the consolidation of these offices and clerkships, yet he did not believe it proper to include the clerks of Cemetery and Assessors, especially the latter who would then commit the taxes to himself. He was also opposed to a town clerk acting as collector. He characterized the report as a milk-and-water arrangement.

Mr. Ayer said that the law states that the Board of Assessors shall commit the taxes to the Collector and not the clerk of the Board.

Geo. C. Coit, Esq., wanted to know who would get the salary of $2000 if separate men were elected to the offices of Collector and Town Clerk. Mr. Ayer replied that the town would fix the salaries.

Mr. H. F. Johnson favored a general town clerk and an assistant, which he said could be done, but that it was not practical. The Town Clerk should be clerk of the Selectmen and Sewer Board, but not clerk of Assessors and fire department. The business of Water Registrar should not be done outside of the Town Hall. The whole scheme savored of politics.

After efforts had been made to side track the report, Mr. Lewis Parkhurst favored a direct vote that the matter might be definitely settled one way or the other.

Mr. Rich offered an amendment that the clerks of the Assessors and Cemetery Board be not included.

Mr. Parkhurst opposed this amendment, and said that his committee had tried to do its best to improve town business by having a man at the Town Hall all day to attend to the business of the different departments. The Selectmen have too much to do. They need good men to serve the town. Have a man of business who would do the work right. The letters are not round, are written in long hand, and generally speaking things were behind the times. With a good stenographer and clerk at this, would be changed.

After further discussion the consolidations, as recommended by Mr. Ayer were agreed to by a large majority vote, the clerks of Assessors and Cemetery Board being omitted from the list.

The offices recommended for consolidation are: Collector of Taxes, Town Clerk, Clerk of Assessors, Clerk of Selectmen, Clerk of Sewer Board, Assistant Water Registrar, Registrar of Voters, as Town Clerk, Clerk of Fire-Engineers.

Favors a Lighting Plant.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The spirit of unrest is abroad in the land, and this time seems to have arrived for the town to take up the matter of owning its own lighting facilities.

Whether it be from users of gas or electricity, we hear the same complaint, and I believe we should now seriously consider this proposition. It is not necessary at this time to enter into a lengthy argument on this proposition, but I propose to insert in the warrant to be acted upon at the next town meeting, an article having this aim in view.

In the meantime, I would suggest to those who care to do so, that they write me in reference to their charges for lighting during the past year or two where they have kept records of the same. I will have these carefully tabulated and ready to turn over to such committee as may be appointed to act upon this subject, thus saving valuable time and giving them material to start work upon.

At the first of its series of away from home games in the Boston Pin League Calumet scored a straight win of all four points. This was done at the Medford club on Tuesday night. Calumet rolled a total of 1427. Corey of Calumet was high man for the match, with every string footing one hundred or better, and a total of 310.

Basket Ball.

Winchester V. M. C. A. boys defeated Company A, sixth Regiment 2nd basket ball team on Tuesday evening.

Last Tuesday afternoon the High School 2nd team defeated the Woburn H. S. basket ball team in an interesting and one-sided game by a score of 25-3. Kelley and Cameron excelled for Winchester.

Last Friday night Winchester played her real big game of the basket ball season with Melrose High being defeated 25-16. Winchester put up a grand night for the game and was well supported by "rooters" who cheered themselves hoarse in urging on their team to what, at the end of the first half, looked like a victory for the home team as the score was 12-12. In the second half Melrose braced up and Winchester could not hold the visitors down. Vaughn of Melrose played a fine game, shooting 9 baskets. King did good work for Winchester.

The basket ball game scheduled for last Tuesday afternoon between Winchester H. S. and Boston University was not played as the Boston University team failed to show up.

TAXPAYERS' POCKETBOOKS WILL BE SQUEEZED

Before the Parasite that is to Keep Down Moth Arrives.

Cooperation Urged all Over Town to Fight the Pests.

At the hearing held by the Tree Warden in the small town hall last week Thursday evening he made the statement that he had about 50 men at work, and that he proposed to take on all the good men he could secure and use to advantage. Work on the town trees is practically finished, and the men divided into groups have commenced cleaning trees on private property that has not been attended to, and working from the centre of the town out toward the borders. The cost of cleaning the trees on private property is to be charged to the estate and collected the same as the taxes are and to be a lien on the property. The Warden is compelled by law to do the work where owners of trees neglect to, and the charge is to be the actual expense incurred, no profit whatever accruing to the town. Unless the cooperation of the inhabitants is freely given the best results will not be attained. He urged the cutting down of all fruit trees showing signs of decay, also all other trees that could be spared. Many trees lining the streets would have to be cut, as the expense of caring for them from year to year would be more than the town could stand. The hoped for parasite to keep down the moth was not expected to be efficacious for at least five years, and during that time the fight would have to be vigorously waged. It is not expected the pests can be exterminated but only kept down.

The hearing was attended by about 75 of the largest owners of real estate, and they all manifested a lively interest in the proceedings.

The Warden hoped that where property owners received bills from the town for cleaning trees, that they would make prompt payment so that the money might be used over again in still further carrying on the work, for it is not done there is danger of a serious handicap from a lack of funds.

Mr. Edwin Ginn said the moths had multiplied one hundred times more than a year ago in Rangeley despite his efforts to prevent their increasing. Thus far he had spent over $3000 and had twelve men at work. It would cost the town $3000 to carry on the work for this year. He made the statement that nothing had been done on the Parkway thus far. The work now being done will come to naught, if there is neglect of other property and his place would be overrun again.

Mr. S. S. Symmes said it would be found an utter impossibility to clean out the brown tail moth. The Fells are full of them and they can't be got rid of. He favored the town appropriating $10,000 for the purpose of importing parasites, regardless of what the State is doing.

Mr. Allen Chamberlain said that parasites were the only hope, but that jealousy among entomologists was the principal drawback to its successful introduction at the present time. It will be five years before we get parasites that will reduce the number of moths.

Mr. Alfred Clarke made the statement that the greatest drawback was the utter indifference shown by non-residents in caring for their property in this town. They have no interest in the future of Winchester, and allow rubbish of all kinds to accumulate on their land. The town should have the right to cut down trees wherever it saw fit to do so. He claimed that two-thirds of the trees on Fletcher street could be removed, and the appearance of the street could be improved thereby.

After remarks by other gentlemen, a suggestion offered by the Tree Warden that a committee of five from different parts of the town be appointed to secure the co-operation of the people, was put to a vote and carried. The following gentlemen were appointed: Messrs. J. L. Ayer, K. D. Sanborn, Rev. F. H. Myers, G. G. Stratton and Henry Welch. They will ask citizens in their respective parts of the town to work with them in urging property owners to clean their trees. This is an excellent arrangement, and it is hoped will result in much good.

However, the moth situation is just about as Mr. W. K. Blodgett stated in the meeting: The menace is from the borders of the town and not from the interior portions, unless the outskirts are cleaned up, it is useless to expect favorable results, as the pests will again come in from the same source.

Pruning Does More Harm than Moths.

Taylor C. Lyford of Hudson, N. J., inspector under the gypsy moth commission, in a recent address before the town society will not recognize a son, a daughter, a brother, a sister, a husband or a wife for any reason whatsoever. "I speak of the pruning of trees," he said, "as the first real injury to the life of our trees. Since the coming of the brown tail moth far greater damage has been done to shade trees by the pruning hook than from the work of itself, still seemingly intelligent men who are at work year after year advocate this method as a preventative."

Young Fire-Eaters.

Like the boy who was wont to entertain his juvenile friends and incidentally make a little spending money by eating a "small caterpillar for one cent" and a "large green bug for three cents," the younger generation of Wakefield has taken up an equally unique pastime which is known to the dime museum man as "fire eating."

The boys have been observed at this new sport for several days and on Saturday afternoon a party of them unknowingly gave the item staff a free exhibition in the yard back of the Wakefield block. First the young "fire-eater" takes a drink of gasoline or kerosene.

Then spurs it from his mouth, much as the celestial sprinkles his clothes, and at the same time touches it off with a match. The result is a burst of flame that for a moment seems to envelop the fire eater's head. It disappears as quickly as it came and the young hero is in no way injured save for a possible disagreeable taste which the inflammable liquid leaves in the mouth.

While "fire eating" may be a novel pastime, it is nevertheless a dangerous one and fires are liable to result.—[Wakefield Item.]

A Winchester Industry.

Last week the Winchester Brick and Rock Co., petitioned the city council of Woburn for permission to blast rock. The company has purchased a large track of land bounded by Holton and Green streets, Garfield avenue and the Winchester town line, and a tract in Winchester for the purpose of manufacturing brick, building trimmings and material for side and cross walks from the stone they propose to blast and grind.

The purchase includes most of Blueberry mountain, extends northerly nearly to Green street.

In order to secure railroad privileges a small farm was purchased just north of the depot at Winchester Highlands, and tracks will be laid through the property for the convenient handling of the rough and finished product.

The process by which the rock is to be converted into material for everyday use is secured by letters patent, and the projectors are sanguine of a successful business.

Advertising.

Don't advertise if you believe you are wasting money. Let your competitor waste his money on advertising, and perhaps in this way you'll soon "put him out of business." Fix his clock-works for him! Just stand back and laugh at him when you see him squandering his money for printer's ink. Once there was a boy named John—we think his last name was Vanamaker, or maybe it was Money-maker, anyhow his name was John, with some sort of a maker attached to his last name. He owned fifty yards of calico, three pairs of jeans, a half dozen pairs of home made yarn socks and five pairs of boots. He called this a dry goods store through a Philadelphia newspaper and offered to sell a pair of socks for 39 cents. The don't believe in advertising merchants laughed! Young John spent $6 with the Philadelphia Ledger to advertise just one time, and had less than $100 worth of goods. He was cautioned by the merchants who "knew it didn't pay." It was through sympathy that they offered him advice. But John didn't listen to them, and went and blew his money in foolishly; and today poor John sees the results of his misdoings—he has so many large dry goods stores that he can hardly find time to study his Sunday school lesson.—[Exchange.]

A Fair Show for Automobilists.

Governor Guild won the heart of every automobilist when he declared in his inaugural address that "A more effective and uniform regulation of automobiles, and especially of reckless chauffeurs is desirable. Even-handed justice also demands that those who make a rat onal use of a modern vehicle should not be made subject to petty persecution. I would suggest that all fines for speeding be applied to the repairs of State highways." This is an able stand for the governor, to take in the matter in which everybody is more or less interested. His suggestion that all fines for speeding be applied to the repairs of State highways, should, of the rate at which fines are being paid in everywhere, solve the problem of good roads.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Mothers Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt relief, have made it a favorite with the people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers, of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief. As it contains no opium or other narcotic, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Mass widows have hard lines. In New England society will not recognize a son, a daughter, a brother, a sister, a husband or a wife for any reason whatsoever. "I speak of the pruning of trees," he said, "as the first real injury to the life of our trees. Since the coming of the brown tail moth far greater damage has been done to shade trees by the pruning hook than from the work of itself, still seemingly intelligent men who are at work year after year advocate this method as a preventative."

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The communication published in last week's STAR on the High school societies by P. S. D., who says he is a scholar, may not, possibly, call for any comment. However, in view of the large amount of talk now going on concerning this matter I wish to state through your columns my own opinion of the letter.

P. S. D. says there is no discord in school due to the secret societies. My son tells me otherwise, and says it is especially so in regard to athletics. Has P. S. D. ever tried to make a team, or been requested to vote for so-and-so of "our" society, for captain of this or that team?

P. S. D. say the initiations are not elevating but they are no worse than those at Harvard or other colleges. Does he think that because Harvard students should make themselves silly or obnoxious at Winchester High school boys and girls should do so too? That because Y is a thief, he also should be one?

Is the Winchester High school singled out among others because of the virtues or the faults of its secret societies? I take it because of the latter. A. B. M.

New Equipment for B & M.

Orders have been placed with the Boston & Maine shop for twelve standard eight-wheel caboose cars, six of which are to be built at the Concord, N.H. shop and six at the Fitchburg, Mass., shop. A special type of freight car for the transportation of automobiles is to be added to the Boston & Maine's equipment.

The Pullman Company have received orders for 300 thirty-six foot box cars, 60,000 pounds capacity, delivery to be made the latter part of this year.

The Fressed Steel Car Company are building for this road 1000 thirty-six foot box cars of 60,000 pounds capacity, delivery to commence in April, 1906, and to be completed by July, 1906.

Startling But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly 600 people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Everyone of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who have had every reason to fear pneumonia have warded it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. Wilcox, Logan, New York. Sold at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

BOARD OF SELECTMEN.

INDIVIDUAL EGG SALADS.

Cook six eggs hard, which will take 20 minutes; drop at once into cold water. When cold remove the shells and separate yolks and whites. Chop the whites fine and moisten slightly with boiled salad dressing. Rub the yolks and dry yolks through a puree strainer, or press through a potato ricer; moisten with the dressing. Put a spoonful of the white mixture into small cups, then a layer of the yolk and fill with the white. Unmould on to lettuce cups, or shredded lettuce arranged in little nests. For the dressing, soak enough gelatine in cold water to make two teaspoons when soft. Make a boiled dressing by the following rule: Mix one-half level tablespoon each of salt and flour together with one teaspoon of mustard and one and one-half level tablespoons of sugar and a spoon of vinegar. Add ten beaten eggs and three-quarters of a cup of milk; when it has come to the boiling point add four tablespoons of vinegar, cook two minutes and strain. The dressing must be mixed with the egg before it is cold and has become firm. This egg salad may be molded in a larger form if preferred.

Chairman Gould of the board of county commissioners said that a recent murder trial had already cost this county $32,000 and the bill is not yet. He gave no names but even one understood that he referred to the Turk case. This enormous expense which the taxpayers have to shoulder comes very largely from the excessive fees that are allowed experts who are called as witnesses.

Afraid of Strong Medicines.

Many people suffer for years from rheumatic pains, and prefer to do so rather than take the strong medicines usually given for rheumatism, not knowing that quick relief from pain may be had simply by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm and without taking any medicine internally. Rev. Amos Parker of Magnolia, North Carolina, suffered for eight years with a lame hip, due to severe rheumatic pains. He has been permanently cured by the free application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Rev. W. C. Meyer addressed the men's meeting last Sunday at 4 p. m. 21 were present. We are very fortunate to have Mr. Meyer with us this season.

Mr. Francis L. Beale, missionary in charge of St. John's Church, Saugus, addressed the boys' meeting. Mr. Beale is a very interesting speaker, and holds the attention of all the boys.

Next Sunday Mr. Walter Packard, general secretary of the Southbridge Y. M. C. A. will conduct the boys' meeting. Good music.

The "Cleveland's (Ohio) Young Men" prints the following interesting editorial from the "Gazette" of Jan. 23, in which Mr. Booth calls attention to the breadth of the Y. M. C. A. movement. "He notes that during the year 1905 the association expended $1,000,000 weekly. That the membership was 100,000 with 300,000 more members scattered through 30 different countries. That last year 100,000 buildings were erected at a cost of over $3,000,000 and that a larger number are now in process of erection or being planned for. That the work of the Association is especially valuable because of its adaptability, helping as it does industrial workers, city and country men, Indians and Negroes, sailors and soldiers, boys, college students and men in foreign lands.

From first to last the association is a live vital, moving force. There is nothing slow or moss-grown about it. It is the most vigorous development of modern Christianity.

The Boston Globe of January 29, gave a very interesting article upon the Y. M. C. A. at Tech. giving in detail an account of the enlarged work and the result of reorganization.

"On the opening day of the school year over 800 students registered on the Y. M. C. A. cards given out. This card besides asking name, address, year at Tech. etc., asked information in regard to what religious denomination they were members of and whether they would wish to take part in some form of association work. In this way the Y. M. C. A. was enabled to find out the church preference and attitude toward association work of a large number of students. Printed lists of names according to church preferences were made out and were sent to the respective churches in the Back Bay. Within these lists the Y. M. C. A. requested that such students should be enabled to become temporary members while at the institution. In this way Tech. Y. M. C. A. was enabled to work with the churches, and not against them in any part of the church work. The temporary membership idea was taken up by a large number of churches, thus preventing the students from becoming church tramps."

Don S. Gates, Dartmouth '05, has been engaged as College Secretary for Technology Y. M. C. A.

The next student volunteer convention is to be held at Nashville, Tenn., from February 28 to March 4.

A very interesting game of basketball was played in Melrose last Saturday, between the Y. M. C. A. juniors of Winchester and Melrose. The latter winning by a score of 17 to 10.

The summary:

MELROSE: Ref. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32, 33, 34, 35, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52, 53, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100.

Winchester Y. M. C. A. defeated the second team of Company A. Wakenfield, quite handily at Winchester Tuesday evening, winning by the score of 19 to 4. The Winchester Y. M. C. A. second team defeated the Boston University freshmen team by the score of 24 to 6.

The league games of basketball which are usually the order for Tuesday evenings were not played this week on account of the two basketball games, which will be played on Tuesday evening next week.

The Post Mark Club held its regular meeting last Wednesday afternoon, nine members being present.

Saturday morning, Feb. 3d, a basketball game will be played between the Malden Juniors and Winchester Juniors. At home.

On Wednesday, 7th, at 5 p. m., Everett Juniors will play Winchester. At home. Next Sunday afternoon Mr. E. Walter Packard, General Secretary of the South bridge, Mass., association, will speak to the boys. Subject: "The Gospel Race Course." Bible classes as usual after the meeting.

Next Tuesday evening at 6:30 there will be a Bible class supper followed by a discussion and a social evening.

Twenty three Winchester ladies attended the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary Conference of the Third District at Winter Hill, Wednesday, Mrs. Charles A. Dwight representing the home association and read a paper upon What Do We Use of Our Talents.

High School Minstrel Show.

Rehearsals are now being held for the minstrel show, which the senior and junior classes will give on April 20th instead of the annual class plays.

The coach is Mr. Charles T. Harrold, well known about town in theatrical circles, and as one who has "made good" in many former minstrel shows.

Those who will take part are as follows:—Interlocutor, Carlyle Atherton; ends, tambos, Miss Margaret Hunt, Miss Ethel Hanson, Robert J. Carpenter and Paul B. Badger; bones, Miss Helen Ayer, Miss Rhonda Foley, Clarence Mobbs and Charles E. Richardson; front circle, Misses Briggs, Sullivan, Cole, Lovering, and Messrs. Harold Webber, John Barnard, Robert Barr and Fred Grant. A dance will be given by Miss Beatrice de Bussey and Sanford Ames. Mr. Philip Dickson will also be seen in a specialty. Solos will be sung by Miss Marion Cole, Miss Ethel L. Hanson, Miss Helen Foley, Miss Elizabeth Winn, Miss Rhonda Foley and Paul B. Badger, Sanford Ames and Clarence Mobbs. A duet will be sung by Miss Margaret Hunt and Mr. Charles E. Richardson.

Mr. Sanford Ames will do some clog dancing, and selections will be given by a string quintette of banjos, guitar and mandolins.

The chorus is composed of Misses E. Winn, Elsie Adams, May Winn, Esther Parker, Gertrude Russell, Marie Russell, Bertha Waldmyer, Josephine Wingate, Dorothy Fowler, Gladys Mendum, Helen Edelfson, Gladys Blake and Beatrice de Bussey. Adna Smalley, David J. Winter, Timothy Donovan, Harold Robinson, Edward Mason, Roy Atherton, Ralph Sawyer, Charles Donahue, Harold Caldwell, Ernest Symmes, Almed Little, Lambert Hunt, Philip Redfern and Sanford Ames.

The closing chorus to be sung at the show is a song entitled "High School for evermore," music of which was written by Charles C. Richardson '07, words by Robert J. Carpenter, '06, Miss Dorothy Coit and Dorothy Power '07.

Castle Square Theatre.

One of the most important productions of the season will be made by the Boston Stage Society at the Castle Square Theatre, by arrangement with E. H. Sothern. "The Proud Prince" will be given its first stock company presentation in Boston, with all the scenery, costumes and electrical effects that played a notable feature of Mr. Sothern's repertory several seasons ago. This play, by Justin Henry McCarthy, the author of "If I were King," is a beautifully romantic and dramatic treatment of the story made popular by Longfellow in "King Robert of Sicily," one of the long narrative poems in the "Lays of a Wayside Inn." It recounts the disgrace and the fall from power of the king who had usurped the prerogatives of the Almighty, and its scene display has rarely been equalled on the modern stage. Its transformation scene, the thrilling duel, the storm effects, and above all the possibilities for the most artistic acting, are sufficient to carry the play to instantaneous success at the Castle Square. In every way it promises to be the most popular and effective production this season.

The cast will be a long one, and it will include every member of the large and versatile stock company at the Castle Square.

Winchester Hockey Team Won

A Winchester team, composed mostly of country club members played a match game of hockey with Dedham on Wedge pond Saturday, defeating them 10 to 2. The Winchester team was made up of the following well known men: James Nowell, James Russell, Jr., Arthur Hudson, Summer Metcalf, Maud Hurd, Nelson Skellings, and Steve Gifford of West Medford. Dedham arrived with only six players, and so Lambert Hunt filled a place. Later in the game Charlie Richardson filled another Dedham players position.

The Winchester team, which represents the Country club, will play several games, including a return game with Dedham, and, if possible, a match with Brae Burn.

A Stratagem of Letters

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1905, by Charles W. Fielding

MY visitor had an excellent counterfeit of a frank demeanor, yet I observed that he desired strict privacy for our interview and that he was interested in the question whether the sound of our voices would penetrate the thin partition which separated my modest sanctum from the composing room of the newspaper. He drew a chair very close to mine and laid a clipping on the desk.

"Could you tell me," said he, "who wrote that article?"

It was a laborious disquisition on the reading of cryptograms and had been printed in last week's Saturday supplement with small hope on my part that it would amuse anybody in our town.

"Certainly," said I. "It was written by David Graham, foreman of my composing room."

"Could I see Mr. Graham?" he asked.

"You may send him your card," said I; "the real one, not the one you sent to me."

He eyed me with mild surprise.

"What makes you think," he began, but I cut him upon him.

"I don't think I know. You are a postoffice detective, and your name is

Charles Baxter. You are in this town to investigate the robbery here last week. I'm investigating it also as a part of my business, and that's how I happen to know you."

"Right," said he. "But as for the card."

"We shall not need it now. I'll send for Mr. Graham."

My foreman was a tall, thin, long faced Scot with a hard mouth and a mild eye. The intellectual upper half of his head seemed to take a broad view and to enjoy the problems of this world, but from the bridge of his nose to the point of his chin he was the picture of narrow precision.

"I want you to help me in the matter of this postoffice robbery," said he, "and this is the first point. The job was done by two men, and we know one of them, but it's the other who has the plunder. The fellow we've got our eyes on hasn't a cent of it, and he is keeping away from it and from his pal. He's as small an article as I've encountered in many a day. We could arrest him and make her, I think, have a moral economy that he's guilty. I couldn't find a bit of the real evidence. And, anyhow, we should lose the pal and the swag, for it's a sure thing that our men wouldn't squeal.

He hasn't been near this town since the night of the robbery. He's living in a boarding house in Stoughton, twenty miles west of us, and his patience seems to be about as long suffering as ours. His only mistake is that he writes letters, and we've trapped one of them. He started to mail it yesterday afternoon and dropped it on the street. One of my men, who was shadowing him, nabbed it in a holy second, and here it is."

"WHO WROTE THAT ARTICLE?"

Baxter laid an envelope on the leaf of my desk between Graham and me.

We saw that it was addressed to Miss Annie Davenport, a young woman well known in our town and of understood good connections. I was amazed and curious that her name should be brought into a robbery case.

"It's open," said the detective to Graham. "See what you can make of it."

"I am not so clear as to that," answered Graham. "It would appear to me that I might like the young lady's permission."

Upon this Baxter made quite a flowery argument, speaking of the interests of justice and other lofty considerations, but Graham and I were not impressed.

"Who wrote this?" I asked when the detective paused for breath.

"You'll know the name," said he.

"Water Allen."

I did indeed know the name and the man. Allen was the sole survivor of a family that had once been prominent in Stockton since then. I knew, however, that he had once been very attentive to Annie Davenport, but had been supplanted in her affections. If indeed, he ever had a share in them, by a much better man, to whom she was now said by the gossips to be engaged. This was Stuart Farnsworth, son of our postmaster and himself a well-fledged lawyer not without clients.

"On the night of the robbery," said the detective, "Allen was seen and positively recognized within fifty yards of the postoffice just after the safe was blown, and he was running away. That's how sure we are of him. The man who saw him had sense enough to keep dark about it except to the post-office authorities. He didn't even tell the police, for which we're much obliged."

It was a fact that Allen's name had not been whispered in connection with the affair.

"Now, here's a curious circumstance," continued Baxter. "The other robber was seen, too, but not recognized. He may have been disguised or he may be a stranger. At any rate we have his description, and we know that he carried a large black hand bag. That bag doubtless contained $8,000 and more of Uncle Sam's money. He had sense enough not to run, and Billy Stern, the letter carrier, who was the man that saw him, had no idea that there was anything wrong with the fellow until after he heard that Allen had been seen running in the other direction empty handed. Then the meaning of the man with the big bag flashed upon Stern's mind, and he told me."

"Does the description fit anybody hereabouts?" asked Graham.

"Except for a beard, which might have been false, of course," said Baxter, "it would fit Stuart Farnsworth, the postmaster's son, fairly well. And there's a point. Young Farnsworth might have known of the unusual sum of money in the postoffice safe. But he seems to have a fair alibi. He was selling that evening on a young lady named Annie Davenport." And the detective tapped the envelope with his finger.

"It lies in my mind that the robbery was just 12," said Graham, "and the young man would not be staying at Miss Davenport's house."

"We learn that he left about 11," responded Baxter, "but the thieves were at work in the postoffice by 10 at the latest. It was better than a two hours' job on that safe. And now, Mr. Graham," he continued, "will you help me read this letter? It is in cipher, and we can't make anything of it. We have reason to assume that Allen has sent several to Miss Davenport since the robbery, and we think that we are described in trying to get at the bottom of this puzzle. The young lady may be entirely innocent, of course. It's probable that she knows nothing of Allen's connection with the robbery or that he is innocent. There's doubtless some letter by which she is made to hand on these letters to the right party."

"I'll say the same to her if I was you," said Graham. "Then you'll be in the way of learning the insides of all this."

Baxter balked at this suggestion, but we succeeded in persuading him, and he set out for the house where Miss

Davenport lived with her widowed mother. I gave him a note of introduction to the young lady and some rather severe admonitions as to his behavior, for I could see that he vaguely suspected her of some (perhaps unconscious) complicity in this affair. He was gone about two hours and returned both pleased and puzzled. Our afternoon edition had gone to press by that time, and Graham and I gave Baxter our undivided attention.

"This is a queer business," said he.

"I'll be hanged if I understand it. But here's the story: A few days after the robbery Miss Davenport got a note from Allen. He told her some sort of a faked up story about being bothered by his debts and the noble resolve that he had made to pay them all. It was necessary, he wrote, that he should communicate secretly with a friend in this town. Would Miss Davenport receive the letters and simply hold them until the friend should come and claim them? She need not answer; he would take it for granted that she would do this small service for one whom she had once been gracious enough to count among her friends. Since then she has received five letters and has held them unopened on the theory that they were not for her. The friend has not appeared. I made her understand mightily clearly that this was a part of the postoffice robbery, and naturally she didn't like the idea. Here are the letters and her written permission for a scrap of writing; no semblance of any communication whatever.

"Well, this knocks my eye out," said

Baxter. And then, with sudden energy: "These envelopes have been opened. I see the whole game. Stuart

Farnsworth is the man. These letters were not kept under lock and key; they were scarcely out of plain sight in a drawer of a writing desk in the inventor's sitting room. Farnsworth could get at them without the girl's knowledge."

Now, this looked reasonable enough, except that a partnership in burglary between two bitter rivals in love would be somewhat of a novelty, especially

STUART FARNSWORTH

with the young woman, an accomplice assistant in the nefarious schemes. My credulity was hardly equal to the demand upon it, and when I thought of what I knew about young Farnsworth's character I recoiled utterly.

"There is one point," Graham was saying, "Allen wrote this letter and lost it. Of course he would write another. Has it been received?"

"Not yet," said Baxter.

Graham glanced at the clock.

"There's our chance delivery today," he said. "It'll be due in a few minutes at Miss Davenport's house. Suppose we go up there."

Baxter accepted the suggestion, and we set out at once, reaching the house precisely in the nick of time. Billy

Stern was in the very act of delivering a letter to Miss Davenport at the gate.

Baxter, out of breath with waiting, merely extended his hand for the letter, and Miss Davenport gave it to him. The detective tore open the envelope and drew forth a sheet of blank paper.

"This is too much for me," said he.

"I'll be hanged if I understand it."

He was interrupted by a sudden and surprising occurrence. Without the slightest warning Graham sprang up on Stern, the carrier, and the two men came heavily to the ground. Graham was much the stronger. He seized Stern's right wrist and wrenched his hand open. A crumpled paper was disclosed. Baxter stooped and seized it, and I saw as he held it up that it bore a letter written in Allen's cipher.

Graham rose, pulled Stern up after him; then he faced Baxter.

"Why, man," he cried, "how could ye doubt who was at the bottom of this business? Did ye really believe that those letters were opened after Miss

Davenport received them?"

"Do you mean that this fellow Stern has opened them?" demanded Baxter.

"That they were intended for his eyes, that the whole plot was between Stern and Allen?"

"Beyond a doubt," answered Graham.

"Stern's description of the second robber was an obvious lie intended to throw dust in your eyes and cast suspicion upon an innocent man—young Farnsworth. Stern saw no robber but Allen until he came to a looking glass and saw himself. He's a trusted man

ZANGWILL EPIGRAMS

CLEVER THINGS THE WITTY AUTHOR SAID ABOUT THE JEWS.

The Way He Compared His Corellgionists to United States Bonds—His Illustration of Some of the Striking Hebrew Characteristics.

Some years since Israel Zangwill
when on a visit to this country delivered an address in New York city to the Hebrew people. A few of the epigrams which he then coined concerning the characteristics of the Hebrews are here offered:

The Jews had no country of their own. They could not possess the land of their fathers in reality. So they made a portable Palestine. They carried it wherever they went. This was a spiritual country. It could not be assailed by their oppressors.

There have been two conceptions of the Jew—one that he lends money and wants it back again, the other that he deals in old clothes. The truth is Jews have been everywhere. They have been everything except pope of Rome, and they have come near to that. If they dealt in old clothes it was because papal decrees forbade them trading in anything else but old clothes and old iron.

Jews in a way were as good as United States bonds, only United States bonds may be converted, but when a Jew was converted he lost his value.

Because Shylock was rich and Jewish beautiful all Jews are rich and all Jewesses are beautiful. I wish it were so.

A good looking Jew was considered the fool of the family, which is consolation for some of us.

The black plague swept over Europe.
The Jews escaped by reason of their different hygienic laws. The Christians charged them with poisoning the wells, and thousands of Jews were put to death for not dying of the plague.

Colonel Roosevelt told me that the Jews of his regiment were among his bravest soldiers, and when Hiss had to be killed it took a Jewess to do it.

Jews not only furnished money for Columbus' expedition, but his first lieutenant was a Jew. This officer discovered tobacco, which is greater than America.

Carlyle said the Jews had no humor, but Carlyle was a Scotchman.

A beggar stole a spoon from a wealthier member of his race who had entertained him. When detected the beggar said: "By taking the spoon I broke the eighth commandment, which says,
'Thou shalt not steal.' If I had not taken it I would have broken the tenth, which says, 'Thou shalt not covet.' I saw I had to break one commandment anyhow, so I thought I might as well have the spoon."

It has always been the desire of Jewish fathers, however rich, to have learned sons-in-law, however poor. I do not find this custom prevalent today.

To illustrate why there are no good Jews in fiction Mr. Zangwill related the story of the lion and the cub. The cub had seen a painting of Samson vanquishing the lion, and said to its parent: "I have seen many contests between lions and men, and always the men have been the victors. Why are there no pictures showing lions overpowering men?" "It is because we lions have no painters," was the parent's reply.

The Jews have been scattered to the four winds among all the nations of the earth. They have been of immense service to every country that has harbored them. It reminds me of the story of the crocodile which opened its mouth so that a bird might go into it and eat the leeches which annoyed it. There was mutual benefit from the operation.
It is not strange that sometimes the Jews find the crocodile's mouth closing upon them. It was natural that Jews should congregate around their synagogues. They became to some extent isolated from the people among whom they dwelt. This isolation brought with it suspicion, and suspicion caused more isolation for mutual protection.

In mediaeval times the nations of Europe had a conception of the Jewish character compared to which Shakespeare's Shylock was a saint. It was this that brought about the compulsory ghetto.

There are two general types of Jews, the German and the Spanish. The Spanish Jews speak a mixture of Hebrew and Spanish. The German Jews speak Yiddish, a mongrel of bad German and every other language in the world.

The Jews financed the crusades voluntarily and involuntarily. There was nothing they had not financed, not even their own persecutions.—New York Herald.

The Difference Between Two Poets.

Chimarus on being asked what was the difference between him and Klopstock replied: "Klopstock says, 'Thou who art my inferior and yet my equal, approach hither, and, stooping to the ground, relieve me of the burden of these dust-begrimed nether integuments,' whereas I simply say, 'Johann, come and pull off my boots.'"

Nothing in It.

Towne—I never saw a man who was so fond of entertaining as Hompek is.
It's really remarkable. Brown—Oh, that's not so strange. You see, his wife is quite pleasant to him when his wife's company in the house.—Philadelphia Press.

Quite a Difference.

"You won't be able to enjoy the same luxuries after you're married."
"Why not? I'm able to afford them."
"Oh, yes, I just said you wouldn't be able to enjoy them."—Judge.

The way to the heart is through the senses. Please the eyes and ears and the work is half done.—Chatterfield.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy
Which They Guarantee to Cure
the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine.
It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr.
Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casso, Mass., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for Dyspepsia, and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no
Poison, no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Peppermint, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact any of the ingredients usually found in so-called Dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit the poorest case of indigestion, sour stomach, or any other stomach trouble. Sample free. Address Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

The Human Voice.

One's signature is the fact that he two persons' voices are perfectly alike even as when one is informed by an authority on the subject that, though there are only nine perfect tones in the human voice, there is the astounding number of 17,522,186,044,415 different sounds. Of the 400,000 different muscles produce 10,000, and three indirect muscles produce 175,718,221, while all in co-operation produce the total given above.

A Generous Actor.

Sir Henry Irving once met a broken down actor in the Strand. "I need or sell you at the theater house," said Sir Henry. "The other gentleman is something about his ill luck and I shall be rich, and you will be poor tomorrow and I give you my seat at the box office."
He went, and the two actors awaiting him, with a...

Later in the evening, the wedding march, arranged as a trio for female voices, was played on the piano by Miss Alta Pond of Melrose Highlands, and sung by Miss Bessie B. Lane of Woburn, and Miss Ruth R. Sloan and Miss Marian B. Browning of Winchester. The bride was becomingly gowned in white silk muslin and carried a large bouquet of pink sweet peeps. Mr. Harold Whitcomb of Winchendon was the best man.

The ushers were Mr. Edwin W. Vose of Proctor, Vt., brother of the groom, and Mr. George H. Browning of Swampscott, brother of the bride.

The groom resided in this town for several years and has a large circle of acquaintances here. His father, George H. Vose, is the General Superintendent of the U. S. Machinery Company factory at Beverly.

After the ceremony and reception, at which Mr. and Mrs. Vose were assisted in receiving by their parents, the couple left on their wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in Beverly through the spring and summer.

VOL. XXV. NO. 33.

WINCHESTER, MASS., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1906.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

EDISON LIGHT CHARGES.

Higher Rates than Those Asked by Woburn Company.

A Correspondent Reviews Proceedings at the Meeting of Last Week.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

At the hearing before the Board of Selectmen last Thursday it appears to many citizens who were present that the real purpose of the gathering was lost sight of and good results in reconciling the differences between the public service corporation which lights so many of our homes and our streets, and the citizens who complain of increased bills, was defeated by the unfortunate squabbling over rules of procedure.

I do not accuse the chairman of intending so to do but the effect of his refusal to permit the asking of questions of the representative of the company during his address was to stifle the legitimate expression of just grievance and to forbid this agent either to explain or to offer to rectify things which were obviously wrong. For instance one of the earliest complaints from citizens, who were invited and given the opportunity to relate their troubles freely, was that of Mr. Snelling who wrote in plain figures upon the blackboard the facts concerning three separate bills rendered to the same customer at different periods.

By the first bill it appeared that in Nov. 1904 for the consumption of 57,000 watts the charge was $3.07; this under the management of the Woburn company. In November 1905, although the quantity consumed was considerably less, the bill was very much increased, and in December 1905 when the customer by dint of economy, sitting in the dark, got along with only 37,000 watts his bill was $6.12, or almost exactly double what the old company had charged for fifty per cent. more service! Here was the grievance of the assembled citizens stated in a nutshell. Every other complaint was similar in nature, differing only in degree. These figures of Mr. Snelling's remained upon the board in full sight of the meeting throughout the evening and the more they were studied the more outrageous did they appear.

The company's Agent, Mr. Hale, selected of his own free will this complaint as the first to be replied to, and his reply consisted in placing upon the board parallel to Mr. Snelling's figures the alleged amounts that would have been charged if the service had been performed in some other town.

These amounts were considerably in excess of the amounts charged here, but, nevertheless, they showed a diminishing ratio; that is, the amount, which would have been charged in Wakefield (was it?) for 37,000 watts was about two thirds what would have been charged for 57,000 watts, while in Winchester it appeared that the less light one consumed the more he had to pay.

Mr. Hale's figures were promptly disputed by one who knew and he immediately reduced them ten per cent. They were still further disputed and he confessed inability to make them right and with several voices clamoring questions, the chairman intervened and cut the matter short by turning the blackboard around so that not only the false and misleading figures of Mr. Hale but the correct and accusing figures of Mr. Snelling were hid from view and the question "why is this?" remained unanswered.

It appeared however, from the elaborate and involved explanations of Mr. Hale and Mr. Burdett that the citizens have no redress against the extortionate charges. No amount of careful economy in the use of light will avail to reduce your bills unless you cut out the current altogether, for the company claims that it must be paid for what it stands ready to do whether it is called upon to do it or not.

In Mr. Hale's illustration as a parallel case of the livery stable man who kept ten horses and therefore charged more per hour for one horse used one hour than he would charge for the same horse used ten hours, it would have been more complete if he had claimed that because he had to maintain ten horses to meet possible demands he should charge enough for the use of each horse to reimburse him for the keep of the ten.

If a livery man should undertake to do this I fancy he would shortly have a competitor or people would take to driving their own horses.

Under the system of charges adopted by the Edison Company, as I understood it, we are charged during the winter months for sixty hours' use of the maximum number of lamps we may have turned on at any single moment during the month. These are called the primary lamp hours and are charged at nine tenths of a cent per lamp per hour. The maximum number of lamps used at one time is ascertained by the so-called "discount meter" which looks like a thermometer and acts like a clinical thermometer, jumping up a degree with every extra lamp turned on but never falling back.

If your total consumption exceeds the number of lamp hours computed on this arbitrary basis, the fact is registered upon the other meter and you are charged for such excess as "secondary lamp hours" at six tenths of a cent per lamp per hour.

Now it will be seen that by this method the economical householder must be constantly on the alert to see that no lamp is turned on before some other is turned off. I have in mind a modest household where the following situation is liable to occur any evening. At the hour of preparation of the evening meal there is of course one lamp burning in the kitchen, and usually one in each of the two parlors. (It is impossible to instruct a maid servant that she must shut off the kitchen lamp when she goes into the parlor and vice versa, in fact you wouldn't do it yourself.) When the meal is served, two lamps are turned on in the dining room, the hall lamp is of course lighted. If a guest comes at this moment the piazza lamp flares up—the reception room lamp probably—a hasty visit to the furnace or the lavatory means a moment's illumination in each—if all these happen simultaneously, you are charged for 10 lamps 60 hours at 9 cents of $5.40 and you may go away and shut up your house for the rest of the month and it will make no difference in your bill!

Such a system is preposterously unjust and I have no doubt it properly presented to the Gas and Electric Light Commission would be remedied.

It Mr. Hale's lame explanation of the Snelling outrageous bills was understood it was to the effect that the old Woburn Company did not charge us enough; that we did not pay for what we got. If the present system had been in use when that consumer used 57,000 watts in Nov. 1904 his bill would have been over $10 instead of $3.07. I venture to say that if the Woburn Company had attempted such an extortion when the service was new, that those of hundreds of others would have been ripped out and the great Edison company would have found no such profitable field in which to try its new scheme.

The allegation that the old company did not know its business and gave us our lights too cheap seems absurd when it is recalled that the old company did earn money, did pay dividends, and its franchise was sold to the present company on the basis of 100.

What, by the way, did the Edison Company actually purchase of the Woburn Light, Heat and Power Co? Did the assets transferred include a list of contented subscribers who had no voice in choice of their masters? Now, before we become rooted and indifferent to these exorbitant and inconsistent charges is the time to appeal to the State board through whom we may get redress.

Ladies' Friendly Society.

The fortieth annual meeting of the Ladies' Friendly Society, of the Unitarian church, was held last evening. The attendance was so large as to tax to the utmost the capacity of the building, the largest in the history of the society. In the afternoon Mr. Lawrence read to the ladies an essay by Henry M. Simmons, and one by Samuel M. Crothers. The annual election of officers followed, resulting in the choice of the following:

Pres., Mrs. George H. Root; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Richard Metcalf; Sec., Mrs. H. Pratt; Treas., Mrs. Geo. Everett Pratt; Directors, Mrs. J. E. Young, Mrs. Francis Gray, Mrs. W. E. Beers, Mrs. J. T. Wilson, Mrs. Stuart Bishop, Mrs. H. Weed, Mrs. Geo. Edwin Pratt.

At seven o'clock supper was served, difficulty being found to seat the large assemblage. A feature of the supper that was much praised was the excellent coffee, provided gratuitously by Richardson's Market. Mr. Richardson personally superintending the serving. The supper was under the care of a committee of which Mrs. Fred M. Symmes was chairman, the other members being:

Mrs. Goffe, Mrs. Cummings, Mrs. Chamberlain, Mrs. Rogers, Mrs. Pettes, Mrs. Hosea, Mrs. Mansfield, Mrs. Fletcher, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Goodwin, Mrs. Bishop, Mrs. Tuck, Mrs. Preston, Mrs. Lane, Mrs. Pratt, Miss Chisholm, Miss Stevens.

An entertainment followed, with readings by Mrs. J. Eastman Chase, and two groups of duets by Mrs. F. W. Cole and Mrs. Wm. E. Miller, accompanied by Mrs. F. J. Wills. Only two persons were present who were at the first meeting, forty years ago, Mrs. Richard Metcalf and Mr. Samuel W. Twombly. The latter has been a guest at every one of the forty annual meetings of the Society and has never failed to furnish flowers for the tables. The assembly broke up at ten o'clock. The condition of the Friendly Society, and of the Unitarian Church, with which it is connected, is most prosperous.

Clothing Caught on Train.

Mr. Erasmo Piccolo of the firm of Volpe & Piccolo, fruit dealers in the center, had a very narrow escape from death at the railroad station Saturday noon. Mr. Piccolo had alighted from the 12:51 train from Boston, when he remembered that he had left his gloves in the car. He started to board the train, which was just starting, but missed his hold of the hand rail and fell against the forward end of the car. The force of the blow dazed him and some part of his clothing, he does not know how, caught on the car, and he was dragged along with the train for some 15 feet. The first intimation anyone had of the accident was when he was seen lying beside the tracks after the train had passed. He was picked up and taken to a doctor in Mr. Chas. A. Lane's carriage. His injuries were found to consist of bruises and scratches, his back and one leg being badly lamed. That he was not killed seemed a wonder, as the car which dragged him was next to the last and it was only luck that kept him from going under the wheels.

Calumet Club Notes.

Gen. William A. Bancroft will speak at the club on this Saturday evening on electric railroads, his talk being illustrated by stereoscopic views.

Mr. Harry Price has been admitted to membership in the club.

The bowling games scheduled for the 15th of March will be postponed, owing to the club's annual dinner, which will occur on that night.

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

Gleaned from Various Sources During the Present Week.

Some Candidates for General Clerk and Selectmen.

The political season may now be said to have opened. From what is heard the largest vote at a town election for many years will be cast, as the indications point to unusual interest on the part of citizens. The greatest interest will center in the election of a general clerk as recommended by the special committee, although there may be a vigorous fight for positions on the Board of Selectmen. The political gleanings of the week are presented below, and they give a fair impression of what is going on at the present time. Strenuous efforts, it may be said, will be made to sustain the recommendations of the special committee on improving town business.

Among the names mentioned this week for the office of Collector, Town Clerk, is that of Mr. William C. Newell, at present serving as Town Auditor. It can be said in this connection that Mr. Newell's intimate knowledge of town affairs and also with the finances, makes him one of the best equipped men in town for the combined positions of collector and clerk. He is an expert auditor by profession, and to him is due in great measure the admirable system of up-to-date-ness in the auditing department. If he intends to be a candidate, he has not yet given public notice of that fact, but rumor has said that he will.

A prominent gentleman who looks with much favor on Mr. Newell's candidacy, says that if he is nominated and elected, then he would strongly advocate Mr. Geo. H. Eustis for the office of Auditor. Mr. Eustis is a bookkeeper of long experience and could easily fill the position satisfactorily.

Mr. Clyde W. Bell, son of the present collector, Aaron C. Bell, has announced that he will be a candidate for the combined offices of Town Clerk and Collector. He has been associated with his father in the Town Hall for a number of years and is thoroughly familiar with all the duties of the Collector's office. He has also acted as Town Clerk on a number of occasions, so that he is conversant with the affairs of that office. In the advent of his election, he will have the assistance and experience of his father at his disposal if he should care to ask for them. For the duties that this new office will call for, Mr. Clyde W. Bell is said to be perfectly competent to perform them. He is a young man, a Winchester boy, and a year or more ago married a daughter of Mr. John S. Blank of this town, and resides at the Highlands.

Mr. George H. Carter, the present Town Clerk, will not be a candidate for the combined office, but will run for the Town Clerkship alone. He may be a candidate at the caucus, but it not will run on nomination papers.

Other candidates mentioned are: Mr. Fred V. Wooster, Mr. A. H. Richardson, Mr. Hayes Robbins.

New names reported for the Board of Selectmen are: Mr. William D. Richards, Frank L. Ripley. Of the present Board all will be candidates for re-election.

At the electric light hearing in the Town Hall last week, considerable dissatisfaction cropped out at the way the hearing was handled by Chairman Carter. A number of gentlemen present accused him of being impartial and favoring the Edison Co. This week it was reported that the matter would be carried into the caucus, and an attempt made to defeat him. As the other members of the Board, who were all present, agreed with Mr. Carter on the conduct of the meeting, it is not fair to single him out and not include the others, is the opinion of many present. As a matter of fact the Chairman and the other members of the Board aimed to be perfectly impartial, but the mistake was in the Selectmen conducting such a hearing. The most they should have done after opening the meeting was to turn its conduct over to the citizens and let them manage it as they thought best. One thing is certain if the Selectmen had the least particle of leaning toward the Edison Co. they would never have called the meeting for the purpose of protesting against high rates for electricity. Mr. Carter has long been accused of being a thorough anti-corporation man, and this is the first time to the knowledge of the writer that he has been said to favor them.

Mr. George H. Eustis has sent in his name to Town Clerk Carter to be placed on the official ballot for the offices of Collector of Taxes, Town Clerk and Trustee of the Library, to be voted for at the caucus. All desiring to run for an office or who wish a renomination to their present office, will be obliged to send their names to Mr. Carter on or before 9 o'clock a. m., Wednesday, if they wish it placed on the caucus ballot. Mr. Eustis is at present a member of the Board of Library Trustees.

The report having become started that

Mr. Frank E. Rowe would be a candidate for the general clerkship of the town, he wishes the STAR to state that he is not out for the position and that he does not want it.

Supt. of Streets Spates will be a candidate for appointment as superintendent of streets, sewer, water and parks.

Mr. William H. Herrick has signified his intention of becoming a candidate for Auditor. Mr. Herrick, it will be remembered, held this office a few years ago, resigning because of business interests. Like the present Auditor, Mr. Newell, he is an expert accountant.

Mr. Henry F. Johnson is a candidate for Auditor and announces himself as such in a letter printed in another column.

That Public Lighting Meeting.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The Selectmen held the public meeting upon the electric light charging last week Thursday night to see if sufficient evidence would be produced to justify their petitioning the Commission for redress if the Edison Company did not in the near future rectify the matter. This was distinctly and several times stated to the meeting but apparently a number of people had attended with a prearranged plan to spring the question of the town establishing a lighting plant and were bound to push it through. This motion was drawn and presented by a member of the bar who it would seem must have known it was entirely out of order, besides having the absurdity of proposing that this meeting should undertake to appoint a committee to report at a town meeting, when of course town meetings always appoint their own committees and would and should resent and refuse to receive the report of any committee appointed outside. The meeting not only did not know the law in the case but apparently did not want to know it and acted very differently from what Winchester meetings have in the past. Those who were responsible for the disorder are without exception comparatively newcomers to the town and did not know that we went all through the question of establishing a town electric lighting plant a dozen years ago. Possibly the mover of the motion was performing an act of contrition for he is the secretary of the town committee of the political party which only last fall elected as representative for this district an officer of this same Edison Company. My position on the questions at issue is this: I am opposed to a municipal plant because I am satisfied we can do better under the circumstances by purchasing current from the company, and as a general proposition I prefer control to public ownership and operation. The theory and practice (with exceptions which are the people's own fault) of Massachusetts in re public service corporations is that those who put in the money must be allowed to earn if they can and have a reasonable return upon the capital actually invested and beyond that all must go back to the public in improved service and reduced rates. I believe the laws are ample to enforce this, but if in any respect they are not they can readily be amended to meet it. So long as the people do not at least try to redress under the present laws, why should we take the risks of public ownership? Now, having said so much, I will add in closing that I believe the Edison Company can afford and ought to reduce its current charge and I doubt whether its system is proper. The thing to do is to carry the matter before the commission for redress. The talk being made about town by some people that I am a corporation man is amusing, unless they mean the corporation of the Town of Winchester, as I have always prided myself that my record in this respect was different and that I had accomplished something for the public in that line, but when it is my duty to conduct a hearing I shall do it fairly to all as I see it and am not to be bulldozed by any clamor, even on the eve of a caucus and election.

Yours very truly,

JOHN H. CARTER.

Ladies' Afternoons at Calumet Club.

The following ladies have been appointed to have charge of the ladies' afternoons at the Calumet Club during the remainder of the season: Mrs. M. A. Cummings, Mrs. D. N. Skillings, Mrs. F. A. Cutting, Mrs. Fred Clark, Mrs. Henry Weed.

These ladies have arranged for a Military Whist to be held at the club on the afternoon of Feb. 22nd, to which the gentlemen are invited. Whist will be played from 2:30 to 5 o'clock and there will be dancing from 5 to 6. The committee request that all desiring to attend send their names in to them by Feb. 17th, in order that proper provisions may be made.

The club will also be open to the ladies on each Friday afternoon for pool, bowling or whist.

Surprised by His Friends.

Last Friday evening was the tenth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Foster of Grove street, and the event was made the occasion for a surprise party to Mr. Foster by about twenty five of his friends and neighbors. The visitors were all in ghostly raincoat, and Mr. Foster was the recipient of many articles of tinware for the household. The evening was spent with games, refreshments and dancing.

TWENTY THOUSAND DOLLARS

To be Asked for to Suppress the Moths.

Unless Other Appropriations are Cut Tax Rate May be $2 Higher.

Tree Warden Guild will ask for an appropriation of $20,000 at the town meeting in March for the suppression of the gypsy and brown tail moths. It is said that if this big sum is granted that the appropriations for other departments will have to be cut considerably in order to keep the tax rate down. If this sum is expended, then the State will reimburse the town to the extent of 80 per cent. Notwithstanding this there will be great need of economy, and even then the tax rate may be $2 more than last year because of the fact that every city and town in the infested district can, if they so desire, spend equally as large if not larger amounts according to requirements and be entitled to the same rebate from the State, then the increase in the rate will come through a big state tax.

As this conditions of affairs is to last for at least five or six years, there should be a wholesale cutting down of the town's shade trees, many of which are in bad condition. The Warden should be allowed full liberty to do this without the customary hearings. When the pests are brought under control, if that should ever occur, then new trees can be set out.

In the meantime there is every reason to keep cool and not let the fear of the moths frighten the people out of their pocketbooks. Under the most favorable conditions those in authority state that if a parasite should be found that it will not be ready to commence work under five or six years. At the rate of $20,000 a year, it will cost during five years $100,000 simply in an effort to keep the moths in check in this town.

An Explanation.

Boston, Feb. 8, 1906.

The following statement covers one point which did not seem to be thoroughly understood at the Electric Light Meeting on Feb. 1st:

The general rate for the ordinary customer of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in Winchester is the so-called Non-contract rate.

On this rate there is a charge of 9-10 of a cent per lamp hour with free lamp renewals equal to 18.2 cents per kilowatt hour which may be compared to the 18 cents per kilowatt hour in Wakefield without free lamps.

There is no charge for any current that is not used (except where less than one dollar's worth is used) and the rate is never higher than 9-10 of a cent per lamp hour. The indicator or thermo-meter sometimes used at the average rate by giving some current at 6-10 of a cent per lamp hour but never raises the rate above 9-10 of a cent.

The indicator shows how much of the current is entitled to the low price but never raises the price above 9-10 of a cent.

No current is ever charged for unless used.

We have offered the special Investigating Committee every detail of information they require and we shall be glad to give the same to any individual.

Discussion of Secret Societies.

A public address and discussion will be held in the small town hall on Tuesday evening, Feb. 27th, for the purpose of discussing the secret societies in the High School.

The meeting is the growth of the annual "fathers' night" of the Mothers' Meeting of the Congregational church, of which Mrs. Frank L. Ferguson is the president. It was originally the intention of the Mothers' Meeting to simply hold the regular "father's night," and Rev. John W. Suter was asked to deliver the address of the evening, taking for his subject "Our High School and Secret Societies." As the subject was of sufficient interest to many parents outside the Mothers' Meeting, it was decided to hold the meeting in the assembly hall at the High School, but this was found impossible, and with the prospect of such a large number attending, the Selectmen were asked for the use of the small town hall, which they granted, with the refusal of the large hall if necessary.

Rev. Mr. Suter will be the speaker of the evening, and his address will be followed by a general discussion upon the subject. There will be a musical program arranged for the evening under the direction of Mr. Ernst Mäkelä, the school supervisor of music.

The Annual Town Report.

The Town Report has arrived, the earliest date it has ever been received, and will be distributed at once, although the warrant and the Appropriations Committee report will not be ready for two weeks. It is a good looking book printed on thinner paper than last year's and containing one hundred and seventeen fewer pages, for which relief many thanks. The valuations list is not printed crosswise of the page, as it always has been before, which is a decided improvement.

Several of the reports made to the Selectmen have been only extracted from but the board announces in a foot note that the detailed reports are on file in its room for reference. The Auditor's report is just half the length of last year's. There is many special committee reports. There is an index only of the Auditor's accounts, the printers must have forgotten the others. As the book will reach you so soon, we will not comment upon the various reports but bespeak for them all a careful reading as it is your past year's business that is set forth and you should see where and how your hard earned money has gone.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

With all due respect for our highly esteemed Committee on Consolidation of Offices, I would kindly call their attention to the following "facts" concerning the Collectors Office hours, also fees received. In their report, they name the office hours, as from 2:30 to 5 o'clock p. m., except Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

AARON C. BELL.

Who has served the town for fifteen years as Tax Collector.

whereas his office hours are from 8 o'clock a. m. until 12:30 p. m., also 2 until 5:30 p. m. Also Saturday evenings during the busy season of the year, from 7 until 9:30. He is also in his office (for office work only) nearly half the evenings throughout the year. In order to accomplish these duties thoroughly, and faithfully, he employs an assistant throughout the year and extra assistance in the busiest time, and remunerates them out of his own salary of fourteen hundred dollars, thereby reducing it to some seven hundred dollars. His office does a business of some two hundred and sixty thousand dollars annually. His fees are estimated by the committee, at from four, to six hundred dollars, whereas the fees for 1904 were $382.16 and for 1905, $149.58, or an average of $265.87 per year.

There is honor enough in knowing that one has had the good will of his fellow townsmen for the past forty years' residence in the charming town of Winchester, and filling the office of Collector for the time of fifteen years without a dissenting voice. I would kindly say that I am not a candidate for the consolidated offices.

CONGRATULATORY LETTER.

From Rev. S. W. Adrians to U. S. C. E.

The United Society of Christian Endeavor, Boston, received a congratulatory letter on the 25th anniversary of the Endeavor Society from Rev. Samuel Winchester Adrians, the First General Secretary of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, as follows:

In the marvellous growth of the Christian Endeavor movement, many new forms of Christian service have been developed; but the years which have elapsed since the inception of that crusade have emphasized the wisdom of the founder in his insistence upon what was early termed the "iron-clad pledge."

This at the start was the feature of the movement especially selected as a target for the criticism of some and the derision of others. Many even of the friends accepted this feature dubiously or half-heartedly, while others amended it in such a way as to kill it.

The years since then have triumphantly vindicated the wisdom of the founder in giving it the central position of honor which it held. Wherever it has been cordially accepted and faithfully adhered to, it has been followed by success in the society and continued growth in the individual. Wherever it has been so amended as to rob it of its original purpose, and has been reduced to the mere giving out of a hymn to be sung, or the rapid reading of a brief passage of Scripture, the work has lagged and interest has died out.

If it be heroic to do so simple a thing as recite Scripture faithfully learned at home, or offer a prayer, no matter how brief, or give expression to truth or experience in one's own words, as taught by the living test of the life, if this, which after all is not so heroic a thing to do, can be termed heroic, let us by all means return to that early heroism of the movement.

It is good to be constant, and faithful, and resolute, and heroic. These qualities will always appeal to anyone who is longing to do real things in the best way. We do not want to make the requirements so exacting as to discourage; far less do we want to make them so trivial as to be meaningless. To be meaningless in religion is to be ludicrous to the world. May the Christian Endeavor movement ever be, to every noble soul, synonymous for all that is inspiring, and earnest, and effective.

Winchester, Mass.

Would the Town do Different?

EDITOR OF THE STAR: It was with much interest that I listened to the discussion at the meeting held in the Town Hall last week Thursday evening to protest against the increase in electric light bills. I have wondered since then how much real information those attending received. To be sure we all put in a kick, and all on the same line, but the electric light people had a ready answer and a plausible story which was not entirely satisfactory to those present. The real trouble lies in being obliged to pay for the so-called capacity charge, and not solely for the amount of current used. This system is wrong. Pay for what current you use, the same as for gas, is the only fair way.

The meeting seemed to be almost unanimously of the opinion that a municipal plant would remedy all the trouble. Would it? In the matter of exaction it would be found in the end that the town would be fully as insistent as the Edison Company and perhaps more so. Take the matter of metered water rates for instance. For a dwelling house where a meter is not required the rate is $4 per year. The minimum meter rate for a store or an office, $12 a year. No one will say that a store or an office uses one half as much water during a year as does the smallest dwelling house in town. Then why should the charge be so much higher? It can be said of the Edison Co. that it uses its small consumers of electricity the same. The objectionable capacity charge evidently enters where a water meter is used.

Another instance, was that at the time of the coal famine, when it was impossible for the person of moderate means to purchase coal, and exceedingly difficult to even get wood. The Cemetery Board had wood for sale only in limited quantities during those cold and anxious days. Did they sell it at the price prevailing previous to the strike? No, they exacted the highest price. It will be the same with a municipal lighting plant—the town will demand the highest market rates for lighting, and if there should be a deficit, Mr. Ginn and the other large taxpayers will have to stand the greatest share of the loss. This whole matter should be thoroughly investigated before the town is committed to the scheme of a municipal electric lighting plant.

A Broad Hint.

Rev. Dr. Sims does not encourage tardiness. On Sunday morning the choir was slightly behind time. Precisely at 10:30 Dr. Sims arose and announced that the congregation will sing the doxology. It was the most diplomatic rebuke that has been administered from the pulpit for a long time. It is safe to guess that the choir will be on time next Sunday.—[Melrose Journal.]

Favors More Consolidation.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I lived for several years in a Massachusetts town where the town clerk also served as treasurer and collector for a long time and with much satisfaction to the town. If I understood one of the consolidation committee at the town meeting of last week he said that Winchester's town clerk could not serve as treasurer because the clerk had to certify to certain transactions of the treasurer. I think he is mistaken, for upon looking over the bound town reports of Winchester in the public library, I find that Winchester's town treasurer in years past has also served at the same time as collector and town clerk. The predecessor of the present treasurer filled these several offices with good result to the town so far as the reports show. The gentleman holding these consolidated offices died in office (or he might have served many years longer) and the public recognition of the value of his services is well attested to in the town reports referred to.

Consolidation of town office is no new thing; it is practised all over the state to day. It can take place at any election of town offices. In many places, perhaps in most towns, the selectmen are also chosen assessors. In my experience in large and small country towns this has worked well. It is also a good thing to elect one man to serve as treasurer and collector when the town pays for the bond as I find is the custom in Winchester. From what I have observed in Winchester, consolidation of town offices is generally approved, but it should be enforced, where it is practical, in the conduct of every town office, not in the collectorship and town clerkship alone. Why should not the office of water register be merged into the office of town clerk? It is only a clerkship for the water board. Consolidation is bound to come in the conduct of town affairs in Winchester, but it will come much sooner and be more satisfactory if all the offices are treated alike and all the present town officers take the same dose of additional work or loss of position.

MORE CONSOLIDATION.

Startling But True.

People the world over were horrified on learning of the burning of a Chicago theater in which nearly 600 people lost their lives, yet more than five times this number or over 3,000 people died from pneumonia in Chicago during the same year, with scarcely a passing notice. Everyone of these cases of pneumonia resulted from a cold and could have been prevented by the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A great many who have had every reason to fear pneumonia have ward it off by the prompt use of this remedy. The following is an instance of this sort: "Too much much cannot be said in favor of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and especially for colds and influenza. I know that it cured my daughter, Laura, of a severe cold, and I believe saved her life when she was threatened with pneumonia." W. D. WILSON, Logan, New York. Sold at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

His Motion to Invite Mr. Lawson.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Your report of my motion to invite Mr. Lawson to address our people, in your last issue was correct, but it failed to state that I asked for a unanimous consent to put the motion, and only three opposed it, in that large meeting. This statement of fact is due every one present. Please make it and oblige.

Yours respectfully,

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Mother's Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a favorite with the people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children, for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Newsy Paragraphs.

It is said that the Swifts of Chicago, have declined to buy the tanning trust known as the American Hide & Leather Company at Woburn, the negotiations having fallen through. The Swifts and Armours have no use for Massachusetts other than to compel the people to pay extortionate prices for meats.

The town library is up with the times. The latest and best fiction and standard works are always on the shelves.

The ways and means committee are hoping to keep the state tax down to $3,000,000 this year, instead of the $5,000,000 levy of a year ago. If the stock transfer tax bill of Rep. Dean's goes through it is estimated that the state's revenues would be increased about $1,000,000 and it would be probable to cut the levy to $2,500,000 or less.

Interested persons should not base any hopes on the reports that the plant of the United Shoe Machinery Co. in this town is to be started up again. The managers knew fully well what was before them when they moved the plant to Beverly, so that it is unlikely they will again go to the expense of refitting the big shop here, however much we are disposed to wish they would.

Those cities and towns that entered the Metropolitan water system, because of the expense for water, are urging the use of meters. How fortunate it was that Winchester did not enter the system. Meters, in many instances, would be a menace to health.

We must come to the conclusion that the extermination of the moth is not a local affair, but that the whole state and the whole country is involved. Unless national aid is secured, the local communities will be unable to carry the burden of taxation to which the work is leading.

The Winchester STAR complains that Winchester has only six letter carriers while West Medford, with less population, has three, and asks for a remedy. Why not get annexed to West Medford? —[Medford Mercury.] Thank you, but Winchester is doing very well.

In considering painting your house now or in the spring, consult F. O. and W. O. Newth. They are first class men, prompt, obliging, and their prices are moderate.

It is a blot on the state's record when she is so careful that those of her responsible citizens, in each community who engage in banking privileges are so guarded by laws, that in some cases their real honest work is unduly crippled while irresponsible parties by some fly-by-night methods like those of the Provident Securities Company and various Italian banks, can gather in the shekels of the poorer class with impunity, and then sink them through fraud or carelessness, leaving losers to mourn and find no comfort in laws that should be found to protect them. But after all, the losers have no one to blame but themselves. If they would seek for information they would find in their own town responsible banking institutions, safely and surely guarded, that would take their scant savings and safely invest them to mutual profit of both parties. But anything which has a romantic side, or out of the way method always appeals to a certain class who in the end learn that they have a right to be called fools.

After having existed for more than half a century, transacting business, electing trustees, buying land, building church edifices and parsonages, the Melrose Methodist Episcopal Church finds that it has no legal existence, that its acts are void under the Massachusetts statutes and that it must secure a special enactment of the Legislature to make its corporation legal and sanction its business transactions for the past half a century.

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Do not make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Hose Coupling Contest at Calumet Club.

On Saturday evening the Calumet Club was filled with members and visitors for the usual week's end entertainment. The program was the most novel given thus far this winter, consisting of short talks on fire matters by two of the foremost men connected with fire matters in the State, and a hose coupling contest between six of the crack teams of this section, to say nothing of a team from the club itself.

The speakers of the evening were Chief James R. Hopkins of Somerville and Captain William Brophy of Boston, Chiefs William C. Devol of Fall River and Harry L. Marston of Brockton were also to have made addresses but were unable to attend owing to sickness and duty. Chief Hopkins, who enjoys the distinction of being the second oldest fire chief in the United States, with a record of almost fifty years in the service, read a paper previously prepared, which was of an interesting nature. He took as his subject the Winchester department. Captain Brophy, who was formerly chief of the Worcester fire department, followed, with a very interesting sketch of the growth of the fire departments in the United States. His talk was interspersed with several personal experiences, and was thoroughly enjoyed.

At the close of the speaking, the hose coupling contest took place. Six teams entered, the prize being captured by the first team on the program, C. Fish and Preston of Wakefield, in 16 2/5 sec. Second prize was taken by Tansey and Newhall of Stoneham, in 18 sec. The other teams in order were: Gay and Tierney of Arlington, Griffin and Pero of Lexington, Callahan and Cunningham of Woburn and O'Leary and Tansey of Winchester.

The Calumet team was composed of Lane and Tenney, and they were in a class by themselves. While not making so fast time as the other teams, they were the only team which had the honor of extinguishing a real fire, although much handicapped by losing some of their clothes and a lack of water. It being a cold night they went to bed together, and the touch of the feathers was so restful that neither responded to the first tap of the gong, although their trousers and shoes promptly went up in the air. Chief Irving L. Symmes, who had the teams in charge, decided that it would take a whole alarm to get them up, and so he rang in box 34. This aroused them, and they immediately opened their dry goods box fire station and pulled out their apparatus, consisting of a toy steamer and hose wagon, with which they dashed madly down the hall, at the end of which a fierce fire was blazing in an iron pan. Tenney handled the nozzle and Lane the engine, and the cup of water which the engine held was distributed over the audience in a most impartial manner. These gentlemen won a special prize for their skill and bravery.

The prizes awarded consisted of large steins, and following the exhibition a collation was served in the billiard room.

WALNUT CAKE.

Reserve enough unbroken halves of English walnut meats to decorate the icing of a cake, then chop enough to make one cup. Cream one-half cup of butter, add two cups of sugar and the yolks of four eggs beaten until lemon colored. Add three cups of pastry flour in which three level teaspoons of baking powder have been sifted. Alternate with the flour one cup of milk, then add the cup of chopped nuts and the whites of four eggs, beaten until stiff and dry, and a teaspoon of vanilla flavoring. Bake in a square or oblong pan in a moderate oven. Cover with a white icing and decorate with the halves of nuts. When the icing is partially set crease into squares with a silver knife.

Before creaming the butter fill the bowl with hot water and turn it out at once. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff after the yolks and the sugar and the butter have been combined then let them stand while the milk and flour are being added. Never allow the beaten white of egg to stand long as it liquefies rapidly and upon its lightness depends much of the quality of the cake.

When a cake shrinks from the pan, leaves no indentation under pressure from the finger, or makes a singing sound, it is done. For obvious reasons do not try a cake with a straw from a broom that has been used.

There will probably be no contests excepting in the cases of Selectmen, Town Clerk and Collector. There has been no talk thus far of any serious opposition to any member of the present Board of Selectmen. There will be, however, in the cases of Collector and Town Clerk. If the vote of the town meeting of last week is carried out at the polls, one and the same man will be elected to fill these two offices. In this regard the existing promises to be sharp and interesting as there may be several candidates for these combined offices which will give the lucky winner a salary of $2000 and the assistance of a clerk.

Teachers' Pension Fund.

A bill (Senate No. 50) has been introduced into the legislature which will interest Winchester people, particularly those who are engaged in public school teaching. The bill accompanies the petition of the Massachusetts Board of Education for legislation authorizing cities and towns to establish a pension fund for public school teachers.

It provides that on petition of not less than twenty-five legal voters, there shall be inserted in the warrant of an annual town meeting or on the ballot at an annual city election the question: "Shall a pension fund be established for the retirement of teachers in the public schools?" A majority vote in the affirmative shall be deemed an acceptance of the act's provisions, and such fund shall then be established; the fund shall be derived from such revenues as may be devoted to the purpose by the city council or by direct appropriation by a town; the school committee shall fix the conditions as to age, length of service and disability, and the ratio of pension to salary on which teachers may be retired at the expense of the fund; the treasurer of the city or town shall be the custodian of the fund, and shall make annual payments therefrom to such persons and of such amounts as shall be certified to him by the school committee.

Sick Headache.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose of two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. In fact, the attack may be warded off, or greatly lessened in severity, by taking a dose of these Tablets as soon as the first symptom of an attack appears. Sold at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Soap Suds Will Not Kill Moths.

In reply to the assertion that soap suds will not kill the moths when trees are sprayed, Mr. H. S. Hunnewell, Tree Warden of Natick, says in the Natick Bulletin:

Soap suds being a contact poison must be applied with great strength in order to kill the insects, the danger is that if applied with sufficient strength to accomplish this object, it is very likely to injure the foliage. It is far safer and almost as cheap to spray the young foliage of trees, especially the fruit trees with disparene, which is only another name for arsenate of lead. This clings to the leaves in spite of rain and colors them sufficiently to make its presence visible. It is not a contact poison, but has to be eaten by the worm before it acts. There is not the slightest danger in using it, nor is there any danger to cattle through the supposed poisoning of the grass. It is death to all insect enemies, the elm leaf beetle, gypsy and brown tail moths, and the countless worms that thrive on our fruit trees.

Orchard owners can do no greater public service than by spraying their fruit trees. The expense is not great especially when several owners club together and hire some one to do the whole job. There is no surer way of getting rid of insect pests than by spraying and I feel sure that it would be safer for all to use a well tried and a reliable solution rather than make experiments with untried novelties.

A Fortunate Young Lady

Miss Jennie Martin, 176 North Paul street, Rochester, N. Y., says: "I suffered long from kidney complaints—home physicians and their medicines failed to afford me relief. A friend induced me to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy made at Rondout, N. Y. The effect was wonderful. By the time I had taken two bottles I was completely cured and have had no trouble since."

A small ad in the STAR is almost certain to bring results, that is the reason this paper has so many wants, to let, lost, found, etc.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The Loyal Temperance Legion will meet Wednesday, Feb. 14, in the Baptist Church vestry at 3:45.

Do not forget the Middlesex Convention Tuesday, Feb. 13, in the Baptist Church, Woburn. Sessions at 10 and 2. Owing to urgent business in connection with entertaining the world's convention in Boston, it is important that the Union be well represented. Mrs. Stevenson, State president, will address the convention in the forenoon on "What does it mean to Massachusetts?" In the afternoon a report of the National Convention will be given by one who was a delegate.

The meeting in Pilgrim Hall, Monday afternoon, notice of which was given in STAR, was interesting from first to last continuing three hours, it did not seem half as long. The president of Boston W. C. T. U. led the first hour and shared her time with Mr. John Nichols who spoke for twenty minutes upon the obstacles and how to overcome them. Mrs. Hall Herrick sang several selections acceptably. Mrs. Gleason, president of Suffolk Co. Union, led the second hour and introduced her pastor from Roslindale Congregational Church whose topic was "In what does the power of the W. C. T. U. consist?" First he said the power depends largely upon Frances E. Willard, she was the embodiment of the highest thinking—mingling as she did with all classes of best men—she had absorbed much of the learning, and further he said that in reply to the question "what have you women done," you have given to the world Francis E. Willard—for undoubtedly it had she not come into your ranks she would have been doing some literary work that would have been in a limited circle—now she is known all over the world. Some very kindly helpful criticisms were made and suggestions given that will not be unheeded.

A Baptist pastor of Dorchester also came from a busy life to tell us "how to increase our membership." As a word of encouragement he said "if you can hold your own in such a time as the present you will do well."

Mrs. Stevens had the closing hour and introduced Dr. Farrington who spoke upon the "signs of the times." She alluded to the recent decision in Chicago where the mother of two children obtained $17,500 damages from a saloon keeper who sold liquor to the husband and father. The Chicago Record reports that a Christian attorney-at-law, Mr. Carl M. Ross, decided to invoke on behalf of the children a statute enacted in 1874. The act provides that any person whose means of support is injured in consequence of the intoxication of any person shall have action for damages against the one selling or giving the liquors. When the case in question was brought before the court, the jury promptly returned a verdict of guilty and the damages fixed at the sum above named.

Whatever its merits, the patent system is today one of the strongest bulwarks of extortion and injustice which our law afford. A corporation with large resources can take a patent of doubtful legal validity, and, by prolonging litigation through the life of the patent, tax the people at will. It can do this indefinitely, for it can gain such a position during the life of the patent as to be almost impregnable thereafter to any competition.

All Run Down

THIS is a common expression we hear on every side. Unless there is some organic trouble, the condition can doubtless be remedied. Your doctor is the best adviser. Do not dose yourself with all kinds of advertised remedies—get his opinion. More than likely you need a concentrated fat food to enrich your blood and tone up the system.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil

It is just such a food in its best form. It will build up the weakened and wasted body when all other foods fail to nourish. If you are run down or emaciated, give it a trial: it cannot hurt you. It is essentially the best possible nourishment for delicate children and pale, anaemic girls. We will send you a sample free.

Flag Pole Removed.

On Monday the flag staff on the common was removed by the Lexington Flag staff Company. The pole was erected by the town in 1882, and the question of its removal for the benefit of the public safety had been considered for sometime. About three days' preliminary work was necessary before the pole was taken down, it being securely held by guy ropes and shears, sawed off at the ground and then easily lowered. The pole will be used by the company as a derrick boom.

T. W. Guides to Happiness.

Here are a couple of guides to happiness which some wise person has discovered: "For a fit of passion take a walk in the open air. You may then speak to the wind without hurting any person or proclaiming yourself to be a simpleton. For a fit of idleness count the ticks of a clock. Do this for one hour, and you will be glad to pull off your coat and go to work like a man."

Greek's Worship of Lightning.

The Greeks were so much afraid of lightning that they worshiped it. They endeavored to avert its malignant influence by hissing and whistling at it. In places which had suffered by it altars were erected and oblations made to avert the anger of the gods, after which no one dared to touch or approach them.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith avenue, Boston, Mass., 5838: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

The Flag Pole.

Winchester as a town is now without a flag pole. The removal of the pole on the common, which has done faithful duty for twenty three years, was accomplished Monday for public safety. At present the only flag poles in town not owned by private parties are on the school houses. An article should be placed in the warrant for the next town meeting calling for the erection of a new pole on the common, and every citizen should see that Winchester as a town does not lack a flag staff from which to fly the national colors, so dear to every American heart.

It Remains for the Citizens to Act.

Some citizens have made the statement that the committee on improving town business having made their report, and it having been adopted by the town, it was now up to them to present a candidate for the general clerkship. Mr. Ayer, chairman of that committee, on being interviewed in regard to this, said that his committee having completed the work that they had been called upon to do, did not think it incumbent upon them to hunt up a candidate, and furthermore when formulating the recommendations they had no man in view, and now that their work was finished, collectively, they had no candidate. The whole matter was now up to the citizens, he asserted.

A Municipal Plant.

Before further action is taken regarding a municipal lighting plant, it would be well to first ascertain how the town stands in this matter. Some years ago Winchester committed itself to establishing a plant by voting twice in the matter, and but for a slight change in the law at that time would have been obliged to purchase the interests of the Woburn Company. Those two votes still hold good, so the gas and electric light commissioners state. Two favorable votes by a city or town are all that is necessary to establish a plant. So it will be seen that extreme caution is necessary at this time in any steps that may be taken. Hasty action may place the town in a position from which it cannot extricate itself. When this question comes up, as it certainly will, at the March meeting, a committee composed of the best business men we have, should be selected to go over the whole matter. They should be given power to employ an expert, so as to make a thorough examination of the entire question. A municipal plant may be a good thing, we may get cheaper electricity for our houses, the streets may be better lighted and the entire town benefited in many ways. This may all be true, yet we all want to ascertain this before committing the town further. There are several cities and towns that have their own plants and that have been managing them for years, so that valuable information can be easily procured.

Fire Engine House.

Probably every man who attended the smoke talk given at the Calumet Club last Saturday evening and heard the remarks made by two of the most prominent fire fighters of this State, agreed with them in one statement which they each made in regards to the Winchester fire department. That was, that Winchester's fire engine house is totally unfit for the needs of the town. It was a very noticeable fact that each of the speakers, while he paid high tribute to the efficiency of our department, condemned absolutely our fire house, and each agreed that while our central house was maintained on a side street, difficult of access, the excellent equipment and efficiency of the department was badly handicapped. Each of the speakers was well qualified to judge upon the matter, and their remarks should not be passed by without thought.

Chief Hopkins of Somerville took exception to the equipment of the department in the lack of a chemical fire engine, but the addition of this apparatus, he said, did not overcome the fault of the location of the fire house. That Winchester needs a new fire house is well known, and the remarks of these two gentlemen certainly brought the matter home to many.

In consideration of a new location for such a building an excellent site would be the old Davis estate on Church and Vine streets, giving as it would, a fine protection to the west side, and at the same time opening directly upon one of the principal streets in the center.

Town Officers.

There are two or three fundamental considerations that need to be borne in mind, at the caucus and at the annual town meeting, in the selection of town officials.

In the first place, the town is not a charitable organization; it does not exist primarily for the purpose of providing any man or any set of men a living. There is no citizen who does not owe the town far more than the town can possibly owe him. The unpaid office holders give largely of their time and strength for the good of the community; but the salaried officials are equally under obligation to contribute something beyond the services for which they are very properly compensated.

Secondly, a delicate and responsible task confronts the voters in the problem of carrying out the recommendations of the special committee that recently made its report. Faithful service should be recognized, but at the same time friendship and sympathy should not be placed above the welfare of the town. Any one at all familiar with town affairs knows perfectly well that some portions of the town business are conducted in ways which would not be tolerated for a moment by private concerns. There is no reason why municipal corporations should not be managed on as strictly business principles as private corporations.

Again, all officials, the unpaid as well as the paid, must expect criticism, and they will receive it whether they expect it or not; but so long as the criticism is honest, sincere, and intelligent, it ought to be welcomed. No one man, no entire board, knows it all; and in so far as criticism is based on knowledge and is offered in a spirit of helpfulness, it should be encouraged. For we are all working for a common end, the good of the Town of Winchester and the well-being of its inhabitants.

In a word, no new ideals need be set up; but simply by maintaining the ideals of the past, choosing men of character and ability, putting the public welfare above personal interests, the town cannot fail to go on advancing along the highest lines of civic development. With the exercise of a broad and unselfish interest in town affairs on the part of the citizens, the future is secure.

Henry F. Johnson a Candidate for Town Auditor.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I wish to announce through your columns that I am a candidate for the office of Town Auditor at the next town election, and this announcement is all the work I shall put into the canvass.

I think I can fill the office better than Mr. Newell. I should give more publicity to the receipts and expenses of the town than he does, and should not have alliance with the other town officers. Should not allow bills to pass for the expenses of special committees unless the town so voted, and should not approve bills for regular appropriations that belong to special appropriations. Should not co-operate with the other town officers how I should keep my accounts, nor ask the Treasurer and Collector when it was convenient and when they were ready for me to examine and audit their cash.

HENRY F. JOHNSON.

The Strenuous Life.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

After serving the town faithfully for 15 years, Mr. Aaron C. Bell, Collector of Taxes, succumbs to the demand for the strenuous life. What a pity that we shall, perhaps, never see the simple and rational life again, because of the mad rush for dollars and—the grave.

OLD FOGEY.

Mr. James Hinds has sent in his resignation, as a member of the Board of Health, and will hereafter devote all his time to the town engineering department.

ELECTRICITY.

When you use the Electric Light the wires may be so disposed that any place,—any closet, the cellar stairs—may be as safely illuminated as any other part of the home. But the Electric Light is so easily turned on or off there is no temptation to keep it burning continually. Thus it is an economical light in use.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

A Word for the Town Collector.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

When men die, kindly thoughts and good words are plentiful in their behalf, and all wonder that they remained so long unspoken. Before our town tax collector shuffles off the coil of official life, which he has elected to do, why not speak an honest word to comfort him in his retirement to make way for fresh ideas of economy and "increase efficiency" in town government? He may be a "poor thing," but as he has served the town without opposition for fifteen years or the longest term of any one Winchester collector, ought we not to think of him as "mine own" and say something good of him while he is an active live town official, for there is something good in everything and everybody, even in a tax collector.

It does not seem that the report of the consolidation committee and the remarks of the chairman at the last town meeting were quite fair to the collector in some respects. Of course the chairman is an advocate of a new plan which he thinks will lead to a saving of money and also increased efficiency in the conduct of town business. Strong advocates present only one side of a case and it is their business so to do, but it is the jury's business to look on both sides. In all fairness therefore let us look at a few phases on the other side of the official conduct of our present collector, not presented at the late town meeting.

The official report of the committee and the statement of the chairman of the committee at the town meeting inform us that the "office hours" of the collector are "2.30 to 5 every day except Wednesday and Saturday evenings." Now all who do business in Winchester know that the collector is practically at his office all day. I have always paid my taxes and water rates at the collector's office in the forenoon, and have never found the office closed at that time. The fact is, the collector does most of his writing in the forenoon and therefore advises the afternoon hours specially for collecting water rates and taxes as this division in his hours of labor allows him a little more privacy in the morning. But if any one comes to pay his dues to the collector in the morning, he has always been welcomed. I know these facts are correct as they have come under my own observation and knowledge. The collector's real office hours are much longer than the committee reported under a misapprehension of the facts, no doubt.

Now in regard to the fee question which the committee unanimously made out was a species of "graft," amounting to perhaps "$600" per year although only "$100" was estimated by the committee. Collector's fees have always existed properly and legally under the statute. They are not nearly as excessive as those established by the town for cutting off and letting on water, summons to pay water rates, etc. They are a relic of barbaric days when the rich oppressed the poor and punished severely those who could not "pay up" promptly. But they are on the statute book and if the town, in place of the collector, wishes to avail itself of this kind of income, it should instruct its collector or appropriations committee, to deduct whatever fees the collector receives from the amount of his salary. If this has not been done, is it the collector's fault or the town's? What has been our collector's practice, to grind every penny possible out of delinquent tax payers? Not so, for he has been very discreet and generous in giving up his fees to citizens of Winchester, especially to poorer citizens who can ill afford to pay them. He has simply not collected all of his fees and it is his credit that he has done so. The collector has informed me, and I am bound to believe him from what I know of his character, that the collector's fees in 1905, or what he collected of them, amounted to $115. It might be said that it was very foolish and unbusiness-like in him not to collect all the law allowed him as the committee assumed he did, but I do not think this is to his discredit but highly honorable on his part. The statute says the collector "may" collect, not shall collect, most of the fees connected with collecting delinquent taxes and if he gives them up to delinquents it is his own loss, not the town's, according to past Winchester practice. In the case of the town of Natick, cited by the chairman of the committee, if the fees were all collected by the collector and voted by the town as a portion of his salary, the collector must have had good pay for his work as Natick is a manufacturing town with a large floating population. With a town finding him instructing a collector to get every fee possible from every "poor devil" in town, or go without his pay as collector, it is no wonder that the committee estimated the worth of Winchester's pound of flesh as much as that of Natick's and other towns who believe in "soaking" delinquents. But the committee had no right to say that a collector's practice regarding the collection of fees is just the same in all towns, thus judging our collector by others, and claiming that our collector's fees have been large by what another collector may have received. It would have been a much better way for the committee to have consulted our old collector in the matter of his fees, than to have "estimated" as much as they did regarding the amount he received in this way. I have been "summoned" many times by the present collector to pay taxes, which I could not promptly pay during the past fifteen years and yet I do not know of a single instance of his exacting a single fee from me although I have troubled him a good deal, as others have. Not all can pay taxes promptly and thus escape the payment of fees and so far as the collector forgives, the unfortunate out of his own pocket is it to his discredit? If the town collects all the taxation fees in the future, the town may be richer in one way but poorer in another, as the poor citizens can not have the amount of the fees and the town have them also.

Another omission should be recorded in the committee's not making any mention of the clerical assistance the collector has had to pay for out of his own pocket in conducting the business of his office. His son has been with him all the time for several years and occasionally he has had to employ lady assistants to get his work done on time. Of course some swifter man might have got along without assistance but it certainly is worth mentioning in reporting on the conduct of the collector's office that much of his salary has been paid out for clerical assistance. It may be said that the collector has been engaged in other business but we all know that the amount of such business is very small and hardly to be taken into account in comparison with the amount of town business under his charge.

In conclusion allow me to say that I write this article unsolicited and without any idea of creating an influence to continuing the present collector in office. I understand from others he is not a candidate for any town office this year and for this reason he should be allowed to retire from public office without a shadow of suspicion that he has been inefficient in the conduct of his official duties or that he has received a more liberal compensation than other town officers who do much less disagreeable work than collecting taxes. Since time began, the tax collector has always been (ex officio) a disagreeable necessity, a drudging servant to do public work many will not do on account of its seeming heartless and ungracious character. One of our leading town officers told me with in a few days that collecting taxes was the "meanest job" in the whole list of town offices. My own experience in town affairs leads me to the same conclusion, therefore when a tax collector retires after fifteen years service it ought to be recognized that the public is as much obliged to him for long and faithful service as he is to the public for his salary and what he has collected of his legal fees. Consolidation in the conduct of town affairs should go on in many directions besides those mentioned by the committee but let it go on without being hard or unfair to those who have served the town faithfully under the old order of things. Let us be as sympathetic as possible to the individual while working for the good of the whole in making changes leading to the hoped for economy and increased efficiency in conducting town government.

Castle Square Theatre.

Both as a novel and play, "A Lady of Quality" has attracted wide spread attention during the past ten years. Not long after this publication, it was made by the author, Frances Hodgson Burnett, into a strong emotional drama, and it was then immediately secured by Julia Arlour for the opening season of her starring career. It was an immediate success, its sensational episodes bringing forth praise from all classes of playgoers.

"A Lady of Quality" has not been seen in Boston for some years, and its revival at the Castle Square Theatre next week will bring it for the first time before a considerable public that has never had an opportunity to witness its stirring scenes and romantic characters. The stage settings will be picturesque and beautiful, the costumes exactly representative of the period, and the cast will enlist the services of the entire Castle Square Company. The leading roles will be played by John Craig and Lillian Kemble.

The condition of Col. Ramsdell was reported this morning as slightly improved.

Hours of Labor at the Town Hall

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Why cannot the appropriations committee when it makes up its list of salaries of town officials, designate the hours of labor to be observed by the town clerk, water register, collector and all other officers who are paid for more or less continuous service at the town hall? The statement of the committee on the conduct of the town's official business is somewhat misleading regarding the actual hours of labor and attendance of some of the town officers at the town hall. It is common knowledge that the tax collector has been at his office much more than the committee have given him credit for. The town clerk also, has been at his office more than "one hour per day" during the year he has served as town clerk. In fact, he is there all the time except when on official business when he has supplied a town clerk, pro tem, during his absence. With the present town officers filled as they are today, an arrangement could easily be made where by some one or more officers could be in attendance every moment of the day and evening, if this were necessary, without consolidating a single town office with another. In spite of all the committee have reported, the present town clerk, clerk of the assessors, registrar of voters and clerk of overseers of the poor, (who is one and the same man) has been present at the town hall continuously, during the past few years he has held these various town offices ready to answer the telephone or give information on all subjects of town business with which he is connected. He gives all his time to town business and to no other. His duties could be enlarged to take in more board clerkships why would not this virtual consolidation be sufficient for the present? It seems to many we should not go too far in consolidation affairs but be sure, as we go, that we are on the right track. CONSERVATIVE.

The Town's New Departure

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Now that the special town meeting called for the purpose of hearing and acting on the report of the committee appointed to investigate the method of carrying on the official business of the town, and to make suggestions and recommendations, if possible, for its improvement, has come and gone, we ought, as good citizens, to do all we can to see that the spirit and intent of the report is carried into effect and good men chosen to fill the offices made prominent by the action of the meeting in adopting the committee's recommendations.

The majority of those present at the meeting decided by their votes that one and the same man should be responsible for nearly all of the clerical business of the town and that he should do all the collecting of the town's revenue, from any and all sources, and regardless of whether we agree in theory with all the committee's reasons for so great change in the method of collection of taxes and in the performance of all the duties to be performed by the chief clerk, we should give the new idea a fair trial for a time sufficiently long to discover whether or not the plan is good or bad. Other towns have tried it and proved it a success and we can add ourselves to the list of progressive and up-to-date bodies of citizens by proving the plan a success in our town, if we will give the idea a fair trial.

In the matter of consolidation of the executive heads of the various departments of town construction work, we are taking a step which is as radical in its effects and of even more importance to the economical and efficient conduct of this branch of town work than the merging of all, or nearly all, clerkships into one. We have now three heads to the public works departments of our town, one man superintending street improvements, the next man having charge of all work of laying water mains and services and all work coming under the heading of water works construction, and the third man having charge of all extensions to our sewerage system, all connections of houses with the public sewers and any work which the sewer department has to do. The general superintendent to be, if the sense of Monday evening's meeting is carried into effect, must be able to do in an acceptable manner, the work of these three men, and he must serve the boards "pleasantly and faithfully" to quote the words of the committee. We have also in the employ of the town, an engineer who is called upon by all boards for plans and estimates of proposed work, and who has power himself to be capable of doing good work and able to meet the requirements of his place, as stated plainly by the committee.

The new superintendent should be a man who has a good working knowledge of engineering, with all that such knowledge implies so far as town work is concerned, and who can properly supervise the laying of all sewers and surface water drains, and who can also carry on the work of resurfacing our streets with stone or gravel. We now have our main thoroughfares macadamized and are giving more attention to the gravel resurfacing of our side streets, which have been sadly neglected during all the time we have been working on our principal streets. We do not need the services of an expensive man whose whole thought is to spread stone in our streets, because we do not need any more expensive roads. We need, now, so far as our roads are concerned, a smooth even surface of gravel on our side streets and we need, more than anything else, good sidewalks for the use of people who have to walk and who are tired of plodding through mud. In these days of stone crushers and steam rollers, almost any man with any knowledge of how work should be done can build a street which will last for years if care and intelligence are used in preparing and rolling the foundation, if a stone road is to be constructed.

It is not so much a question of men as it is of tools and machinery and intelligence and care in directing the work. We have roads constructed every day by private contractors who do not pose as expert road builders, which will bear comparison with the best of our streets. Our water system today is practically complete and virtually all work to be done in future is replacing old mains with cast iron pipe. In all our departments we say the superintendents do the work, but we seem to forget what an important part our foremen and the working force plays in our street, sewer and water construction work. Any one of our superintendents might be away from his work for a month or more at a time through sickness, or vacation, or for any other cause and the work would go on just the same and be done well.

As all the important changes suggested in the recent report seem to have for their main object greater economy and efficiency in our public work, we can make even more of a saving by turning the supervision of our public work over to the Town Engineer and making him the executive head of all construction work and giving him charge of all engineering work at the same time. The engineering force should have been increased long ago, and more work should have been done in this department, but, owing to the failure to provide sufficient help, all that could be accomplished has been done well and to the entire satisfaction of all boards served by the Town Engineer, as reported by the committee.

If the engineering force is increased, as seems possible, two men should be added to the force, one man to be paid about $48.00 per week or $336.00 per year, and the other man or boy to be paid at the rate of $5.00 per week for about half the year. This would make the engineering force cost $3256.00 per year.

The three superintendents, including the Town Engineer receive at present the equivalent of $1000.00 for one year. It is proposed to pay the superintendent of construction $2000.00 per year, which, together with the amount of $3256.00 per year which must be paid for a fair working force in the engineering department will make the sum of $5256.00 for engineering force and superintendence.

If the Town Engineer is made general superintendent as well as engineer, his salary of $2000.00 plus $936.00 for one assistant, plus $300.00 for the second assistant will make a total cost of $3236.00 per year for superintendence and engineering and show a saving of $1200.00 per year. As the construction work in any department does not begin until April or May and ends about Dec. 1, there would be four or five months of the year which the engineer and superintendent could devote to general survey and plan work. This plan seems entirely feasible and workable and will give good satisfaction if adopted.

In any event the idea is worth careful consideration and attention, especially as the matter of expense and qualification of the man are the main features to be taken into account.

Noon meetings were held in the Park Street church, attended by several hundred daily. One noon he spoke to 70 clergymen, and one evening to 100 prominent laymen representing 45 churches, on closer cooperation between church and association. Of his methods the editor of the Congregationalist says: "No sensible man can have anything but respect for such evangelism as this, or fail to do all in his power to speed it forward. It is this type of evangelism which we believe is going to win out in this country as against the dogmatic strenuous type which, whenever it comes to the front, is sure to alienate some men who would support a broader movement."—(Association Men).

The Clerk of the Assessors is to be included in the consolidation of clerkships. This office was inadvertently omitted from the list printed in last week's STAR.

Winchester is the latest town to follow Wakefield in the municipal ownership line. Dissatisfaction with the service furnished by the local electric light company has led the citizens to take steps toward acquiring a plant for the town. [Wakefield Item.] Some years ago, Winchester voted favorably twice on this question, and committed itself to a municipal plant, but owing to a change in the law no further steps were taken.

Elisha W. Cobb, of Beggs & Cobb, takes exception to recent reports of increased trade by shoe manufacturers. He argues that tanners have curtailed their production of leather, and consequently shoe manufacturers could not make so many shoes as they claim. He asserts that the leather production of the United States was 25 per cent. below normal in 1904, and was from 35 to 40 per cent. below normal in 1905.

A new fire alarm box was placed in the center this week to replace box 21, opposite Young & Brown's. The new box is operated without a key, the door being opened by simply turning a handle, and the alarm has to be rung in the usual manner by pulling the hook. When the door is open a gong is rung in the box, which notifies the police or anyone in the vicinity that the box has been opened. This will prevent so many false alarms being pulled in. The inside of the box is the same as was in the old box. The box was given to the town by Mr. Stevens of the Ames D. Stevens Co., and it is expected that new boxes and any old ones which are replaced will be of this style in the future.

Representative McCall is opposed to the regulation of railroad rates. He preferred, he said, to depend upon the facilities of the courts for justice rather than upon the cast-iron rules of a commission. He favored some of the features of the Hepburn bill aimed to correct abuses of private cars, refrigerator cars, etc., but he characterized it as economically absurd the attempt of the government to regulate rates. He claimed such regulation was the dream of Bryan, a step toward socialism.

FROM THE TOWN REPORT.

Some Recommendations and Suggestions

Embodied in the Reports of the Several Departments.

THE SELECTMEN.

All side hill streets leading to Highland avenue should eventually be macadamized as in no less expensive way will the work be permanent.

Highland avenue is a main thoroughfare, complete except for a short stretch of less than half a mile at the northerly end, which it is estimated can be built for three thousand dollars. A larger appropriation than those of the last few years should be made for the Highway Account, and if this is not expedient, bond issues for such work as Highland avenue, which would complete construction already begun, and get its return from future development, would seem to be entirely legitimate, and should be considered.

It would seem to be good business policy to begin replacing some of our old wooden bridges with permanent ones, and stop the large expense for repairs, and at the same time exchange cheap for good looking structures.

The appropriation for this department has been too small for the last few years and should be more liberal in order to accomplish what the citizens demand.

The lighting of the Town Hall building after January first will be on a meter basis, but may cost no more than the flat rate of nine hundred dollars which has been paid in the past. The Arlington Gas Company has installed mantle lamps in all of the offices and the Library with-out expense to the town in order that this light may be tried.

Our town is very fortunately situated in almost every way and if the citizens continue to give its welfare their attention it will continue to prosper. What especially should receive more attention now is the beautifying of the ponds and river through the centre, where a comparatively small expenditure would give most satisfactory results. A committee should be appointed to study the question and make a report.

SUPT. OF STREETS.

The stationary crushing plant is in such bad shape that I decided not to spend any more money on it until such time that it may be located in the new yard. We have abandoned its use in its present location, and have erected the portable plant in the yard for temporary use. The portable plant will not need any great outlay. New rear wheels have been purchased for the roller and are kept in readiness to replace the old ones.

That the northerly end of Highland avenue be built to save a waste of money in repairs.

That your Honorable Board further consider some suitable pavement for sidewalks.

That a special appropriation should be considered known as the town stable and yard account, to provide for additional sheds, and filling, fuel, lights, telephone, etc., etc. Of course it must be understood that at least six departments are to use the stable and yard, and no one department should be called upon to stand the expense of all, therefore the need of such an account.

Mrs. Louisa S. Holden.

Mrs. Louisa S. Holden, mother of Mr. George S. Holden of Glen road, and formerly a well known resident of Malden, passed away at the home of her son on Feb. 8th. Her death was due to the results of an apoplectic shock received while in Boston two weeks previous, from which she never rallied or spoke. She was a native of Andover and the widow of Webster D. Holden, who passed away some eight years ago. She had made her home in Winchester for the past year and a half and was 71 years of age. In addition to Mr. Holden of this town, she leaves one younger son, Chas. P. Holden, of Boston. She had lived in Malden more than 40 years, and was a member of the First Congregational Church and the Women's Christian Temperance Union.

Funeral services were held from Mr. Holden's house Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Dr. French of the Malden Congregational church, assisted by Rev. D. Augustine Newton and Rev. Henry E. Hodge. The display of flowers was beautiful in the extreme, it seeming as though everyone knowing Mrs. Holden sent tokens of remembrance. During the services several selections were sung by a quartette. The interment was in Oakdale cemetery, Malden.

Expert at Work.

The committee appointed to examine the financial and other affairs of Winchester, have employed Mr. William C. Newell to examine the books, etc. He is at present at work upon the books. Mr. Newell is one of the most expert auditors of Boston and has served in a similar capacity in a number of cities and towns of Massachusetts. (Winthrop Sun.)

Three Examples.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:
Enclosed I send you three problems, or examples, on the electric light question. If you think they would interest your readers, I wish you would publish them, in your peoples' column.

Problem number one is my house and store, the others are a neighbor's.

NO. 1.

An example in electric lighting:
Woburn meter 36,000 cost $3.13
Edison " 28,000 " 4.16
The difference between the two rates, is the more you use of Woburn Co. the cheaper it costs you—whereas, the least you use of the Edison Co. the more it costs.

NO. 2.

An example in electric lighting by Edison:
5 lamps for January cost $2.30
Used 9000 watts actual cost 1.82
Paid for light not used .68
The 9000 watts in July cost 1.03
Can anybody in this world tell why 9000 watts cost 79c more in January than July?

NO. 3.

An example in electric lighting by Edison:
9000 watts in January cost $2.50
18,000 " " " 2.96
Jan. cost of 2nd 9000 watts .46
9000 watts in July cost 1.03
18,000 " " " 1.76
July cost of 2nd 9000 watts .73
And still they say the bills "in the good summer time" will be cheaper.

Commendation

An Appreciation.

Those who were privileged to listen to the sermon preached by the pastor of the Congregational church, in Winchester, last Sabbath, have expressed themselves as being profoundly impressed thereby. It was indeed most profitable and enjoyable; and words of gratitude have been expressed; it should be published.

Rev. Mr. Newton's theme, "A Man of God—Our Great Commoner—Abraham Lincoln," showed conclusively his marked and deep-rooted conviction that loyalty to God and country, built for Abraham Lincoln a character that outlives all change of earth and time; and that forever next to Washington, Lincoln will be revered as the Saviour of the Republic.

Engagement Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin C. Fisher gave an elaborate dinner on Wednesday evening to announce the engagement of their daughter, Lillian Mabel to Alexander Revere Livingstone, Jr., of Arlington Heights. Only relatives of the two families attended, after which the young couple gave a heart party to twenty-five of their young friends from this and surrounding towns. Miss Mabel Wingate won the ladies' prize, a hat pin, and Mr. Gray of Arlington won the gentlemen's, a stick pin. The house was prettily decorated with garlands of pink hearts, flowers, and ribbon streamers. The color scheme of pink was carried out in all the decorations. The young couple were the recipients of many congratulations. Miss Fisher received several gifts, among them being a complete set of Sir Walter Scott's works, from an aunt of Mr. Livingstone.

Little Girls' Good Work.

The "Do Something Band" held a fair for Missions at the home of Mrs. Charles A. S. Dwight on Monday afternoon and evening, February 12th. The "Band" is composed of about sixteen little girls, and its affairs are guided by Mrs. Dwight and Miss Evelyn Parker. The articles for sale included ice cream, cake and candy, valentines, fancy and useful articles and flowers.

The little girls looked very pretty in their pink and white dresses and the rooms were tastefully decorated with the flags of all nations. They netted over $25 and are much pleased with the result of their work.

NEW TELEPHONE BUILDING.

A Handsome Structure to be Erected for the Sole Use of Co.

Site Selected on Washington Street Near Baptist Church.

The New England Telephone and Telegraph Company has purchased a portion of the Davidson estate on Washington street as a site for a new telephone exchange. The taking comprises 7500 feet of land and includes the old house, the tenants of which have been requested to vacate as soon as possible. The old house which occupies a commanding position will be torn down so that work can be commenced in the spring. The new building will be a substantial one of brick, two stories in height, and will be occupied entirely by the Company.

Some surprise will be manifested to know why the Company selected a site so far from the business centre of the town. The reason was so as to get away from the noise of passing trains and the consequent confusion in the vicinity of the present location, which are so liable to detract from a prompt service. Winchester has an unusually large number of subscribers. It is the intention of the company to erect buildings in all prominent cities and towns where exchanges are maintained.

In the new building we shall have better service, and better facilities and the company will put in the best equipment. The new building will give new taxable property to the town. It is a source of satisfaction to see the company progressing to such an extent as to place in town such a building.

Fortnightly Meeting.

At a meeting of The Fortnightly, Monday, Feb. 12, Mrs. May Alden Ward lectured upon "History in the Making." Her attention was mainly given to the recent happenings in Russia, England, France and the United States. Her talk on Russia took fully one third of her time and was a sifting of the news from that country, including the growth of manufactures, inducing emigration from the rural districts and consequent enlightenment of the peasants, the trusting appeal to the Little Father, the bitter out-come of that day, then general revolution—universal strike in every calling until certain reforms are granted. She spoke of the opinion that the revolution is just beginning. As a result of the events cited following the war with Japan she showed the total difference in the position that Russia now occupied among the world powers.

Affairs in England were spoken of at some length, chiefly the overthrow of the Conservative Government and the rise of the liberals, by the largest vote that any party has registered in the history of the country. The comparative quiet of France at this time, was mentioned, her new President coming in just after the connection between church and state has been severed.

In our own country the speaker found much to say under the topics of the conflict between the President and Senate, the Philippine Tariff, the Railroad Rate Bill, Statehood Bill, San Domingo troubles, and the Panama Canal.

Mrs. Ward is a favorite of the club, and the large attendance and close attention given her showed a gratifying interest.

Annual Meeting of the Winchester Country Club.

The adjourned meeting of the Winchester Country Club was held in the Club House on Monday, Lincoln's Birthday, at 8 p. m. Forty members were present and preceding the meeting a dinner was served and enjoyed by all.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

Rev. John W. Suter, president; Marshall C. Bouve, vice-president; George G. Kellogg, treasurer; John Abbott, secretary. Board of Directors—John Abbott, Joseph L. S. Barton, Marshall C. Bouve, Frank L. Hunt, George G. Kellogg, James Nowell, William D. Richards, John W. Suter, Frank Eugene Barnard.

The by-laws were amended, increasing the dues of membership in class A from $20 to $25, and in class B from $15 to $20.

The treasurer's report was received and accepted and showed the Club to be on a sound financial basis.

Valentine Party.

Miss Leah S. McIntosh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. McIntosh, gave a valentine party on Wednesday afternoon to a number of her friends. The affair was held at her home on Stone avenue and greatly enjoyed by all, the afternoon being spent with games, music and refreshments. The winners of the games were all presented with valentines and other gifts. Among those who attended were: Ethel Richardson, Alpha Lincoln, Eva Hanson, Pearl McLane, Agnes Murphy, Dorothy Armstrong, Deborah Hicks, Lillian Hudson, Harrison Parker, Arthur Bellville, Oliver Lane, Harry Dunnell, Walter Claffin, Louise Willard, Beverly, Beatrice Denno, Medford and Avis Sherburne and Chester Conn of Woburn.

HORTON-LOWRY.

Brilliant Wedding of a Winchester Teacher to a Canton Merchant Last Saturday Afternoon.

There never was such fine coasting as there was at Symmes Corner last Saturday morning. The boys and girls of that neighborhood took advantage of it and were busily enjoying the pleasures of this pastime until the early part of the afternoon, when as if by magic every child disappeared. The reason for this was very plain; their own teacher, Miss Lowry, of the Mystic School, was to be married at 4 o'clock that afternoon in the village of Ponkapoag in the town of Canton, some 45 miles distant. The parents and all the boys and girls of the school had been invited to the wedding, hence all the fond mothers of the neighborhood found it necessary to call in the children and bathe, dress, and otherwise decorate them for this festive occasion. When they all gathered at the "corner" to take the electric, the neighborhood was represented by 20 parents and friends and 30 pupils, who proceeded straightway to the South Station and there took the steam cars for Canton. The delegation, personally conducted by Mr. Frank E. Rowe, reached the town and the church in safety at the appointed hour.

The decorations of the church were in charge of Miss Harriet E. Richards, and consisted of evergreen garlands and white chrysanthemums. The bridal procession entered the church to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march, played by the church organist, Gordon C. Hunt. The ushers, Mr. Albert F. Morse, Mr. William F. Howard, Jr., Mr. G. Howard Horton, and Mr. James D. Draper entered the left door, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Marion I. Lowry, sister of the bride. Two little misses, Barbara Waite and Rebecca Rowe of Winchester, served as flower girls, carrying baskets of roses and scattering rose petals in the path of the bride as she followed them on the arm of her father, Martin J. Lowry. At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man, J. Albert Robinson. Under an arch of hemlock and white chrysanthemums the couple were united in marriage by the pastor of the church, Rev. Augustine P. Manwell. The bride was gowned in a princess dress of white messaline with motifs of lace; she wore the conventional bridal veil and carried bride roses. The maid of honor wore a becoming gown of white muslin with lace trimmings, and carried white pinks.

After the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the vestry, where they were assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Lowry, parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. I. Chester Horton, brother and sister of the groom, the maid of honor, and the best man. A dainty collation was served in charge of Mrs. Adolphus L. Tyler of Milford, Mass., assisted by Misses A. Maud Weir, Mabel E. Sampson, Bessie I. Berry, Fannie Ellis, Louise C. Gallant and Lulu A. Nickerson.

A pleasing feature of the occasion was the attendance of the bride's former pupils who had half a dozen pews reserved for them in front of the pulpit. There were other guests present from Winchester, also from Middleboro, East Weymouth, Milford, Stoughton, Norwood, Milton, Boston, Newton, Foxboro, Readville and Hyde Park. The couple have been the recipients of a large number of magnificent presents, including a beautiful engraving handsomely framed in black walnut, entitled, "When all the World Seems Gay," presented by the pupils of the Mystic School. A most pleasing incident of the reception took place when the bride called her pupils around her and thanked them kindly for the elegant present which they had given her. She told a lovely story which quite touched the hearts of her young hearers and added much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

After their return from their bridal trip, Mr. and Mrs. Horton will occupy the new and elegant mansion which the bridegroom has built and furnished for his bride in the village of Ponkapoag.

Mrs. A. L. T.

[Miss Lowry, was elected principal of the Mystic School on Bacon street, some four years ago, and although she received several offers to teach elsewhere at an increased salary, chose to remain in this town. This young lady came to this place a stranger to every person, yet by her skill as a teacher, by her patience and kindness of heart and gentle courtesy, she brought the Mystic School to an enviable rank and easily won for herself a unique place in the respect and esteem of every pupil, parent, and friend of the school in this section of Winchester. In the opinion of several well known Superintendents of Schools in this neighborhood, who have visited this school, and know whereof they speak, the Mystic School is second to none other in Middlesex County in what constitutes an up-to-date primary school.—EDITOR OF STAR.]

THE CAUCUS.

Candidates for Combined Offices Defeated.

Town Clerk Carter and Collector Bell Win Out.

In point of attendance the citizens' caucus to nominate town officers was not a very great success, as out of 1500 registered voters in town only 272 took the trouble to be present and vote. Both candidates for the combined offices of Town Clerk and Collector were defeated, much to the surprise of those gentlemen who had strongly advocated the innovation. Mr. William C. Newell, one of the defeated candidates, has taken out nomination papers. The defeat of Selectman Carter was a surprise to a great many people, as it was anticipated he would be returned, but his opponents were out in force and as a result he received but 94 of the total of 272 votes cast. He is undecided whether he will run on nomination papers or not.

An effort will be made, so it is said, by friends of the measure to present the name of some strong man to the voters through nomination papers for the combined offices of Town Clerk and Collector in the hope that he will win out on election day.

George Chandler Coit, Esq., was chosen chairman of the caucus and Theo. P. Wilson secretary. The following gentlemen served as tellers and ballot clerks: F. B. Browning, F. F. Messenger, H. A. Wheeler, Louis Barta, J. H. Roach, Dr. C. J. McCarthy, H. T. Dickson, C. E. Barrett, G. H. Lochman, Ernest Hatch, Eben Caldwell.

After asking to be excused as a candidate for Moderator at the coming town meeting, Mr. Ralph E. Joslin nominated Mr. Geo. Chandler Coit, who was unanimously chosen.

The result of the ballot for the contested offices was as follows, those names preceded by a star being the choice of the caucus:

Selectmen—
*William E. Beggs	152
John H. Carter	94
William J. Daly	127

CAUCUS NOTES.

Only 18 per cent. of the registered voters turned out at the caucus. A pretty poor showing. Is it because the caucus settles nothing?

265 less votes were cast for Selectmen than those voting at the caucus might have marked for, which shows the extent to which bullet voting was indulged in.

Second Congregational Church in Winchester.

A movement is on foot relative to the formation of a new society and church to be known as the Second Congregational Church of Winchester. Not long ago the members of the Highland Bethany Chapel petitioned the Congregational Church to take over their affairs and property, as it did not seem advisable for the society to continue on alone. This the centre church did, and Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight was appointed as pastor, the chapel acting practically as an independent body, with the support of the larger church assured, to fill any financial difficulty which the chapel might need.

A committee has prepared memorandum of the finances of the chapel, and it is now believed that the time is ripe for the formation of a new organization. A committee from the Highlands has met with representatives of the Congregational Church with the result that the latter has passed the following vote: "That the joint committee of the church and society having heard from the representative of the Highland Bethany Chapel the encouraging statement of the mutual labors of pastor and people there would recommend—that we as a church are in accord with the steps already taken looking toward the formation of an Independent Church, and assure them of our hearty cooperation and assistance."

It is anticipated that with those members who have signified a willingness to join the new church, either by letter from the center church or upon confession of faith, that a new society can now be formed, and steps are now being taken toward calling a council of churches to that end.

It is anticipated that the new church will start with a membership of about 50. The following committees have been appointed to call a council of churches for the formation of the new society:

Rev. Joshua Coit, Mr. Harrison Parker, Mr. E. L. Barnard, Dea. A. S. F. Kirby, and Rev. F. H. Means of the Congregational church, and Mrs. Ellen A. Smiley, Mrs. Martha W. Rice, Mr. John Park, Mr. Rufus Bridges and Mr. Justin L. Parker of the chapel.

GRADE CROSSING.

Date Set by Commissioners for a Hearing.

Owners of Business Estates Apprehensive of the Outcome.

The Commissioners appointed by the Superior Court to consider the question of abolishing the grade crossing in the centre of the town, will hold a hearing in the Selectmen's room on Saturday, March 17, at 11 o'clock a. m. The Commissioners will decide whether it is necessary to abolish the grade crossing, and if they conclude to do so will determine whether the tracks will pass over the street or vice versa. They will also determine the style of bridge in case the streets should pass over the tracks and also the location. In fact whatever they recommend will go.

The State, the town, the Boston & Maine Railroad and the Boston & Northern Street railway will share the expense.

To take steps to protect their interests the property owners in the centre liable to be affected by possible changes in streets, grades, etc., should get together before the hearing is held and talk the situation over and if necessary be represented at the hearing by counsel. The abolition of the crossing is pretty certain to make a complete change in the present business centre, and some persons say, in the present values of real estate now used for business purposes.

Wherefore said petitioners pray that a commission may be appointed as provided in Chapter 11, sections 14 to 17, inclusive of the Revised Laws of said Commonwealth, and in any other provisions of law in amendment of or in addition thereto, to decide whether such alteration is necessary as aforesaid; to prescribe the manner and limits within which such alterations shall be made, and to determine which party shall do the work, or to apportion the work to be done between said respondent railroad companies and said town of Winchester; to apportion between said Commonwealth, said Boston and Northern Street Railway Company and said town of Winchester their respective proportions of the cost of such alterations; to specify what portions, if any, of said public ways shall be discontinued, the grade of said railroad and said ways, the changes to be made in the location and grades of the street railways in said ways, the general method of construction, and what land or other property you consider necessary to be taken, and to make such other and further decisions, as may be authorized by law, that you deem proper, and you are to meet as soon as may be after receiving notice of this appointment, and after due notice and hearing shall decide the matter of said petition and forthwith return your decision into this Court.

Does it Pay?

On opening the bids for finishing the new schoolhouse last Monday evening by the Board of Public Works it was discovered that the lowest one was about $7,500 larger than that of the lowest one last year, by Jackson & Co., to whom the contract was then awarded. That sum of over $7,000 shows what the city will have to pay for the delay in building the house caused by the reprehensible conduct of the then City Council. It is a big amount to pay for official folly, and ought to teach taxpayers a lesson that will not soon be forgotten in the election of Boards of Aldermen.—[Woburn Journal.]

Does it pay to be one a city! And yet, Woburn with its loose political morals is considering the question of a municipal lighting plant.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the Mother's Favorite

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a favorite with the people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children, for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. Newsy Paragraphs.

Melrose is to have a New England Telephone and Telegraph building, to be erected by the company. Report has it that Winchester is soon to have a similar building.

The janitor of a certain school in this city, whose name we refrain from mentioning out of regard for the feelings of his family, smelt smoke the other day while attending to the furnace in the basement. It was quite unusual to smell smoke down there and it excited his curiosity. That feeling soon changed to alarm, and he at once instituted an investigation. To this end he visited every room, hall, hallway and closet in the building. Failing to find fire anywhere, he returned to his furnace, where the smell was stronger than ever, and little wreaths of smoke seen playing around the pipes. That was strange and still more alarming; so, he made another round of the rooms in the building. No fire could be discovered, and he again returned to the basement, more mystified than ever. He perspired so profusely that the removal of his cap and the use of a pocket handkerchief became necessary. When he took the cap from his head and turned it over he discovered the source of the smoke. He found the top of it wholly consumed and a brisk conflagration still going on inside. An asbestos lining had saved his head from being burned up. If that janitor wasn't dumfounded then there never was a dumfounded man in this city. How the fire in his cap got a foothold there is still a mystery to him, although several days have elapsed since the thing happened. —[Woburn Journal.]

The third annual banquet of the Middlesex Sportsman's Association will be held at the Town Hall, Lexington, on Monday evening, Feb. 19. The dinner will be served promptly at 6.30 p. m., and several well known speakers will be present. Dr. H. L. Shepherd is a member of the executive committee of the association, and Mr. E. S. A bill has been introduced into the Legislature which provides that whenever articles are printed purporting to be news matter or editorials, for which the proprietor, publisher or any one representing him, receives money payment in a newspaper, the word "advertisement" shall be printed in a conspicuous manner at the end of such articles. Any person, association or corporation violating any provision of this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1000. This law if passed will not affect the publishers of suburban weekly papers. These papers are expected to do this class of business for nothing.

A study of the reports, lately published, of divorce proceedings in this state, is interesting. There were in 1904 1698 divorces against 1721 in 1903. In 1903 there was one divorce to every 15.6 marriages, but 1904 shows one divorce in 15.3 marriages; in 1902 there was one divorce to 17.4 marriages; in 1905 one to 24.2; and in 1906 one to 31.9. Seventy-two per cent of divorces in this state were granted on petition of wives.

His Objection to Municipal Lighting.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Mr. Josiah Quincy thus voices his opinion in regard to a municipal lighting plant for Boston, and his views should be thoughtfully considered by the citizens of Winchester at this time:

"My sympathies are wholly with the public where its interests conflict with a private corporation. But for that very reason I am entirely opposed to the passage of the pending order. If the city were free to go into the business of manufacturing gas or electricity to supply its own needs or to sell to its citizens, the case would be a very different one; but the present laws of the Commonwealth forbid this unless private interests are first bought out, and upon a basis which fully protects them and imposes a great burden upon the public.

"I believe that the present laws are unduly restrictive, but as long as they stand unamended it seems to me financially impracticable for the city of Boston to engage in the business of supplying gas and electricity. To say nothing of other objections, the amount of money which the city would have to devote for the purchase of the present plants is so huge that I cannot see how any sensible and unprejudiced person can advocate such action.

"I believe that the passage of the pending order and its adoption by the people would do more to discredit municipal ownership in this Commonwealth than anything which could happen, and that all sensible advocates of municipal ownership should devote their energies to securing the amendment at the State House of the present laws governing this matter, which I believe to be far too favorable to the corporations engaged in the lighting business, rather than to endeavoring to secure municipal action under the present oppressive and unfair conditions."

I might mention also that the man who represents Winchester in the Legislature at the present time is in the employ of the Edison Co. As Mr. Quincy suggests, get at the Legislature first and have a law passed that will give cities and towns desiring to do their own lighting a fair show. Go Slow.

Basket Ball.

The Malden High Basketball team received its second defeat of the season last Thursday evening at the hands of the Winchester High team. Malden has one of the best High school teams in the state and has only been defeated once before this season, and then by the crack Springfield H. It is a startling situation when an old established firm of Boston merchants like Metcalf & Co., the famous druggists, are indicted for selling adulterated goods. There is some good old fashioned honesty in the small places like Winchester even now.

SLICED BEEF—PICKLE GARNISH.

The remnants of roast, smothered or boiled meat should be sliced evenly and rather thin. Save the trimmings for a mulligatawny and do not spoil the appearance of the sliced meat with irregular bits of bone.

Do not have more meat carved while hot than is to be served, as it will not taste as well as if it were sliced when cold.

For a garnish cut small pickles into several slices not quite separated; spread like a fan or leaves. Cut small rounds from a slice of beet and make incisions with a knife to represent a rose. The contrast of the red and green will appeal to the appetite.

A piece of the round of beef is excellent when smothered. Brown the outside of a piece weighing four or five pounds in pork fat, then put it into a large bean pot and tie a crossed paper over the top, after pouring in sufficient water to cover a quarter of the depth of the meat. Let it simmer for four hours. Strain, thicken and season the liquid for a gravy.

"For two years I was troubled with a bad scalp disease; my head would be covered in places with scales which I picked off, some of them being as large as my thumb nail, and the itching sensation which I experienced at times was almost unbearable. I was in your store one day and one of the clerks recommended Jaynes' Quinine Hair Tonic. I took home a bottle and used it. I needed only one bottle, for in a short time my scalp was in a good, healthy condition, and has remained so ever since. It is with a feeling of gratitude that I give you this testimonial, hoping it may reach those who are possibly afflicted in the same way."

PATRICK MARTIN, Centers Hotel, Boston, Mass., 1897
"I have used Jaynes' Quinine Hair Tonic and found it to be a most excellent preparation for the hair and scalp. At one time I was troubled greatly with dandruff, and my hair commenced to fall out in large quantities, but as soon as I commenced using your Quinine Hair Tonic it stopped it immediately. I use it daily as a dressing, and would not be without it."

FROM THE TOWN REPORT.

TOWN ENGINEER.

While there are plans of most of the property in the main parts of the town there is scarcely anything in the possession of the town which shows land in the outlying districts. West of Cambridge street there are approximately 1,350 acres and plans which show only about 150 acres. This land is coming into the market rapidly and plans of it ought to be owned by the town for use in assessing. To do this work will cost not less than $500, but in my judgment the town cannot afford to refuse to spend this money for this purpose. I reported last year that of this total of 1,350 acres I could find only about 1,250 acres taxed to owners whose names I could find in the valuation book, so that there seems to be a discrepancy of about 100 acres which does not seem to be taxed to anyone. This land is probably largely woodland and is not very valuable but it should be shown and accounted for. In the northern part of the town on the outskirts there is nothing in the way of plans of land and the same reasons apply why we should have them.

WATER DEPARTMENT.

A water shed [the three reservoirs] of this sort in this locality could not be expected to yield more than enough to permit an average draft of more than about 600,000 gallons per square mile of net land surface per day. On this basis, allowing for leakages in dams, the population which could be supplied at a rate of 60 gallons per day per inhabitant is about 11,000. The estimate of 60 gallons per capita is fully low enough unless the town is largely metered when 50 gallons would be sufficient. We believe that 11,000 to 12,000 is the maximum population which can be served in a succession of dry years.

In 1907 the interest account will drop off to $9,845. It is hoped from now on the department will be self sustaining.

The most effective way to stop the waste of water is by the use of meters. During the past few years all establishments in town using large amounts of water have been placed on meters.

In order to avoid exhausting the present supply, it will probably be found necessary to still further extend the use of meters until every service is metered. This would be necessary if the town should enter the Metropolitan System later as the water would then be paid for by meter to the State, and it would be economy to use the least amount possible at that time.

Acting under the town's chartered right to maintain a supply of pure water, we have decided to prohibit fishing and skating at the reservoirs, and any access to them.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

The general health of the town has been exceptionally good, and the number of contagions reported for the year has been only forty, a number much less than for many years. Our death rate has been considerably less than last year, ninety-eight permits for interment having been granted as against one hundred and fifteen for 1904.

The change in method of collecting the garbage which we made in the early part of last year has proved entirely satisfactory to the Board and to the town at large, but it is a question of only a short time when the force engaged in this work must be increased, with a consequent increase in expense to the town. We are now covering the entire thickly settled parts of the town and reaching into the outskirts, and doing this work with only two men and one horse, and making three collections per week in summer and two in the winter months from each house.

THE LIBRARY.

One of the great needs of the library is a reference room, where the books may be consulted without carrying them a distance from the shelves. As a step in this direction, it is planned to place some of the less frequently used books in the room up stairs, and to provide a table and chairs for use in the space thus gained.

THE LIBRARIAN.

The past year has proved a very busy one. Our circulation has increased 2,106 over last year, consequently it has been impossible to undertake with our small force of attendants as many improvements as we had hoped for.

As the library grows from year to year more time is required for the care of the books. Cataloging is work which cannot be hurried or done at odd times. The Library of Congress cards with the aid of the typewriter give very satisfactory results.

The request system, inaugurated last year, still continues in favor with the public. 432 books have been reserved for persons who have paid for postals. Many others should avail themselves of this privilege.

More illustrated books and magazines are needed for the entertainment of the young people in the reading room, especially on rainy and cold days. That "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do" is too frequently illustrated for the peace and quiet of other readers. But what can be expected when two children are obliged to occupy one chair too large and too high for their feet to reach the floor.

FIRE ENGINEERS.

The force of the department remains the same as last year viz: three engineers, five permanent men, twenty-eight call men and four substitutes, making a total of forty men. Eleven of these men sleep in the engine house.

The central fire station remains in the same condition as last year and is at present more overcrowded than ever. We hope in the near future that the town will provide money for a new central fire station, to be erected on the westerly side of the railroad crossing, and place therein, in addition to what apparatus we now have, a chemical engine and equipment, thus giving better and quicker service to all parts of the town, especially the west side.

TREE WARDEN.

The present year has seen an extraordinary increase of the gypsy and brown tail moths in Winchester. While a year ago the whole area of the town was pretty thoroughly covered with scattered nests, and there were a few limited areas in which the condition was about as bad as it could well be, today nearly all parts of the town are in the latter condition.

There has been an unfortunate disposition on the part of certain citizens who should be able to care for their own property to throw this burden upon the town, particularly in cases where the legal liability of the property (one-half of one per cent. of the assessed valuation of the land) is less than the expenditure necessary to destroy the moths. Such a course should be met and opposed by a united public sentiment, and measures taken to provide against it. The liability should, if possible, be increased.

The confusion in titles and boundaries in other important instances has required the expenditure of time and money in collecting information which the Tree Warden does not consider comes legitimately within his province. It serves, however, to emphasize the importance to the town of having adequate plans of the whole township—a matter which has been repeatedly referred to in former reports, and which should have immediate attention. A single example will give point to this recommendation.

The town apparently owns a tract of land on Pond street, containing several acres, acquired through tax title proceedings. This land has had one of the worst infestations of the brown tail moth in the town, causing pecuniary loss and serious physical suffering to the neighboring owners. It was necessary that something be done to relieve the neighbors of future injury from this source, and the first step was to define the town's property. After more than two days of continuous investigation in the Town Engineer's office and the Registry of Deeds it has been impossible to determine exactly how much land the town owns or what are its boundaries.

OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

The work of the Poor Department increases largely from year to year, although the net cost shows only a small gain. We are still of the opinion that an almshouse or town home is a necessity notwithstanding a special committee reported a year ago that it was inexpedient to establish a town home as long as the present favorable conditions continue.

SEED TIME

The experienced farmer has learned that some grains require far different soil than others; some crops need different handling than others. He knows that a great deal depends upon right planting at the right time, and that the soil must be kept enriched. No use of complaining in summer about a mistake made in the spring. Decide before the seed is planted.

SCHOOL BOARD.

Although the enrolment of pupils is somewhat less than a year ago, the loss has been so distributed that it was impossible to reduce the number of teachers. The expenses of the coming year will be slightly larger than those of the current year because of the gradual raising of teachers' salaries; this increase is being spread over several years and by the end of another year most of the salaries will be on a fairly satisfactory basis; after that, any increase in the pay roll will be due partly to increases in salaries in a few cases requiring longer time than the others for adjustment, and partly to such needed additions to the teaching force as the growth of the town may require.

The school expenditures of Winchester are large, but the town insists, and rightly insists, upon being given the best schools money can provide. It should be frankly stated that our schools can be maintained, and perhaps efficiently maintained, on a smaller expenditure than the present scale. A great deal depends upon what may be regarded as essential and desirable in our school work.

If the town is to continue its school work along the lines which have been followed for a considerable number of years; if it is still believed that the education of the child is not merely drill in the three R's, but includes also the training of the will, the development of character, and the laying of the foundations of good citizenship; then, to accomplish these results and provide a comprehensive discipline and a breadth of education covering the range of subjects heretofore taught, will require $54,000.

SCHOOL SUPERVISOR.

At present the town is well supplied with school houses with ample room to accommodate a normal increase of pupils for several years to come. Aside from ordinary repairs there seems little need of any large expense for school accommodations in the near future. There is neither a poor school building nor a poor school room in the town. Winchester is to be congratulated on this fortunate condition of things.

Of the general tone of the schools, and spirit of the teachers and pupils, I cannot speak too highly. It has been a real pleasure to visit the schools, and to note the harmonious relations existing between the children and their instructors. So long as this condition is maintained there is ground for hope in the future of our schools.

We have many children in our schools who have no books whatever in their homes. If our well-to-do citizens could see the real pleasure shown by these children when the teacher gives them even a soiled and worn-out school book at the end of the year, I am sure that many a child would be made happy by the gift of a book that is neither soiled nor worn out.

What is most needed by the pupils in all the higher grades, both in the Grammar and in the High School, is a change of attitude toward school work. Pupils should be made to feel the importance of a good education, and its bearing upon their future usefulness and happiness.

I wish to make, once more, a recommendation which, I am sure, if adopted by the School Board, will enhance the value of all the schools in the town. I recommend most earnestly the employment of one who can take charge, throughout the town, of what we now call "physical training," and who is also a competent instructor of "vocal training."

Gypsy and Brown-Tail Moths.

Only about six weeks now remain, under ordinary conditions, in which effective work against the gypsy and brown tail moths, in their present winter state, may be carried on. According to the state superintendent of the work against the moths, only about 80 per cent. of the street trees in the infested cities and towns have been cleaned up to this time.

Owners of private estates in many cases have been holding back in the work of cleaning their own trees, with an idea of securing the services of the city or town moth employes, and thus having the work done at a cost of one-half of one per cent. which means merely $5 on $1000.

The sooner such people realize the impossibility of having their work done by town employes and set about the task for themselves, the better opportunity they will have of doing the task before the moths emerge. Even if the town moth employes could find the time to do this work for private individuals, with the present appropriations the state could not meet the expense of reimbursing the cities and towns.

From 1890 up to May of last year the State of Massachusetts expended in the work of fighting the gypsy and the brown tail moths, the sum of $1,194,000. Last year $300,000 more was appropriated, of which $75,000 was to be spent last year, $150,000 during the current year and the remainder for next year.

Fire Insurance by Towns and Cities.

The committee on insurance of the Legislature gave a hearing Tuesday on the bill to authorize towns to do an insurance business. The bill provides that a town by the action of its select men, ratified by a majority of its voters present and voting at a town meeting, may issue policies of insurance upon personal property and real estate buildings situated in the town to owners of such property, such policies to be substantially in accordance with the "Massachusetts Standard Policy," and in no case shall a policy be issued for an amount which with existing insurance exceeds two-thirds the town assessed value of the property nor for a longer term than five years. The bill also provides for the election of a commission of three persons to act as a board of insurance commissioners to fix the rates of insurance and the form of policy.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M.D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff scales or any scalp trouble try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

Town Form of Government the Best.

From the report of the statistic department, of Boston just made public, it is seen that the growth of the cities and towns in what is known as the Greater Boston district is at the expense of Boston. During the past ten years that city has increased in population 19.81 per cent, the outside cities about 25 per cent, and the towns about 35 per cent. From this it will be seen that the tide of homeseekers is namely toward the towns. This is a strong argument for the old-fashioned town meeting and town form of government, wherein politics form no part, and where the humblest citizen can have his say, and where hoodlums and graft are unknown. May Winchester long continue to remain a town and not become a part of Boston.

Remove all Trees Possible.

A few evenings since, Taylor C. Lyford, a former State Moth Inspector, in a lecture at Hudson, said: "They [the gypsy moths] are with us for all time, and scientific men are coming to that conclusion."

This is undoubtedly true, but it is no reason why the fight should not be kept up. To lessen the evil and curtail expense every tree that is decayed and those that can be spared should be cut down. There are hundreds of worn out apple trees in town that should be removed as soon as possible; this will have to be done later. Also many shade trees lining the streets will have to be cut, for the reason that the town cannot stand the expense. Better care for the best properly and let the others go. Over 50 men are at present employed by the Tree Warden, and he looks careworn when he is approached for his opinion on the outlook. Mr. Edwin Ginn has already spent over $3000 in Rangleley, and next year he will have to spend as much, if not more. To protect himself he is removing scores of trees. Trees are becoming a luxury.

Grade Crossing Hearing

The Commissioners appointed by the Superior Court, George W. Wiggin, George F. Swain and Arthur Lord, to consider the question of abolishing the present grade crossing in the centre of the town, will give a hearing in the Selectmen's room, Town Hall Building, on Saturday, March 17, at 11 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of hearing all parties interested.

This is a most important hearing as it not only concerns the town at large, but the business men and property owners in the centre more particularly, who are liable to be affected by the change. The STAR makes the suggestion that the property owners get together for the purpose of talking the matter over and if necessary combine together for the purpose of having counsel to represent them at the hearing if necessary. Action to this end should be taken at once, by some property owner calling a meeting. A great deal may depend upon this step being taken now.

The order of the court and of the commissioners can be found on second page.

Stole While at Winchester Boat Club

Chief of Police McIntosh is on the trail of James E. Darling, late of this town, who is charged with stealing personal property belonging to Mr. Frank Higham of Glen road to the value of about $75, besides property of the Winchester Boat Club and a Boston party. As has been customary in years past, someone has been allowed to sleep at the boat club house during the winter. Darling, who was a friend of Higham, desired the chance to sleep at the club this winter and was allowed to do so. Sometime last week the chief of police was notified that he had disappeared, taking with him considerable property which he did not own. In company with another man he stole several hundred boxes of cough drops from a dealer in Boston, a large quantity of which were recovered at the Boat Club. Darling then intruded upon the hospitality of Higham and took personal property, including clothing, money, etc., while a guest at his home, to the value of some $75. Property of the boat club was also taken including the large silver sailing trophy. So far as is now known nothing in the private lockers was taken outside of some effects belonging to Higham. Darling formerly worked in Winchester, being employed by Mr. James M. Berry, Forest street, Winchester Highlands. He worked there a little over a year. Chief McIntosh has a warrant out for his arrest, together with his companion, and hopes to round them up soon.

DARTMOUTH MUSICAL CLUBS

Concert to be Given in Town Hall next Tuesday Evening.

At the request of Dartmouth's many alumni and friends in Winchester, the musical clubs of the New Hampshire college will give a concert in the Town Hall on next Tuesday evening. This is the first time that a Dartmouth organization has appeared in this town, although Amherst and other colleges have given entertainments here before. It seems fitting that a college which has so many representatives from this section should show us a bit of her talent, in this, one of her strongest non-athletic activities. Only in the last ten years of President Tucker's administration has Dartmouth developed into one of the leading eastern colleges, in both athletic and social interests. Her recent athletic achievements are well known to all, and now an opportunity is given to the residents of Winchester to judge of her ability in this other, equally important branch of college life. The Dartmouth Musical Clubs have been well received throughout the New England States, New York and the West. On this, their mid-winter trip, the clubs will play in Newton, Boston, Worcester, Portsmouth, Lowell and Winchester.

Some of the attractions which the present clubs offer are readings by Mr. Harry P. Wayman '06, a banjo duet by Messrs. Laton and Davis, and the usual programme offered by college musical clubs. As a departure from the ordinary, Messrs. Reddon and Felt present a very amusing piano duet.

Winchester has two representatives in the personnel of this year's Mandolin Club, Mr. E. B. Badger '08, and Mr. C. R. Main '07, both graduates of the local High School.

It is hoped that Dartmouth's many friends here will give this concert their heartiest support so that this may not be the only time we may receive a visit from the Hanover boys.

The Memorable Flood.

It was 20 years ago Wednesday that Winchester suffered the worst known flood in its history. It was on Saturday, Feb. 14, 1886, and previous to that date it had been raining heavily for several days, the ground being covered with a large amount of snow, and the ponds with thick ice. The snow becoming sodden with water rushed down the side hills, filling the ponds in the centre of the town. The North Reservoir also discharged a vast volume of water, and this also emptying into the ponds, the water was soon rushing over Pleasant and Main streets at the bridges. The ice on the ponds breaking up the huge cakes blocked the culverts under the bridges and made these streets impassable, while the dam at Whitney's mill was carried away. Men worked almost all night breaking up the ice into small pieces with dynamite so as to relieve the embargo, and the strain on the bridges and it was not until morning that the danger of the entire centre of the town becoming flooded was relieved. The water reached the railroad crossing, and it was so deep on the main line of the steam road above the crossing that all traffic had to go by way of the Woburn loop.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

In your last issue you tell a little of Cong. McCall's speech on the rate bill, it being a dream of Mr. Bryan's. Please tell that the dream has been adopted by the President, supported by Speaker Cannon and Attorney-Gen. Moody, and Mr. McCall was one of only seven Republicans to oppose it, and is now up to the Senate and will soon be on the President's desk and signed. The people are with the dreamers, and the dreamer is with the people. Even Senator Lodge says he has disposed of his railroad securities and is with the President.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The Middlesex Co. convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was entertained Tuesday by the Woburn W. C. T. U. in the Baptist Church and although the weather was unfavorable a good number attended and it was a very interesting meeting. The pastor of the Baptist Church gave a most cordial welcome, among other things he said, "It is the boast of the city that we have a good water system but we have a bad whiskey system."

Mrs. Stevenson gave a very stirring address on the "World's convention, what does it mean to Massachusetts?" She gave a brief sketch of the six world's conventions that have been held, and before she closed everybody was ready to say I am glad Massachusetts is to have the honor and privilege of entertaining in Boston the seventh next October.

An encouraging and pleasant feature of the day was the entrance of the Loyal Temperance Legion at noon who sang and repeated the pledge and their rallying cry. Eight of our members attended.

Miss Florence Fletcher has been obliged to give up leading the orchestra on account of being out of town for several weeks. Miss Fletcher has been very successful indeed with her work, and has worked hard for the good of the orchestra. We are fortunate in securing through Miss Fletcher's suggestion, Mrs. M. Sherman Raymond of Boston, who will conduct the orchestra for the remainder of the season.

Gymnasium classes are quite largely attended, especially the boys' classes.

Calumet lost to Winthrop Yacht Club on Tuesday night in its Boston Pin game on the latter's alleys.

Winthrop had the pins falling in good shape, piling up a total of 1500. Calumet was not close to its opponents in any but the second string which it won easily. Littlefield was high for the home team with 121 and 316.

The score:

Castle Square Theatre.

"The Secret of Polichinelle" is to have its first stock company performance in Boston next week. Although this play is of French origin, it is, in its American version as clean and as wholesome as it is and originated among the Puritanical hills of New England. Its success both in Paris and in this country, where it made a successful tour two seasons ago under the management of James K. Hackett, brought it into deserved prominence, and its appearance at the Castle Square Theatre next week is therefore certain to arouse widespread enthusiasm. There is a pure and genuine heart interest in the plot and the characters who range in years from childhood to old age, and its successive acts bring forth the best sentiments in the hearts of the spectators.

The staging of the play will be pictorially perfect, and the audience will have the opportunity to see life in Paris as it is lived at the present day. The cast will enlist the services of almost the entire membership of the stock company.

Was Mistaken.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I observe "An Explanation" signed by the Edison Company which appears to contradict one of the statements in my communication which you kindly published last week.

It seems that I was mistaken in asserting that the indicator or thermometer established a minimum charge which no amount of economy could reduce. Still I think I stated the general understanding of what was learned at the hearing.

The company admits however that the indicator does establish the quantity that must be paid for at the long rate of nine tenths of a cent per lamp per hour.

If two consumers in the month of February use exactly the same quantity of the current, say 40,000 watts, the one who at any time during the month has ten lamps lighted at one time will be charged about $1.65 more than the one who by careful attention restricts his illumination to five lamps. The agent says this is because the former uses his current in a way more costly to the company; but I am assured that the actual expense is less to maintain a current to supply a great number of lamps a short period than a smaller number of lamps a longer period. The theory and practice of the company in establishing its discounts to the large individual consumers in Boston is directly contrary to the theory and practice of discounts to its moderate consumers in the suburban districts.

The Gas and Electric Light Commission promise to give us a patient hearing and it is in their power to give us redress if our grievances are sufficiently established.

Third Annual Banquet and Exhibition of the Middlesex Sportsman's Association.

The third annual banquet and exhibit of the Middlesex Sportsman's Association will be held on Monday evening, Feb. 19th, at the Town Hall and Historic Hall, Lexington. It is expected that the banquet will be attended by about 300 members and friends. Winchester will probably send a delegation of about 50, there being almost 40 members of the association in this town. The entertainment committee for the evening includes Mr. E. S. Barker and Dr. Hovey L. Shepherd, who are working hard to make their department a success. The dinner will take place at 6:30 p. m., following which the annual show and exhibition will be formally opened and viewed by all attending. The public will be admitted to the show from Feb. 20 to Feb. 24. The admission will be 10 cents. The show this year will be the best ever given in this vicinity and will include a large collection of game heads and live wild animals. For the convenience of the large number which it is expected will attend the banquet and opening from Winchester, a special return car will be provided. All who wish to view the exhibition should take a Lexington electric, as they all pass the door.

Mrs. Johanna Buckley Dead.

Mrs. Johanna (Crowley) Buckley, said by many to be 100 years old, died at her home on Salem street Thursday morning from the result of a shock received last Saturday. She was born in Ireland and had lived in this town for about 65 years. Her age as near as can be reckoned, was between 92 and 95 years.

During her residence here she worked for many of the older prominent families, and her name will be remembered by many. The whereabouts of her husband is not known, except that he was last seen alive about 15 years ago.

Mrs. Buckley leaves considerable property, including her house and land. It is said that this is disposed of by a will left by her.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church on this Friday morning. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

Winchester's water works has cost the town $570,549.47.

Surprised the Astronomer.

Dr. Flannister, who was astronomer royal in Newton's time, was rather tickled by the belief of his neighbors in his powers of consulting the stars about terrestrial affairs. An old washerwoman at Greenwich who had been robbed of her linen came to consult him about its recovery. So he set about drawing squares and circles and suggested that if she went into a certain field he would not be surprised if she found her lost linen in a ditch. But when she came back "with haste and joy" and a half crown in her hand for his fee he was not only very much surprised, but alarmed. "Good woman," he said, "I am heartily glad you have found your linen, but I assure you I know nothing of it and intended to read you a lecture on the folly of applying to any person to know events not in human power to tell, but I see Satan has a mind I should deal with him, and never will I attempt such an affair again so long as I live."

Why Blackie Wore the Plaid.

Professor Blackie frequently stayed at Dr. Donnell Macleod's house in Glasgow. One night, said the doctor, we were sitting up together. Blackie said in his brusque way, "Whatever other faults I have, I am free from vanity." An incredulous smile on my face roused him. "You don't believe that. Give me an instance." Being thus challenged, I said, "Why do you walk about flourishing a plaid continually?" "I'll give you the history of that, sir. When I was a poor man and when my wife and I had our difficulties, she one day drew my attention to the threadbare character of my suit and asked me to order a new one. I told her I could not afford it just then, when she went, like a noble woman, and put her own plaid shawl on my shoulders, and I have worn a plaid ever since in memory of her loving deed."

Spiders That Change Colors.

An interesting instance of color mimicry in spiders has been observed in the south of France. The spiders of that region when in search of prey hide in the convolvulus flowers. It has been noticed that a white variety of spider frequented the white flowers. A greenish colored variety made the green flowers his home, and a pink one lived principally in the pink flowers. The colors of the three varieties were at first supposed to be permanent, but it has recently been discovered that the color of any one of these spiders changes within a few days if the insect he placed in the convolvulus of a different colored flower from that which he has been using as his home. Four spiders—pink, white, green and yellow in color—were all put in a box together, and within three days all were white.

The Girl He Left Behind.

There is a public library in Baltimore that has a regulation by which any member wanting a particular book which is not "in" can by paying a small sum secure the next turn, and upon the book's coming in the librarian sends him a notification. In this connection an attaché of the library tells of an amusing incident. A member desired a copy of a novel entitled "The Girl He Left Behind Him." The book not being in, he made the customary deposit and in due course received a notification. This the member's wife received—to her alarm, at first—for it read as follows: "Mr. Blank is informed that 'The Girl He Left Behind Him' is now in the library and will be kept for him till Friday morning next."—Success Magazine.

The Silver Lining.

The situation is seldom quite as bad as it might be. Happy is the spirit that recognizes this truth and takes comfort to itself in the thought of what is spared. The Irishman whose tale of calamity is related in the Birmingham (England) Post belongs to this choice class of fortunates.

Cassidy had just been injured in a blast. "Poor b'y!" exclaimed O'Hara consolingly. "Tis tough luck to have yer hand blown off."

"Och! Faith, it might have been worse," replied Cassidy. "Suppose O'Hara had me week's wages in it at the time!"

Pulverized Diamond.

According to the Mohammedans of southern India, pulverized diamond is the least painful, the most active and the most certain of all poisons. According to "Wilke's History," the powder of diamonds is kept on hand by the wealthy only presumably as a last resource. But a belief in the poisonous character of the diamond also existed in Italy in the sixteenth century.

Yellow Fever.

There is a marked peculiarity about yellow fever which distinguishes it from most epidemics. It is essentially a disease of a hot climate, and it takes a certain amount and duration of heat to awaken it to life. It is said that it can never prevail where Indian corn will not ripen.

Jumble of Languages.

There are towns in Hungary, and small towns, too, where from seven to ten languages are constantly being used. On the Galician frontier there is in a lovely valley the old town of Eperjes. The number of its inhabitants do not exceed 12,000. To this day the good people of Eperjes are in the habit of talking or being talked to in six different languages and several dialects. An ordinary household will include a Slovak manservant, a Hungarian coachman, a German cook and a Polish chambermaid. What is still more remarkable, each grade of society will tenaciously cling to its own language for centuries.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his disease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, cases, No. 1, writes: "I am now past 40 years of age, and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physic, no Astringent, no Purgative, no Cathartic, no Soda, Morphine or any preparation of opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called "Dyspepsia cures." It cures by restoring the natural action of the stomach, and being guaranteed to cure or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores of all countries, get the name, Albert's Little Dinner Pill, Boston, Mass., and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

A Prehistoric Monument.

In San Juan, California, in the county of San Juan, there is situated one of the most remarkable prehistoric monuments known to the archaeologists. It is a structure that looks like an immense rock rising from the plains of Carissa, but upon nearer approach it is seen to be a temple of extraordinary dimensions and of unknown antiquity. The inner court has a level floor 225 feet long and 125 feet wide, and the ceiling is from 10 to 15 feet high, according to estimation. The building was evidently used by prehistoric man, but for what purpose and how long since no one knows. It has been suggested, however, that it was either a temple of worship or the capital of some ancient government. The walls and portions of the ceiling are decorated with paintings in colors red, white and black, many of them supposed to have some symbolic meaning.

PRICE, FIVE CENTS

EDISON LIGHT RATES.

Mr. L. R. Wallis Talks to Members of the Calumet Club.

Gives His Reasons for the Rates Charged by the Edison Co.

Mr. Louis R. Wallis, formerly manager of the Woburn Electric Light Company, gave a very interesting talk before the members of the Calumet Club last Saturday evening on "Electric Light Rates," which was listened to closely throughout. He spoke in part as follows:

MR. LOUIS R. WALLIS.

Formerly manager of the Woburn Electric Light Co. who talked to members of the Calumet Club on "Electric Light Rates."

Six years ago I adopted, advisedly, a demand system of charging, having become convinced of the great advantage it would create for both the consumer and the company with which I was connected, which then supplied Winchester with electric light and power.

I appreciate that an attack upon the Edison method of charging would be the popular presentation of this subject here this evening, but I believe that most men wish to judge fairly from a proper presentation and apprehension of the facts and, to be consistent, I must stand by my recorded statements during the years I was actively engaged in the business and, after all, I prefer consistency to popularity, secured by vacillancy.

With you, who were living in Winchester, that system was then misunderstood and much the same feeling prevailed among the consumers as does now. When the results in dollars and cents became manifest, opposition generally ceased.

The Edison Company, in offering a demand system of charging based upon exactly the same conditions and theories and differing only in minor details, is experiencing an opposition of like nature, differing only in intensity.

I am thankful that it is now its turn instead of a second round for myself. To the extent of attempting to relieve the situation of misconception, I have accepted the task of the evening, and my efforts are entirely in the interest of you gentlemen and all electric consumers of the town. The Edison Company is welcome to any benefits accruing to it as the result of this evening's talk.

The advocates of a uniform price advance the argument that electricity can and ought to be supplied on conditions similar to gas. It is very doubtful, however, if there is any other business carried on under conditions similar to those under which electricity must be supplied. The production and sale of electricity differ from any other business in that the supply company must manufacture its product only as it is required and it cannot be commercially stored, consequently the company's plant and mains must be governed by the maximum demand made upon them at any time.

The electric business was started as a competitor to gas. The early promoters of this then new method of lighting were naturally inclined to adopt the same method of charging as then in vogue among their competitors. Without meters they were compelled to charge rates per lamp independent of the use. Later when meters were procurable they adopted the system used by gas companies and based their prices on what gas was then selling for, and not on what it cost to produce and distribute their own product. Starting thus, inconsistent, the majority of electric supply stations in this country (municipally controlled or otherwise) have continued to this day to base the selling price of the product on anything and everything else but its cost to produce and deliver the commodity.

No manufacturing undertaking can be considered to trade on a sound commercial basis unless it has ascertained to some degree of accuracy the cost of supplying the commodity it produces.

The enormous cost of getting ready to supply electricity, compared with the cost of continuing to supply when ready, can be best realized by the statement that it costs two and one half times as much to supply a unit to a consumer who uses his lights on the average only one hour per day as it does to another who uses them three hours per day.

The basis of a demand system of charging can be more readily understood by the consideration of the following illustration: Let us suppose that a 5 H. P. engine is being run to consecutive hours daily for a customer whose use of the power consists of a total of one hour distributed over the ten hours the engine is in daily operation. That the cost of operation including all legitimate fixed charges is say $20 per month—that the profit desired is 25 per cent. and, consequently the charge to the customer is $25 per month. Now supposing the customer desires to use the power every hour during the ten hours the engine is in operation which increases the cost of operation to, say, $40 per month. Because he uses ten times as much power during the month, should he be charged $50—simply because he was charged $25 for one tenth as much as he now wants to use—or should he be charged $50 which would cover a 25 per cent. profit on the new cost he has created?

Coming Out Reception.

Mrs. William B. French gave a very handsome and elaborate reception at her home on Church street on Saturday afternoon last to mark the coming out of her daughter, Miss Margaret.

The reception was from 4.30 to 7 and was followed in the evening by dancing, during which time about 325 guests called. Mrs. French and her daughter received the guests in the library, which was handsomely decorated with cut and potted flowers, the effect being yellow; yellow jonquils and violets predominating in the decoration. Mrs. French was gowned in black crepe de chine, trimmed with point lace, and Miss Margaret wore white chiffon and carried pink roses and violets.

The reception room was decorated with pink roses and pink sweet peas, while the dining room was a mass of red—roses, carnations, pinks and tulips, being displayed everywhere, in bowls and vases, with a solid bank of red carnations on the mantel over the fireplace and another bank of red tulips on the dining table. The flowers and decorations were the most beautiful by far which have been seen in town this winter.

Frappe, punch and tea tables were in the library, dining and reception rooms, being presided over by the following young ladies: Miss May Kellogg, Miss May Barta, Miss Elinor Barta, Miss Bertha Russell, Miss Bertha Smith, Miss Margaret Elder, Miss Charlotte Nickerson, Miss Daphne Dunbar, Miss Charlotte Dwinell, Miss Mary Whitney of Brookline, Miss Olive Reed and Miss Mary Reed of Belmont and Miss Margaret Lord of Cambridge.

Supper was served at half past seven, which was followed by a cotillion. The favors used in the dancing were very pretty, one figure having bouquets of roses and violets, another small canes, whips and roses, and a valentine figure with little favors of hearts and arrows.

Both Mrs. French and her daughter received very many beautiful bouquets and baskets of violets, lilies of the valley, sweet peas and other flowers during the afternoon and evening.

Municipal Lighting.

The town of Winchester is fast for a municipal lighting plant. The Edison company got control of the Winchester business, having bought out the Woburn company, has about doubled the cost of light. Several public meetings have been held. If Winchester, with its conservative population, should establish a plant it would start the agitation all over the state. The Edison people will be responsible for it.—[Melrose Journal.]

POLITICAL SITUATION.

A Lively Fight for Town Clerk at the Polls.

Not Many Candidates for Selectmen and But One for Auditor.

The principal fight this year will be for the Town Clerkship. Mr. Carter, the present clerk, who received the caucus nomination has announced that he will, if elected, take the clerkships recommended by the special committee. It will be remembered that Mr. Carter declined to be a candidate for the combined offices of Collector and Town Clerk and also to assume the duties of the clerkships mentioned in the committee's report, as he did not believe the scheme to be practical.

Mr. William C. Newell has taken out nomination papers for Town Clerk and will, if elected, assume the duties of the proposed general clerk. He will not try for the collectorship, so this will leave the present collector, Mr. Bell, alone in the field. A rumor having been circulated that Mr. Bell would not be a candidate a year hence, and thus open up the way for the consolidation of the offices of Collector and Town Clerk in 1907, he was interviewed by a representative of the STAR yesterday. Mr. Bell said his retirement from office next year depended a good deal on circumstances; that if certain things turned out as he expected they would, then he would retire from the office.

However, there is certain to be a vigorous fight for the Town Clerkship between Messrs. Carter and Newell.

At the present time there are but five candidates for the Board of Selectmen. Mr. John H. Carter, the present member of the Board, is being urged by a number of influential citizens to take out nomination papers, among them, it is said, being Mr. Samuel J. Elder, Mr. George L. Huntress and other citizens of equal prominence. Selectman Symmes has also offered, it is said, to step to one side in his favor. As yet Mr. Carter is undecided whether to take out nomination papers or not. Papers were taken out favorable to Mr. William J. Daly, a candidate for the Board, and notwithstanding the requisite number of names were signed to it, he declined to affix his signature and run for the office.

As far as known up to the present time, Mr. William H. Herrick will be the only candidate for Auditor. Mr. W. L. Tuck has taken out nomination papers and will have his name put on the official ballot as a candidate for Assessor.

As yet no nomination papers have been filed with the Town Clerk. But as the time for handing them in does not expire until late Monday afternoon, there is yet time for many new candidates, but this is hardly probable.

A Delightful Afternoon of Whist.

The second of the whist parties given by the Ladies' Friendly brought out a large gathering of players on Friday to the hospitable home of Mrs. Oren C. Sanborn on Central street. The weather was all that could be desired and the costumes of the guests were very handsome. Twenty three tables were occupied, while quite a number came in a social way and did not play. The game lasted from three until five, and was in every way a delightful affair. The prizes were won by Mrs. Geo. F. Edgett of 9 Lawrence street first, and Mrs. Frederick Clark of Glengarry second; both prizes were alike, being handsome little glass comotes. The two consolation prizes were won by Mrs. Willard of Everett avenue and Mrs. Louis R. Wallis of 62 Bacon street. These prizes were potted hyacinths and a bouquet of violets. Over 100 tickets were sold.

Ladies' Night.

The entertainment at the Calumet Club on Wednesday evening was beyond question the very best of a like nature yet given in honor of the ladies. The affair was one of the series of ladies' nights which the club holds during the winter, and the attendance this week fully warranted the excellent program. Of the artists who took part, Miss Beatrice Herford is the leader of Winchester's favorites as a reader and her work cannot be spoken of with enough praise to suit many of her admirers here, while Miss Edith Porter certainly made a large opening into popularity by her excellent work on the violin.

The program was as follows: by Miss Herford, "Piazza Ladies," "In a Restaurant," "The Country Store"; by Miss Porter, Canzonetta, D'Ambrosio, Thais, Massenet, Berceuse, Catherine. Accompanied, Miss Connell.

Despite the stormy evening the attendance was over 300.

Calumet Club Notes.

Everett W. Burdett, Esq., will speak at the Calumet Club on Saturday evening on Municipal Ownership. Mr. Burdett is a Boston lawyer and one of the best posted men in the country on that subject.

Selectman Carter's Position.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I write this in answer to inquiries as to whether or not I will be a candidate for Selectman. When a candidate for Selectman in 1902, I said over my name in the STAR, that if elected I should not in the future do anything myself towards securing a nomination or election. I have not done so since and do not propose to now. My position is, that having served the town for four years I should stand on my official service, and while I say nothing about its quality I may be pardoned for saying that in quantity there has been considerable of it, as I have not missed a meeting or hearing of any kind in the four years. Whether I shall run or not this year I do not at present know, but if I shall, I do not want the vote of any man unless he believes it is for the interest of the town to so vote, as that is all I care for. There will be plenty of candidates to vote for.

JOHN H. CARTER.

Uncared for Sidewalks.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

One thing that strikes a comparatively new comer to Winchester as singular, is the utter neglect in keeping the sidewalks free from snow and ice, so that they are safe for pedestrians to walk upon. I don't know whether or not the town has any laws bearing on this matter, but if there are none, then some should be framed to apply at least to the most travelled streets. The town or the abutters should see that the walks are in a safe condition for pedestrians.

Lebanon street which I am frequently obliged to use has a good concrete sidewalk, yet it is one of the most dangerous streets in town for pedestrians. No attempt is made to clear off the snow other than that by the town plough. The snow melts, runs down the steep walk and at night freezes into a glare of ice or else into hubbly slippery and treacherous mounds that make the walk positively dangerous. Last week a gentleman fell and almost broke his wrist, and a few days previous a lady was thrown and badly shaken up, also there have been many minor accidents. Probably ten minutes work on the part of the abutters or the town would make travel safe, and thereby prevent considerable discomfort and possible accidents to the many people, especially the aged, who are obliged to go up and down this street.

HILLCREST.

Winchester People in Vaudeville.

The Junior Charity club of Boston is to give a vaudeville entertainment in Potter hall of that city on March 9th, in which a number of Winchester people will take part. One of the features of the evening is to be a cake walk, and in this two Winchester couples will compete, Miss Evelyn Ayer and Mr. Lawrence Geddis and Miss Edith Kendall and Mr. Ted Willis. Miss Florence Bunting and Miss Adalade Pratt are to appear in a Japanese dance, and Mrs. Frank Winn is to sing. The president of the society, Mrs. Edgar M. Young, of this town, will also take part and a number of Winchester people have been selected to usher. This entertainment is for the benefit of the Woman's Charity Club Hospital.

Vesper Services.

A series of vesper services will be held in the Unitarian Church, beginning March 4th, and continuing through Lent. Mr. Lawrence will preach on March 4th and April 1st. Prof. W. W. Fenn, Dean of the Theological Faculty of Harvard College, Rev. James De Normandie, D.D., of Roxbury, and Rev. Samuel M. Crothers, D.D., of Cambridge, will preach on the intervening Sundays. Dr. Crothers is best known through his books, "The Gentle Reader" and "The Pardoner's Wallet." There will be special music by the church choir, assisted by a male quartette. The services will be held at 5 o'clock, instead of at seven, as heretofore.

The Fortnightly.

The next meeting of The Fortnightly will be held on Monday afternoon, Feb. 26. There will be a lecture by Mr. Winslow Upton, of Brown University, who will take for his subject "What Astronomers are Doing at the Present Time." The meeting is in charge of the Science Committee, Mrs. Gertrude Harrison, chairman.

Four Demonstration Lectures.

The Woman's Guild of the Church of the Epiphany are to give a course of four lectures upon cooking under the direction of Miss Maria Willett Howard, director of Household Economics at Simmons College, Boston. These lectures will be given in the Calumet Hall on March 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th, at 2.30 o'clock. Tickets for the course $2.00, or single lectures 50c. each. Arlington Gas Light range to be used.

SPORTSMAN'S CHIEF.

Edward S. Barker Elected President of Middlesex Assoc'n.

An Interesting Exhibit by the Association at Lexington.

The third annual banquet and exhibition of the Middlesex Sportsman's Association was held on Monday evening in the Town Hall at Lexington, and attended by over fifty Winchester gentlemen. This town probably had the largest united attendance of any of the 350 member and guests. Historic Hall has been transformed into a woodland for the exhibit. The first floor is given over entirely to live stock, and arranged around the room are cages containing red foxes, muskrats, owls and many other denizens of the forest. A Lady Amherst pheasant occupies a prominent position. Directly in front of the door is a large bald eagle, mounted on a pedestal, with wings outspread.

On the second floor are exhibited a magnificent display of trophies—heads, skins, fish, guns, birds and in fact everything which is of interest to the sportsman. Winchester members are not lacking as exhibitors, and Mr. Barker has one of the largest displays in the hall, while Messrs. C. A. Lane, George and many cities and towns represented at the affair almost filling one of the six long tables at the banquet.

At the close of the dinner, the election of officers for the current year resulted in the selection of Mr. Edward S. Barker for president, and this popular gentleman was escorted to the chair amid much applause and cheering and presided during the remainder of the evening. He was presented with a very elaborate and heavy gavel upon taking the chair by his admirers. This gavel was afterwards reported to be the hub of a wheel from one of Mr. Chas. A. Lane's coal wagons, with all but one of the spokes removed.

Two other Winchester gentlemen were elected to office—Mr. Chas. A. Lane and Dr. Hovey L. Shepherd—who were placed on the Executive Committee.

At the close of the banquet the exhibition in Historic hall was viewed by the Louis Goddu, George Farrington and Dr. H. L. Shepherd have some fine specimens of heads, birds, skins and fish. The exhibition, which was open during the present week, was viewed by many Winchester people. It is anticipated that the dinner and exhibition will be held in Winchester next year.

Among some of the Winchester gentlemen who attended were: Edward S. Barker, Chas. A. Lane, C. S. Tenney, W. P. Nickerson, E. W. Farmer, H. P. Farmer, A. E. Whitney, Geo. Carter, Frank Egan, F. W. Winn, Frank Chapman, A. T. Downer, F. N. Kerr, N. H. Taylor, Geo. Goddu, Louis Goddu, Irving Symmes, T. Price Wilson, J. H. Dwinell, Geo. Farrington, Walter Farrington, Walter F. Symmes, George Barker, Stephen Ireland, E. C. Starr, Geo. A. Burgess, Dr. M. A. Cummings, W. M. Smith, W. D. Richards, and F. S. Tufts.

Married Fifty Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cowdery quietly observed their golden wedding anniversary yesterday at their home on Canal street. They were both born in Chester, N. H. Early in life Mr. Cowdery entered the employ of Church & Lane, piano case makers, of Winchester. This plant was a pioneer in the piano trade. In time he became foreman of the factory, and on the death of Mr. Lane the firm of Cowdery, Cobb & Nichols was established which continued the business in unbroken partnership for thirty five years, retiring ten years ago. This firm employed about fifty skillful mechanics, and their product was shipped to well-known makers of Boston, New York and Philadelphia. Mr. Cowdery has served Winchester as selectman, assessor, and on the committee appointed by the town to locate and construct the present town hall. He was a deacon for many years of the First Congregational Church. Mrs. Cowdery is a daughter of the late Captain David Shaw of Chester, and until her marriage was a teacher in her native town. They have two sons and one daughter—Charles H., William R. and Hattie I.

Richardson's Market Broken Into.

Richardson's market on Pleasant street was entered some time Monday night by breaking the glass in the rear door on Winchester place. The burglars did not secure a great deal of booty as the loss was only about $5 in money. Drawers were thoroughly ransacked in the offices, one of the locked drawers being entirely demolished in the effort to get at the contents. The safe was not molested. The stock of goods in the store was undisturbed as far as could be ascertained. Undoubtedly the scene of the break being so near the centre, no attempt was made to free the safe.

Mr. L. R. Wallis Appointed to an Important Position.

Mr. L. R. Wallis informs us that he has entered the employ of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company and will have special charge of the district formerly covered by the Woburn Light, Heat and Power Company, with headquarters at 3 Head Place, Boston.

Agreements have been signed for the transfer of a house and three-fourths of an acre of land on Canal street to George Poland who buys for occupancy.

Mrs. Edwin B. Palmer Dead.

Mrs. Taira Merriman Palmer, widow of the late Edwin B. Palmer, passed away at her home on Dix street, Monday morning. Her death was due to the results of a paralytic shock received some two years ago, and since which she had been in ill health. Her age was 76 years.

Mrs. Palmer was born in Brunswick, Me., her parents being William and Salome Field. She had resided in Winchester some 20 years, coming here from Ipswich. During all her life previous to her residence here she was exceedingly active in all church and benevolent work. She was a member of the Congregational Church, having joined in 1886, and also a member of the Western Missionary Society.

She leaves two daughters, Eva M., a well known teacher at the High School, and Frances K., besides one son, Edward F., and a grand daughter, Frances. Her husband died here about two years ago.

Funeral services were held from the residence on Dix street Tuesday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, Rev. D. Augustine Newton of the Congregational Church officiating.

The bearers were Eben Caldwell, Henry C. Ordway and Preston Pond.

The floral tributes were very beautiful, including tributes from the teachers and the classes of 1906 and 1907 of the High school.

The burial was in Wildwood.

Statement by Mr. George Carter.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Through the STAR, I desire to express my appreciation of the compliment I received at the late town caucus in nominating me candidate for election to the office of town clerk. As I made no effort to secure the nomination and publicly stated I would not accept the town clerkship consolidated with the collectorship, the action of the caucus is particularly complimentary and pleasing to me personally. While I would not accept the town clerkship under the conditions advocated by the committee on consolidation, I would not object, and never have objected, to the town clerk serving the various boards and committees as clerk, and if elected at the annual meeting will gladly do my part, serving as clerk in accordance with the recommendation of the committee. Respectfully yours, GEORGE H. CARTER.

A Good Word for Engineer Hinds.

TACOMA, WASH., Feb. 10, 1906.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

I have just received a letter from a friend in Winchester saying that the town had accepted the report of Special Committee on Town Govt. and were to provide for a Board of Public Works.

I understand that Mr. Hinds and Mr. Spates are both out for the position. This of course would be natural. Knowing both men as I do and also having been closely connected for a number of years with town affairs, I would like to say a few words for publication regarding the merits of Mr. Hinds; and his qualifications for the position.

In the first place he is perfectly honest. (and that is a qualification in municipal affairs which is being looked into pretty sharp these days).

Also, Mr. Hinds has the required knowledge as a practical engineer; is familiar with all of the workings of the different departments and methods of doing the work, and I will say better methods than have been practiced by those who have charge of the street and water departments.

I say this without hesitation, as I have been in a position to know whereof I speak.

The position of Supt. of Public Works should be a man who has engineering qualifications, but not high science, a man who knows how to handle men, and who has the respect of his men, a man who can meet the people and his Board of Commissioners.

In Mr. Hinds the town will have a hardworking level headed man and I know that he will do what is right for the town in every way. He has all of the qualifications necessary for a superintendent and if I was there in town I should try my utmost to have him obtain the place. I probably know him better than anybody else—that is, as to qualifications for the position, as he and I were in the same work from 1895 to 1903 and in that time I found him perfectly upright and honest; always doing his work well with good ideas. The fact of his being with the Sewer Department as long as he has would warrant giving him the higher position.

It has been said that as Mr. Hinds was a town man he could not get the job. If this is a fact I think the people of Winchester should go and crawl into a hole and pull the hole in after them. I hope you will publish this letter. I wish I could say more on the subject but will not at this time. Yours truly,

E. D. FLETCHER.

Play by the Mott Ten.

The Mott Ten of the Unitarian Church presented a very acceptable and well acted little farce on last Friday evening in Metcalf Hall at the church. The play was entitled "Six Kleptomaniacs," and the audience showed its appreciation of the performers' efforts by every evidence of good will. The cast included some ten members of the society and was as follows:

Mrs. Reynolds—An advertiser for kleptomaniacs, Ruth S. Symmes

Inez White—A sympathetic friend, Beatrice Tuck

Clare Reynolds—The real (?) kleptomaniac, Dorothy M. Ayer

Claudia Snell—Modiste and Dressmaker; also maker of fine costumes; cutter and baster, Ethel Pierce

Mrs. Thaddeus Lynch—Who does finger nails and gives farcical massage, Marian Cole Bridgette De Flanagan—A kleptomaniac who can trace her descendants back as far as they make them, Helen G. Ayer

Madame Juliette—Who had hoped to be ze widow of ten men, but is ze widow of only one, Elmer M. Stacy

Jennie—A maid who doesn't like "spiriting," Dorothea Chase

Carrie Brown—Der flying angel, Elsie Adams

Probably no one of those who took part can deserve especial praise over the others as all deserve much credit for the work displayed. At the close of the play dancing was indulged in by all, the music being very pleasingly given by Miss Helen Johnson and Miss Mabel Wingate.

Worth More.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

After thinking the matter over, I have come to the conclusion that $2000 a year is a pretty small sum to pay to a man of the calibre that will be required to successfully do the work of the proposed general clerk who is to assume the duties of the Town Clerk and also the Collector of Taxes. It is proposed that he shall work ten hours a day and also be present at his office two evenings a week and attend various board meetings. A man to do all this, can command double the proposed salary.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The State Executive Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association of Massachusetts and Rhode Island has issued a very interesting report of the work throughout the "two states." The report is entitled "Nine Whats." The committee is composed of thirty business and professional men who are elected at a biennial convention, the voting power being vested in official delegates sent from the local city college, county and railroad associations.

From three to five hours are given monthly, (July and August excepted), by these busy men in listening to reports and advising and planning how to meet the problems that come from hundreds of communities all over the two states.

The committee employs a State Secretary, two Field Secretaries, a Boy's Secretary, an Industrial Educational Secretary, a County Secretary, a College or Student Secretary, an Army Secretary for the American soldiers in the Philippines and four office stenographers and bookkeepers, twelve in all.

In the two states there are 45 city, 25 student, 17 small town and 5 railroad organized associations. The total membership numbers more than 29,000, and employing 170 secretaries and directors. Included in the above are 55 boys' branches having a membership of more than 6,000. The boys department of the Young Men's Christian Association was organized early in the sixties, by Mr. Wm. H. Whipple of Salem.

Mr. Whipple early had a desire to travel, and while pursuing his studies in the Salem schools determined to go abroad as soon as he had completed his education. During his summer vacations he worked in one of the Salem banks. Upon graduating from school, he decided to accept a position as bookkeeper in the banks thus postponing his trip abroad. Saturday afternoons he would invite a company of boys to take walks with him, when they usually went through the woods, studied birds, flowers and stones. The walks began to be anticipated by the boys and Saturday afternoons became one of the brightest spots in the boy's life.

The boys were later invited to Mr. Whipple's home and a reading club was organized. It soon became necessary to secure a room as the work began to increase and a membership fee of 25c per year was charged. In a few years' time Mr. Whipple gave up his position in the bank and devoted his entire time gratis to the work for boys.

There are six city associations inactive on account of no suitable buildings.

One of the strong features of the work in the two states is the Auxiliary to the association. It is composed of 8,000 women who are actively engaged in increasing the interest in many departments.

Regardless of the breadth of Association work it is a noteworthy fact that fifty cities and towns ranging from 5,000 to 23,000 in population, and eighty three towns of 2,000 to 5,000 have no organized work. There are thousands of young men in this unorganized field who are not reached by the Y. M. C. A. There are also fully 260,000 boys between the ages of 12 and 17 years who are not directly influenced by the organization, 150,000 of these boys are employed.

There are two camps for boys, one on the Maine coast and another in the Berkshire hills.

Camp (Durrell) reunion was held in Everett last Saturday.

The regular meeting of the board of directors of the Association was held on Monday evening, Vice President Harrison Parker in the chair. Mr. H. W. Gibson, State secretary for the boys' work, gave a very interesting account of the work in the two states.

Secretaries conference meets in Springfield, Mass., at the Y. M. C. A. Training School Feb. 27, 28 and March 1st.

The Boys' Conference meets in the same city March 16, 17 and 18.

Mr. Geo. L. Dnnham addressed the boys last Sunday, taking as his subject, "Be a Boy."

Buildings costing over $3,000,000 were erected for the Young Men's Christian Association last year, according to Association Men. It is an interesting fact that as much more is now being expended on buildings in course of construction. Nearly as much more pledge for other structures. Over 150 building enterprises, aggregating $10,000,000 were well in hand when the year closed. The January number of Association Men contains many interesting accounts of the general work of the world-wide work. A copy may be secured at the office.

In 1905 a Y. M. C. A. building was completed every six days. Thirteen buildings for students were among the list, the cost ranging from $5000 to $100,000. Fifteen buildings for the railroad department were erected during the year, and 18 others are assured. At the present time buildings are being erected in 40 cities and towns, while in 61 cities and towns pledges ranging from $7500 to $350,000 have already been made toward new buildings.

The Association is solving the problems that confront young men. The right place for the right young man means success and satisfaction. Forty-seven Associations during last year placed in positions over 13,000 men and boys. Eight of the larger Associations secured positions for 1825 men and boys. This branch of the work deals with the employer and employee fairly and squarely. The young man is influenced and guided and oftentimes aided to find his proper place in the business world.

Newsy Paragraphs.

The history makers of Winchester who turned out such astonishing work some years ago for a 250th anniversary are evidently still at work. We learn from the latest revised edition of "Lippincott's Gazetteer of the World," issued last November, that Winchester is the birthplace of George Bancroft and Theodore Parker. Of course these distinguished men were not born in Winchester, but that fact does not phase the Winchester historians when they are once bent on making a little history. It is well known that the statements for such a publication as Lippincott's Gazetteer are furnished by local historians, and we wonder who the fiction writer is this time.—[Woburn Journal.]

A leather company has purchased what is known as the McGowan factory site on Cross street, where will be erected a large shop for the making of patent and enameled leather. This estate is on the Winchester and Woburn line, the greater portion being in the former town.

The Municipal Art Society of Cambridge and several kindred organizations in other cities are greatly interested in a proposed amendment to the constitution of the state which would give power to cities and towns to regulate or prohibit bill board advertising. An attempt to secure such an amendment will undoubtedly be made, as it is felt that this form of advertising has reached a point where it is simply beyond endurance.

It will pay you to keep Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in your home. It only costs a quarter. Sold at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Commissioners Swain and Arnold of the Wakefield municipal lighting plant say the total income of the plant for the year was $38,614.82, and the expenditures $38,101.13. They also stated that it was expected the cost of the new boilers installed last summer, $3700, would be taken from the receipts, but under the circumstances, the amount will have to be included in the tax levy of this year. The interest charges on the bonds the coming year will be $6185, and the bond payments $75,550.

Have you been betrayed by promises of quacks, swallowed pills and bottled medicine without results except a damaged stomach. To those we offer Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents. A. B. Grover.

President Lucius Tuttle of the Boston & Maine railroad, in an address before Dartmouth students defended the accumulation of riches. He said the world should be thankful that there were some men to act as the Lord's treasurers.

Mr. Tuttle does not surely believe that McCurdy, McCall, Anderson, Hyde, Rockefeller, Rogers, the beef magnates and others would be designated by the Lord as his treasurers.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How To Find Out.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment settling to the bottom indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What To Do.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, cures every ailment in our renal system, pain in the back, kidney liver, bladder and every part of the urinary system. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or had effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the test for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The Canadian Temperance League is rejoicing over the work done under its auspices by an American white ribboner, Mrs. Florence D. Richard, Leipsic, Ohio. The League maintains a regular Sunday afternoon temperance meeting. Massey Hall with seating capacity of 5,000 is filled and overflowing at all the meetings. Leading workers from Canada and the United States, are secured, first class music provided and no effort neglected to keep the tone at concert pitch. Two years ago the League invited Mrs. Richard to "come over." She was widely and enthusiastically advertised, and did not disappoint her audiences. At the close of her first address over three hundred young men and women signed the pledge. One of her meetings held in Central Prison was a climax in spiritual results, scores of the men being led to give their hearts to God. Mrs. Richard has since done splendid work for the League, a recent visit duplicated the successes of former years.

A bill is before the legislature to raise the salaries of representatives from $700 as at present to $1000 and of senators from $1000 to $1500. The bill would entail an additional expense to the state of about $90,000. The argument in favor of it is that a better class of men would be willing to take office if they could afford to and that the present salaries are a mere pittance as compared with what men of standing earn. There is something in the argument but at the same time until there is more difficulty than at present exists in finding men of pretty fair ability quite willing to sacrifice themselves for the offices, the salaries may as well remain as they are.

It is not too much to ask of the hotel keeper that his bedding should be kept clean for the use of his patrons, and the recent bill introduced into the Legislature which provides that a guest shall not be assigned to a room in which the bed linen has not been changed since used by the last occupant, should meet with instant approval. The matter of cleanliness, if not in that of decency, is concerned in the act, and if "cleanliness is next to Godliness," as used to be taught, then it is a step forward in useful and beneficial legislation, and not really the idea of a freak legislator.

About a dozen cases a day are treated at the emergency hospital at the U. S. M. Co. plant at Beverly. Most of them are slight accidents, and a doctor on the spot saves the employees from losing time in many instances. The treatment is gratis.

SWEET MUFFINS.

The original recipe for these muffins is said to have come from a White Mountain hotel. The little cakes are light as feathers, rather too sweet for a breakfast bread, but just right for luncheon, and if any are left they are good when cold.

Cream one-quarter cup of butter, add one-quarter cup of sugar and one egg beaten light. Sift three level teaspoons of baking powder in two cups of flour and add also three-quarters cup of milk. Toss some gem pans, or tin muffin cups, fill not over half full and bake about twenty-five minutes. Serve on a doily.

The best results in cooking come from accuracy in measurements and by the use of the half pint tin cups. In every kitchen there should be three or four of these cups marked in quarters and one divided in thirds. The best cook books are written now with this cup as a standard. To ensure further accuracy teaspoonsful are measured level by a stroke of a knife, so that a cup or spoon in a recipe means all that it will hold when leveled, and no more.

Flour should be measured after sifting; to prove this try measuring a cup right out of the barrel or bag, then sift it and measure again. Pack butter solidly in a cup, not drop in a three-cornered piece and guess that it is about a quarter of a cup.

C. H. WILSON, Dorchester, Mass., 1892.
"For two years I was troubled with a bad scalp disease; my head would be covered in places with scales which I picked off, some of them being as large as my thumb nail, and the itching sensation which I experienced at times was almost unbearable. I was in your store one day and one of the clerks recommended Jaynes' Quinine Hair Tonic. I took home a bottle and used it. I needed only one bottle, for in a short time, my scalp was in a good, healthy condition, and has remained so ever since. It is with a feeling of gratitude that I give you this testimonial, hoping it may reach those who are possibly afflicted in the same way."

PATRICK MARTIN, Century Hotel, Boston, Mass., 1892.
"I have used Jaynes' Quinine Hair Tonic and found it to be a most excellent preparation for the hair and scalp. At one time I was troubled greatly with dandruff, and my hair commenced to fall out in large quantities, but as soon as I commenced using your Quinine Hair Tonic it stopped it immediately. I use it daily as a dressing, and would not be without it."

EDISON ELECTRIC LIGHT RATES

A demand system of charging would charge the $50.

A uniform price system of charging would charge the $250.

The length of time of use of the electric service is the most important factor in fixing its price.

Consumers using electric light or power for long hours are entitled to very low rates per unit; and those using them occasionally or for short hours must pay high rates per unit.

It is the duty of a quasi-public corporation to charge a uniform rate of profit on the cost of supplying electricity rather than a uniform price to all consumers. To charge the same amount for the electricity consumed by 10 lamps burning 4 hours a day as that by 40 lamps burning one hour per day is manifestly unjust to the longer user. Such a practice results in keeping the average cost and price higher, as the long hour consumers' profits are used to recoup the losses occasioned by the short hour consumers.

The plan of charging the Edison Company uses is based upon cost of producing and distributing its product and the plan is known as the "Wright Demand System of Charging," which system was first conceived and put into practice more than thirteen years ago by Mr. Arthur Wright, Electrical Engineer to the Municipal Corporation of Brighton, England, and also President of the Municipal Electrical Association.

This system has been quite extensively adopted by the municipally owned electric lighting plants in England and Scotland and, as you all doubtless know, municipal ownership of such plants is the rule in both of those countries. It has also been adopted by many of the company's operating electric supply stations in the United States, including Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Minneapolis and Cleveland.

The following data from the Brighton Municipal Supply is worthy of consideration:

At the time of adopting the Wright Demand System they were supplying 213 customers, six years later 262.

The average rate per K. W. H. was 14 cents, six years later $6.64.

The average rate per K. W. H. per year was $5.8, six years later $8.93.

The average consumption per customer increased from 733 K. W. H.'s to 1284 K. W. H.'s.

The average cost per customer decreased from $103.62 per year to $85.25 per year.

The total income increased from $21,854 for the year to $176,246 for the year.

An interesting comparison is made with our neighboring town of Wakefield. In 1891 it had 76 customers and charged 20 cents per K. W. Hour $3.468, 10 years later 184 customers and charged 18 cents per K. W. Hour $6.078.

If it be theoretically sound that the cost of supplying electricity generally, depends chiefly on the length of time the necessary plant and mains are used, it seems obvious that the charge for the supply should be governed by the same law. This is precisely what the Edison Company's charges conform with. It has ascertained how many hours a lamp must be used in one year at nine tenths of a cent per lamp hour to yield its fixed charge costs, and after these costs have been discharged it makes a lower price for all succeeding hours the lamps are in use.

Newsy Paragraphs.

An act passed last year requires towns owning their own light plants to lay aside annually not only a certain amount for a sinking fund, but also five per cent. of the cost of the plant for depreciation. This makes, practically, a double sinking fund, and increases the rate without a corresponding benefit. The legislation was probably not introduced by interests favoring or benefiting by municipal ownership. Representative Dean of Wakefield has persuaded the committee on rules to allow a bill to be reported modifying or repealing the objectionable provision. — [Reading Chronicle.]

We carry the largest assortment of account books in town, also ink in pints and quarts for commercial use. Wilson the Stationer.

The 40th anniversary of the Boston Young Women's Christian Association will be held in the Berkeley Street Home, Monday, March 5th. The annual address will be delivered by Robert A. Woods, of the South End House, who as a student of sociology and of conditions in Boston has acquired valuable knowledge and experience during the last fifteen years. It is said that the Association finds its volume of work increasing which connects it with the towns and cities suburban to Boston.

Pure food is once more an issue in both House of Congress, and the bill bids fair to be defeated in the Senate which numbers among its members not a few who have interests in groceries, fisheries, packing and canning houses that will be unfavorably affected by pure food legislation. The cause most necessary to the effectiveness of the bill, the one providing that all packages shall be labeled to show exactly the contents of the package, whether medicine, food or beverage, and which enables the purchaser at least to know with what and when he is poisoning himself is the very clause that seems in greatest danger of defeat.

A LUCKY REPORTER.

He Happened to Be on the Spot on Important Occasions.

It requires eternal vigilance for a reporter to bag his game, leaving not a single chance for escape. It might be further said, however, that the element of luck does enter in now and then, either to a newspaper man's advantage or to his ruin. When Reginald Foster was one of the craft, he became famous as the luckiest of reporters. He was alert, energetic and capable of writing an excellent story when he landed it, but seemed to have a mascot perennial and eternal. Wherever he went he stumbled upon a "beat." He happened to be reporting a St. Patrick's day parade and went into the Windsor hotel to telephone his office when the fatal fire started in that hostelry, resulting in the horrible deaths of a great number of persons. Foster abandoned the parade, and helped rescue the imprisoned patrons of the burning hotel, and that night wrote a graphic account of the fire from start to finish. He was the most available reporter in New York when the great Hoboken fire started, and, hiring a steamer in the name of his newspaper, he saved many lives before the firemen could render aid. When President McKinley was assassinated at Buffalo the first news came to all the papers in New York in the shape of a very brief bulletin. A group of newspaper men simultaneously asked of each other, "Where is Foster?" Somebody explained that he was then on his vacation at Narragansett Pier, but, even while he was speaking, a telegram to the city editor was received and torn open. It read thus: "I was right beside the president when he was shot, having come to Buffalo expedition to close my vacation. Will send full descriptive story tonight." It was Foster, — Jensen Crawford in Success Magazine.

This distressing ailment results from a disordered condition of the stomach. All that is needed to effect a cure is a dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. He Will See Them.

Consumption

There is no specific for consumption. Fresh air, exercise, nourishing food and Scott's Emulsion will come pretty near curing it, if there is anything to build on. Millions of people throughout the world are living and in good health on one lung.

From time immemorial the doctors prescribed cod liver oil for consumption. Of course the patient could not take it in its old form, hence it did very little good. They can take and tolerate it for a long time. There is no oil, not excepting butter, so easily digested and absorbed by the system as cod liver oil in the form of Scott's Emulsion, and that is the reason it is so helpful in consumption where its use must be continuous.

We will send you a sample free.

DESTRUCTIVE ARTISTS.

The Ruin They Wrought While Smiling Under Criticism.

By no means unusual was the destruction of the Reginald Foster in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine by the sculptor himself while smiling under the criticism that there were no male angels shown.

Gerome, the famous French sculptor, had been working for weeks on the clay model of a group representing Spring. It had almost reached completion when the artist became convinced that the treatment was wrong, and in a minute he had beaten the entire group into a shapeless mass of damp clay.

Hogarth destroyed a picture which had been somewhat severely criticised by one of his friends, but the most spectacular destruction is related of Chartran, who for a time had a studio in New York. He was visited by the husband of an American woman whose portrait he was painting, $5,000 being the agreed price. The husband, while admitting it to be a splendid work of art, declared that he could see absolutely no likeness to his wife in the pictured face. Chartran laid down his brush and, taking out his penknife, slit the canvas into ribbons, after which he bowed his critic out. It afterward developed that the man was disparaging the portrait merely in the hope of obtaining a reduction in the price.

ERRORS OF SPEECH.

Common Abuse of the Verbs to Get, to Lay and to Lie.

The verb to get is one of our much misused words. It means to acquire, win, obtain, and primarily it signifies the putting forth of effort to attain something. Consequently it is not only superfluous, but incorrect, to speak of a man as "getting drowned" or "getting sick," and you may unfortunately "have a cold," but it is impossible that you "have got a cold." At this moment no exception occurs to the writer to the rule that got should never be used in connection with have, which alone sufficiently expresses possession. Say "I have the picture," not "I have got the picture." "The dog has a broken leg," not "The dog has got a broken leg."

The irregular verbs lay and lie are frequently confounded. Lay is an active or transitive verb, and lie is passive or intransitive. We lay things down or have laid them down, but we and things lie at rest. You lie down, have lain down, will lie down or are lying down; she lay down yesterday and is going to lie down this afternoon. A frequent error is to confound the past tenses of these verbs. One should say, "Mary laid the book on the table and lay down herself," but the book lies on the table.

THE STOMACH.

How It Is Affected by the Use of Mixed Fatty Foods.

The stomach never has the least power of digesting true fat. This is disposed of in the intestines. When eaten in the ordinary forms, as fat meat, butter, etc., the fat separates out in the stomach and does not in the least interfere with the work of the gastric juice on the other food, but when a nonfatty food has been intimately mixed with grease the latter prevents the gastric juice getting at the food it could digest. Fish fried in oil or butter is by no means the most marked example, as the fat does not penetrate very deeply. Potatoes mashed with butter are rather worse, and minced vegetables fried with butter are bad offenders. The reason advanced explains why pork is difficult of digestion. The muscular fibers are mixed up with fat cells, and by the liberation of the oil in each tiny cell the eaten pork is made into an oily paste. A very strong stomach will do the work required, but it is not a fair task to impose frequently, and a weak stomach will refuse to do anything beyond reminding its owner by a few stabs that it will not stand such treatment.

Webster's Portrait.

Daniel Webster once sat for his portrait to G. P. Healy, and the senator's remark when he surveyed the completed picture became one of the artist's favorite anecdotes in after years. "I think," said Webster as he looked at his counterfeit presentment, "that is a face I have often shaved." Healy found Andrew Jackson a disagreeable and unwilling "subject," and he compensated himself by painting Old Hickory with absolute fidelity to nature, not glossing a single defect. The portrait gives Jackson an ugly, savage and pallid face.

Napoleon's Poison.

A curious detail of Napoleon Bonaparte's costume was the religious care with which he kept hung around his neck the little leather envelope, shaped like a heart, which contained poison that was to liberate him in case of irretrievable reverses of fortune. This poison was prepared after a recipe that Cabanis had given to Corvisart, and after the year 1808 the emperor never undertook a campaign without having his little packet of poison.

He Was Tender.

"Young Mr. Softy paralyzed Dr. Simon when he went to be vaccinated," observed Gaswell to Dukane.

"How was that?"

"He asked the doctor to put him under the influence of anaesthetics."

A Farsighted Girl.

"I will work night and day to make you happy," he said.

"No," she answered thoughtfully, "don't do that. Just work during the day and stay at home at night."

Patting yourself on the back is a difficult task—seldom done gracefully.

A Fortunate Young Lady.

Miss Jennie Martin, 176 North Paul street, Rochester, N. Y., says: "I suffered long from kidney complaints—home physicians and their medicines failed to afford me relief. By the time I had taken two bottles I was completely cured and have had no trouble since."

The Mellowed Voice of Song.

Generally a kind of soft, sibilant noise will tempt a bird to sing. A canary hung in a kitchen will usually start his song if he hears, say, the fizzing of a frying pan. We utilize special devices to tempt the shy singer, who is perhaps rendered the more bashful by finding himself in novel surroundings. For this purpose we employ whistles and song organs, which artificially reproduce the "tours" of the roller. This latter method is found to be irresistible when all other plans have failed. The bird feels apparently that he is being challenged and forthwith responds to the challenge by pouring forth the best of his song. — London Post.

Make a note now to get Ely's Cream Balm if you are troubled with nasal catarrh, hay fever or cold in the head. It is purifying and soothing to the sensitive membranes that line the air passages. It is made to cure the disease, not to fool the patient by a short, deceptive relief. There is no cocaine nor mercury in it. Do not be talked into taking a substitute for Ely's Cream Balm. All druggists sell it. Price 50c. Mailed by Ely Bros., 56 Warren Street, New York.

Committee Not Disappointed.

Members of the special committee on improving the official conduct of the town's business do not feel a bit disconcerted over the result of the action of the caucus of last week in not sustaining them in the report made by them and adopted by the town at a special meeting, by nominating one man for the offices of Collector of Taxes and Town Clerk. These gentlemen claim that they have accomplished a great deal by their report being received so favorably, and that now it is only the matter of a short time when the recommendations will be carried out and put into force. It is recognized that much time is required to bring about such a radical change in long established methods, but now that the people have commenced to think the matter over, they will see that there is considerably benefit to be derived from the changes advocated. The tenure of office of the Town Clerk having been increased from one to three years, the suggestions of the committee cannot be fully carried out until the expiration of that time, but until then the Town Clerk could act as clerk for the Selectmen and the committees as suggested in the report of the special committee.

Beautiful Wedge Pond

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Winchester is far famed for its beauty. Some of its features are ideal. Who passes the bit of river connecting the pond with the lakes below that does not long to see its banks cleared of all in cumbrances, and made to blossom as a landscape gardener could do with his transforming power? The town could easily and inexpensively accomplish this, and make it "a thing of beauty and a joy forever."

Another God-given bit of scenery that would delight any artist's eye, is Wedge pond. Many exclamations of admiration and wonder from strangers are heard, as they suddenly come in sight of this little sheet of water, hidden away from the street and the business part of the town. After the trees are in leaf the sunsets here are enchanting. The trees and the bright sky with its passing clouds are mirrored in the lake, and as the sun sets behind the western hills one is awed by the sublimity.

But Wedge pond is in danger. The axe is laid at the foot of the tree and it falls, leaving only a hideous stump in its place. Tree after tree is being cut down about the pond, and already the little hills about this sheet of water are shorn of much of their beauty, and where will it end? Cannot some village improvement society be formed, if one is not already in existence, to preserve the beauty of our landscape here it be too late.

During the evening a man, representing himself to be at the house of Mr. Irving Palmer, telephoned for some medicine, which he desired sent over at once, and stated that he had only a ten dollar bill to pay for the same and would like to have the messenger bring ten dollars in change with him, that he might pay the bill. The messenger went to the house, where he was met by a man at the gate, who said that the front door was locked and he would have to go around to the rear door to get in and get the ten dollars. He did so and took the ten dollars in change with him, and up to the present time has not been seen since.

ELECTRICITY.

It is a mistake to delay the installation of the Electric Light because of any notion that it is an expensive luxury. On the contrary, the Electric Light is economical in use when rightly managed. Have you learned to be light-wise?

What About Rubbers For the Family?

One of these days it will begin to snow and by morning the earth will be covered with a beautiful white mantle. Concert by College Boys.

The residents of Winchester who are graduates of Dartmouth, and they are numerous, must have felt more than ever that their pride in their alma mater was well worth showing, when they attended the concert at the Town Hall, on Tuesday evening, given by the musical clubs of the college. Winchester has a good representation in most of the leading colleges, and has been favored several times by visits from their several musical organizations, but it remained until this week to hear what the Hanover boys could do in the entertainment line. And no one who attended was disappointed. The selections were excellent, and the thirty-six young men who took part during the evening certainly did credit to themselves and their college.

Dartmouth graduates were out in force, and each and all wore a happy smile, as they greeted old friends and new, in the atmosphere of old college days.

It is impossible to pick out any one number as the star feature of the evening from the varied and evenly balanced programme that was offered. From the splendidly rendered selections of the Glee Club to that excruciatingly funny piano duet by Messrs. Redlon and Felt, the numbers of the program were marked by a choiceness of selection and perfectness in rendition, rarely, if ever equaled by any college glee club performing in this town. The selections by the glee club took from the start, the vigor and dash of the football songs showing something of that "Dartmouth spirit" which has caused the downfall of many a worthy foe on the gridiron. The Mandolin Club, too, came in for its share of applause, and the repeatedly demanded encores attested to the popularity of their part of the programme. The banjo duet by Messrs. Laton and Davis was a splendid bit of playing and won for them the liberal applause that it deserved. Messrs. Felt and Redlon in an eccentric piano duet were a decided feature of the evening. Their act was a combination of skill and comedy that took the audience by storm and kept it in a continuous roar of laughter from start to finish. The quartette, composed of Messrs. Hathaway, Burtch, Felt and Avers, gave several selections in a pleasing way, "Farmer Slow" being especially well received. Mr. Seager, the reader, being especially happy in his selections and in his assumption of the character he impersonated. At the conclusion of the concert dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, Miss Pratt's orchestra furnishing the music.

Ward-McCauley.

William Ward of Medford, and Miss Mary McCauley of Woburn were married Monday evening at St. Mary's parochial residence, Winchester, by Rev. Henry J. Madden.

The couple were attended by Miss Alice McCauley and George Ward, sister and brother of the bride and groom. A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 10 Buck street, following the marriage ceremony. Their wedding journey was to Providence, R. I. The couple will reside in Winchester where the bride has made her home for the past six years. She is sister of Patrick McCauley, secretary of the Democratic City Committee.—[Woburn Times.]

Poverty Party.

Next Tuesday evening there will be given in the Methodist Church, one of the most unique and novel entertainments of the season.

For months the Epworth League and their friends have been looking forward to this entertainment. This was to have been a house party, but on account of the great number of people wishing to attend, it has been decided to hold it in the vestry. If you do not come dressed for the occasion, it will cost you a few pennies more than it will otherwise. There will be a judge, clerk of the court, and several policemen, chosen from the young people. The Epworth League orchestra will furnish music during the evening, and ice cream will be on sale for those who care for it.

Castle Square Theatre.

Julius Caesar, although one of the best known and most frequently read of the great Shakespearean tragedies, is rarely seen on the stage. In its leading roles of Brutus, Cassius and Marc Antony many great actors have won fame as tragedians but in recent years, especially since the death of Edwin Booth, Julius Caesar has been practically abandoned for stage productions in this country. For the third Shakespearean production of the season at the Castle Square Theatre, Julius Caesar has been chosen by the Boston Stage Society. As in the case of Much Ado About Nothing, The Merchant of Venice, production of which at the Castle Square recently attracted wide-spread attention, Julius Caesar will be elaborately staged with new scenery from designs by Frank Chateau Brown. Every detail will be both historically correct and beautiful, and it is safe to say that in this production the picturesque buildings and streets, the Temples and the Forum will be accurately shown for the first time on the Boston stage. The cast will be carefully chosen from the Castle Square stock and will include Mr. John Craig as Brutus, Mr. John Waldron as Cassius, Mr. Charles Mackay as Marc Antony, Miss Leah Winslow as Calpurnia and Miss Lillian Kemble as Portia.

Afraid of Strong Medicines

Many people suffer for years from rheumatic pains, and prefer to do so rather than take the strong medicines usually given for rheumatism, not knowing that quick relief from pain may be had simply by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm and without taking any medicine internally. He has been permanently cured by the free application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Bowling and Whist.

Yesterday was a day of attractions at the Calumet Club for every member of the organization, and from early morning until the late evening the club house was well filled with guests and members. The chief attraction for the gentlemen was the two man or matched pair bowling tournament, and almost without question every bowler in the club took part in the match. The prizes were won as follows:

1st prize W. D. Richards 95, 121x30—246, E. P. Randall 81, 105x20—209—455, 2nd prize, S. E. Newman 121, 102x20—243, L. M. Young 83, 79x20—182—425, 3rd prize, H. T. Dickson 81, 119x20—220, C. H. Hall 106, 77x20—203—423.

In the afternoon the ladies' afternoon of military whist attracted a large number, there being 27 tables. The honors for first place were divided between two tables composed of Mrs. E. F. Harmon, Miss Helen Vaughn, Mr. D. N. Skillings, Jr., and Mr. F. V. Wooster, and Mrs. C. N. Harris, Miss Emily Emerson of Hanover, N. H., Mr. C. N. Harris and Mr. Lewis G. Flagg.

Upon cutting for the prize, the first mentioned table won. The prizes were small American flags. The consolation prize was won by Mrs. H. G. Young, Mrs. J. E. Brown of Brookline, Mrs. F. N. Kerr and Miss Daphne Dunbar.

Dancing followed the whist from five to six, music being furnished by Miss Adelaide Pratt.

Bowling.

The Calumet aggregation again met with a set back in the Boston pin league on Tuesday evening, when it visited the Arlington Boat club with a loss of three points. The scores of both teams were low for league rolling, but Arlington succeeded in getting the necessary pins for two strings and the total. The score:

An Interesting Lecture.

A lecture that is likely to be of especial value to members of our Handicraft Society, besides being of general interest to others, is that which Sir C. Purkin Clarke, formerly director of South Kensington Museum, London, and now director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, is to deliver at Potter Hall, Boston, March 19. This will be Sir Purkin's first appearance in New England. His subject will be "Indian Art."

On the day following his lecture there will be opened at the Boston Art Club an international exhibition of works illustrating the application of design to handicraft and to the finer grades of manufacturing. A very large number of schools and art societies have agreed to contribute to make this the most memorable exhibition of its kind that has been held in the United States, amongst them the board of education of South Kensington Museum, London; Belfast, Ireland, School of Art; Glasgow, Scotland, School of Design; Camberwell, England; School of Art and Crafts and many American institutions. The exhibition will be at the Art Club for a week then for a fortnight more at Huntington Chambers Hall. The undertaking is in charge of Miss Catherine B. Child, secretary of the Museum of Fine Arts.

A CONVICT'S ROMANCE

ODD WAY IN WHICH A LIFE PRISONER WON HIS FREEDOM.

The Story of the Construction of the Old Statehouse at Albany—The Price of a Genius Who Saw and Grasped His Opportunity.

Vouched for by the late Henry Smith, who said he learned the fact through being speaker of the assembly, there is an interesting bit of history connected with the old statehouse at Albany, where it has stood for years, the finest example of pure Doric architecture in this country, on the easterly side of Eagle street, between Pine and Steuben streets, its walls and partitions all of solid stone, very much as if its halls, rooms and stairs had been carved out within a huge block of marble.

It was completed in 1842, costing the state about $350,000. It is built entirely of Sing Sing marble, quarried and cut within the prison walls.

The old capital being inadequate to accommodate the increasing business of the state, this additional building was planned and built and is still used for the offices of the state controller, the state engineer and surveyor and the state banking department.

In a spirit of economy it was decided to have as much as possible of the work done by the prisoners from the material found within the prison walls at Sing Sing, fairly good material, too, but not the best, as it is a soft marble, as evidenced by the wear which now shows so plainly in the steps and by the crumbling of some of the stones from exposure to the weather.

All the material was cut to completion within the walls of the prison under such plans that when shipped to Albany, there would be no further work necessary except practically to lay one stone upon another, and so on until the whole was assembled in the completed building.

To accomplish this detailed plan a system of marking the stones was necessary. The plans were carefully made and a system of marking elaborately laid out by the architect in charge, who found in the prison at Sing Sing a life prisoner whose record showed him to be an engineer of the highest ability and who seemed as competent as any man in the country to carry out the work to be done in the prison, and naturally he was not unwilling to follow his chosen profession in preference to doing the manual labor of cutting or quarrying stone. So, following the spirit of economy referred to above, the plans in detail and the system of marking were turned over to him and the whole work at that end given over to his full superintendence and absolute control.

In due time the stones in their various shapes and sizes and in quantity for the whole building were delivered in Albany and the work of construction commenced in accordance with the plans and system of marking originally furnished. With the very first stone there was trouble. It not only did not fit the place, but none of the stones marked to adjoin it fitted it, and, further, it did not seem even intended for the place the number indicated. Investigation brought out that the stones were not of the sizes or shapes specified and shown on the plans, and, as to the system of marking, it was quite evident that the stones brought together by it had no relation whatever to each other.

The bewildered architect hardly knew whether he was a candidate for the asylum or possibly for Sing Sing. However, a careful verification of his plans and his marking system proved their correctness, and the blame fell squarely upon the civil engineer, the life prisoner. He was questioned, taken severely to task and roundly rated for his incompetence and threatened and abused. He met it all calmly. "It looks to me like a mighty good joke on you fellows. Anyway it is the best joke I have heard since I came to Sing Sing."

As to their continued threats he said: "What can you do to a life prisoner?"

Finally, in answer to the abuse and slurs as to his capabilities as an engineer, he said he had changed the plans both in dimension and shape where they had diverged from purity of style, and the system of marking he had changed altogether, but if they could find some one who understood his system the building would go up complete and perfect, exceeding the original plan. "But," he added, with a grin, "you can probably get out new stone a good deal quicker than you can work out my system."

Then the state officials said, "We will take you to Albany and force you to put up the building."

He said, "No."

They pointed out the advantage of life in prison for a time in preference to Sing Sing.

He said, "No."

They tried to bargain with him.

He said, "Secure my pardon and I will stand by you until the building is complete."

They offered to have him pardoned after he had proved what he said by finishing the building.

He said, "No."

Then they said they would compel him to do it anyway.

He said he could be compelled to work in prison, but not in Albany, and that even in prison they could compel him to do only manual labor unless he chose and that the price of his genius in grasping the opportunity that had come his way was a full pardon.

What else was there to do?

He was pardoned, and the old statehouse stands today in testimony of the fact that he kept his word and a glorious memory to an unknown genius.—New York Herald.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy
Which They Guarantee to Cure
the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this pill, and since its introduction on the American continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casco, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be some disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physic, no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Pepsin, Pancreatin, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

Under a Fly's Wing.

One of the Nuremberg toy-makers included in a cherry stone which was exhibited at the French Crystal palace a plan of Sevastopol, a railway station and the "Me-Kah" of Klopstock. In more remote times an account is given of an ivory chariot, constructed by a Mycenaean, which was so small that a fly could cover it with his wing; also a ship of the same material which could be hidden under the wing of a bee. Pliny, too, tells us that Homer's "Iliad," with its 12,000 verses, was written in so small a space as to be contained in a nutshell, while Elian mentions an artist who wrote a distich in letters of gold which he inclosed in the rind of a kernel of corn. But the Harlequin manuscript mentions a greater curiosity than any of the above, it being nothing more or less than the Bible written by one Peter Bales, a chimney sweep, in so small a book that it could be inclosed in the shell of an English walnut.

Sales Stables Reformed.

One of the principal stables of the North Station, this week advertises in these words: "Owing to the new law regarding the exhibition of horses on the street on auction days I have discontinued holding auctions and can therefore sell at smaller margin."

The other auction stables which have not gone out of business, have been advertising: "No horses shown in harness, or outside the stables on auction days."

The evening Record of the 20th, had this editorial paragraph: "Inasmuch as for years we have been exposing North End sales stables evil, it is with added pleasure that we call attention to the blessed relief found in travel in that end of the city, since the curb was put on the practice of showing horses on the street."

The complete relief from the old nuisances which is enjoyed by everyone who passes through those streets is a sufficient answer to the silly boast which appeared in the Globe at the beginning of the year, that the attorneys for the stables got a little joke slipped into the law which would surprise and disappoint us. I simply waited for people to observe the facts for themselves and did not take pains to write this fact in reply, but there was not a sentence, or a word, introduced in any of the bills, or into the law, which I did not know of promptly, and which we did not fight over, and which was not finally hammered into the law in such a way which could be accomplished, and which is proving far more effective than our friends, the enemy, believed would be possible.—[Edwin S. Small in Boston Reporter.]

The Cost of Capital Punishment.

If the cost of murder trials continues to increase, one of the prominent and effective arguments in favor of the abolition of capital punishment will be the expense of trying capital cases. It has cost Middlesex county almost $34,000 to convict Tucker. If the death penalty had been abolished, the cost would have been far less. The natural feeling is that a man whose life is put in jeopardy should have as good a defense as money can secure—lawyers who are equal to the government prosecutors, detectives, experts, etc. As the government pays the cost of prosecution and defense, the taxpayers have big bills to pay. If the penalty were less than the loss of life, the cost of trials would be greatly reduced.

There's another consideration: The cost of ordinary criminal trials do not vary much between different counties, in proportion to their valuation, and the counties may be properly expected to care for their own crime. But why should the cost of murder trials be thrown upon the county in which the deed happens to be committed? It may come upon little Barnstable, as it did a few years ago, causing an enormous tax upon poor people, and even a wealthy county may be heavily taxed by happening to have two or three cases in a single year.—[Cambridge Chronicle.]

New Passenger Agent for B. & N.

Mr. Robert H. Derrah, who has for nearly a year and a half, been connected with the Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway Companies, as Passenger Agent, has tendered his resignation, to take effect March 1st. Mr. Derrah leaves the service of the Companies to carry out other business plans.

Mr. Derrah brought to this office a very large and varied experience with street railway matters, and the Companies, in securing his services, were particularly fortunate in being able to have at the head of their Passenger Department, someone who is fully acquainted with the needs and wishes of the travelling public. This fact was soon made apparent in the popularity of the passenger office, where hundreds of people called daily, during the summer months, in search of information.

Mr. Herbert A. Faulkner, who succeeds Mr. Derrah, is a young man of long newspaper experience, having been actively engaged in daily newspaper work for the past twelve years. For the past five years, he has been successively City Editor of the Brockton Times and Enterprise, coming from the latter desk to this position. He has also contributed to other publications.

His home is in Brockton, where he is a member of the Commercial Club and other organizations.

The Greater Boston Idea.

Marcus Cook of Greater Boston fame must be credited with having considerable ability for a man of his age. Ever since the year he was in the legislature Mr. Cook has had one great ambition, and that has been to create a Greater Boston to take in all the surrounding cities and towns. He has gathered quite an organization pledged to this idea, and each year has had hearings and secured adverse reports. Last year he had competition from March G. Bennett of Ward 11, who introduced a bill for a Greater Boston in a modified way, that is, all the sections were to retain their individuality but the officials of all the cities, with the mayor of Boston, were to sit in a metropolitan council. It was a good scheme and Cook appreciated that Bennett had struck a more popular note. This year, accordingly, Cook hops up with a bill along this line, and his usual Greater Boston bill is apparently forgotten. It is to his credit that he realized the need of a change as quickly as he did. [Practical Politics.]

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for all croup, colds, throat and lungs," says Hon. John S. Dick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overworked, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my excitement, a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses and after an hour and could not believe my eyes when I found the next morning the inflammation largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on taking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

A small ad in the STAR is almost certain to bring results, that is the reason this paper has so many wants, to let, lost, found, etc.

W. C. T. U. Notes.

The next regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be March 9th in the Congregational Church vestry at 3 p. m. There is an accumulation of business and it is important that members attend the meeting.

Dr. Louise C. Purington under the title "A Glimpse of the Worldwide Outlook," tells us what is being done in Spain as was brought out at the annual meeting of the International Institute for girls in Spain held in the Old South Church, Boston.

"The organization of the W. C. T. U. has an interest in this investment through our former representative in Spain—the founder of the school—Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick. The memory of this worker the strong and beautiful character and the impress of her life and achievements were brought out at the meeting by one of her pupils, Carolina Marcial. She is but one of the many girls of Spain who revere and love Mrs. Gulick.

"Words are far too poor to express our feelings," she said. "The building is their 'Castle in Spain' the 'building in our hearts, an altar of gratitude.' America provided for the building of an American Protestant school for Spanish girls. The school was to be opened, and on the very day a door was opened in heaven for the entrance of the founder. 'It was a very hard blow' said the speaker 'to lose our beloved and admired American mother.'

"Senorita Marcial was for twelve years a pupil of Mrs. Gulick's and she is a charming prophecy of what religious education will do for her people. Though but nineteen years of age she has enriched her blessings by passing them on. 'Our women will be happier when they have the right idea about God and understand more of life in its beauty.' She said 'I have come to thank America for what has been done for my beloved Spain.' The Senorita said of Anna Gordon 'she brought the temperance revival.' The work was dear to Frances Willard's heart. It should be dear to every lover of the kingdom. Mr. Gulick and his daughters, with teachers representing (graduates) Mr. Holyoke, Smith and Wellesley colleges, are carrying on the work. The new building will be a 'joy.' It is slowly rising from its foundations. Let us not forget Spain as we look out on the kingdom and engage in our world wide redemption work."

Municipal Ownership.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The inclosed from Hon. John Burns, member of the English ministry,—the first labor leader to hold such a place, should be of much interest to your readers at this time.

Mr. Burdett who spoke at the Calumet Club, Saturday evening, on this matter, had much to say as to England and how dissatisfied they were with municipal ownership.

John Burns says, not so. All laboring men should remember the advice of John Burns and vote for municipal ownership of a lighting plant everytime they have the chance. WHITFIELD TUCK.

Mr. Burns says: Municipal ownership as usually tried in Europe, particularly in Great Britain, has been a counter attraction to drink, a healthy diversion from vice, and has shown the people a more excellent way of personal and national life.

The bread of municipal ownership has been cast upon the waters, and has been returned to us, not after many days, but almost immediately.

It has infused the embittered car driver and conductor with a proportionate dignified and civic sense of duty to his neighbors who employ him. The municipal car man has reciprocated his share that municipal ownership has brought to him by greater efficiency, civility and loyalty to his employers, the traveling public.

The poor and lowly it has helped by reducing distances and saving them from physical fatigue, which rather than endure by living in the suburbs when they had to walk, they forfeited for the squalid banalities of slumdom.

I know of no section which has lost by municipal ownership in England.

Even the dispossessed and generously compensated shareholders have profited by the great increment of social happiness that public traction has brought to all those cities which had the courage to enter upon it.

The chief contribution that municipal ownership will make in America to State, Federal and civic development will be the extent to which it kills boodles, destroys graft and eliminates from public life and service the petty corruptions that mortify the flesh in the body politic of America, without the cleanliness and the purging of municipal life that can only come from the moral exaltation that communal pride in public property alone brings.

America will be confronted with the greatest problem that ever lay athwart the upward path of a democratic people.

Under municipal ownership there is no one to offer bribes, because there is nothing to sell. The occupation of the thief is gone, because the receiver has disappeared.

Any doubts as to the greater cheapness and efficiency of municipal ownership are disposed of by the incontestable fact that in Great Britain—under municipal ownership—roads are better, the staff more loyal, because more contented, and the amazing cheapness of traction is proved by the fact that the average fare of electric car passengers in London is under two cents, while over fifty millions of people ride as one cent passengers.

BROILED FINNAN HADDIE.

Broiled fish makes a good breakfast dish in all seasons, and one of the most appetizing is finnan haddie. Do not soak this fish before broiling, but freshen it afterwards by pouring boiling water over it in the same way that old-time cooks used to freshen their broiled salt cod fish before buttering it.

Cut the fish into a shapely piece and broil over a good fire in a greased wire broiler or toaster for a few minutes, browning slightly on both sides. Do not let the fish burn, or rest over a slow fire until it becomes dry, but give it your undivided attention for the few minutes needed. Put it in a small tin pan, cover with boiling water and let stand for eight minutes. Have a platter heated, drain the fish, lay it on the platter unbroken and butter it generously. Garnish with anything so table as lemon slices, parsley, hard boiled egg, or serve without trimmings.

Garnishing if well and appropriately done is always an addition, but it should be secondary to the care in preparation. Creamed finnan haddie is another good breakfast dish prepared by making a white sauce and heating the finely flaked fish in it. This fish is so slightly salted that it will not keep a long time like salt cod.

An ideal tonic and strengthener for the aged or infirm, tired mothers and sickly children. Manufactured in Our Own Malt Plant from the choicest of Fresh Hops and the purest Barley Malt. The Hotel Touraine will now be able to sell liquor legally under a general law passed for a specific purpose. It is not class legislation—it is glass legislation.—[Charlestown Enterprise.]

The bill passed by the House appropriating the sum of $139,000,000 for pension payments, also contains a provision making statute law of President Roosevelt's famous order making age conclusive evidence of disability. While this is not always true in the case of thousands of men, it is as fair as any estimate can be based on humanity, and the vigorous manner in which this age moves and lives—so very different from half a century ago—it will not fail of general acceptance. The arduous services in the army may well be counted as much a strain upon health and strength as the passage of ten or fifteen years of ordinary life.

Our neighboring town, North Reading, seems to be a remarkable place for longevity. The annual report of Town Clerk Upton shows that of the 22 deaths that occurred last year, five, or nearly a fourth of the whole number, died of old age. Two of these reached the age of 91 years. Six were more than 83 years old. With the exception of one infant and one child of eight none of those who died were less than 41 years old. The average age at time of death was 62 years. This rather remarkable showing may be due either to the salubrity of North Reading's climate or to the good habits of its citizens. It is more likely, however, that it is due to a happy combination of the two.

A Chicago doctor says that this country is going insane because it refuses to take sufficient rest. The policemen and messenger boys are becoming alarmed.

It took Poulitney Bigelow only twenty-eight hours to collect the material for his article about the Isthmus and conditions there, but it has taken him three weeks to get the material to prove it true, and he is still working.

Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island still retains his interest in a wholesale grocery store. Senator Lodge of Massachusetts is the representative of a codfish aristocracy preserved in boric acid, other Senators are interested in canned and bottled goods and these Senators are the reasons why we cannot have a bill compelling dealers in bottled and canned goods, whether fish, fowl, beverages or medicines to state precisely what the packages contain. A pure food bill is a crying necessity, and the United States Senate is blocking it.—[Exchange.]

The New York Tribune prints this clipping from the editorial column of a country exchange: "A man stopped us on the street the other day and said we did not publish all the news. We should say not. If we published all that happened we would be with the angels. In order to please the people we must print only the nice things said of them and leave the rest to gossip. Yes, it's a fact, we don't print all the news. If we did, wouldn't it be a spicy reading? But it would be for one week only. The next week you would read our obituary, and there would be a new face in heaven. All the news is all right when it is about the other fellow." That's right, too!

There is to be drug store trust, if it can be put through. Then it will be a fight for supremacy between the drug store trust, the cigar store trust, and the department store druggist. Gradually things are working the way of the Socialists, who believe in trusts as simplifying matters for them, when they shall obtain control.—[Charlestown Enterprise.]

Congressman Roberts, McCall and Weeks have all had the moth itch according to the testimony before the committee on agriculture. A correspondent expresses, somewhat unkindly, the "regret that a majority of the members of congress have not suffered with the same affliction, for such a condition would surely result in the passing of an appropriation bill of dimensions sufficient to pursue a relentless war against the "pesky critters."

A correspondent of the Woburn Journal says: "I would respectfully suggest to our citizens who are so vigorously 'kicking' against the heavy charges for electricity by the supplying company that, if they would be a little more diplomatic, and, at the same time, firm and unyielding, they would be able to make their own figures for the article. It has come to my ears from various reliable sources, of late, that the company have become interested in the stand of opposition taken in this town and are mellowing. I have been given instances of this. In this connection it may be well and opportune to say that gas companies located north of Charles River, in the Metropolitan District, are bestirring themselves to take advantage of the dissatisfaction with the electric company which is likely to result in still cheaper prices for light and power, and an extension of gas plants and territory."

Persons in Winchester who are sending souvenir postals to their out of town friends should bear in mind that the largest assortment and the prettiest cards are to be found at Wilson's Stationer's. Colored views of the High School, Unitarian Church, Pleasant street, etc., besides views of the schools, public buildings and other places of interest.

CHRISTMAS.

Negroes consider Christmas day the best in the year for a wedding.

Christmas was first celebrated as a feast of the Christian church about the year 190 A. D.

At Cullinst, in Ireland, the game of kamman, a sort of hockey, is played on Christmas day.

A leaf from Christmas decorations is preserved in Yorkshire as a remedy against toothache.

Scottish servants each endeavor to be the first to draw water from the well on Christmas morning.

It is an old Irish superstition that gold should not be paid away on Christmas day nor silver lent.

Christmas day at Cape Town is usually celebrated with picnics. The temperature averages 82 degrees.

On Christmas morning in Norway every gateway, gable or barn door is decorated with a sheaf of corn fixed on a tall pole in order that the birds may eat from it their Christmas dinner.

Luck.

Abraham Lincoln, after being a member of congress, desired to secure a clerkship in Washington, but he was defeated by Justin Butterfield. He was disappointed, but had he not been defeated he would have spent his life in obscurity instead of becoming president of the United States.

Olive Cromwell was once on board a ship bound for America, but he was taken back by a constable, and the result was that he became one of the greatest men England ever knew.

Clydes Grant would not have been a military man had it not been that his rival for a West Point cadetship had been found to have six toes on each foot in the end of five.

The great silver mine, the Silver King, had been discovered by the lucky accident of a prospector throwing a piece of rock at a lazy tailor.

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism

Chas. Drake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeepers here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me." There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Over the Transom.

Two well known Portland (Me.) men, L. J. Carney and Thomas L. King, roomed together at the Frobie House, in that city. One evening Mr. Carney retired before Mr. King, and the latter, on arriving rather late at the room, found the door locked, the key on the inside and his friend snoring loudly. After repeatedly pounding on the door and awakening the other guests he succeeded in arousing his roommate. Mr. Carney jumped out of bed and after climbing on to a chair managed after considerable trouble to force open the transom. Then he passed the key out to King, but silently said he was awfully sorry for locking him out. But King felt more than satisfied, as he regarded the ridiculous performance of his half awake roommate.—[Chicago Inter Ocean.]

Impoverished Soil

Impoverished soil, like impoverished blood, needs a proper fertilizer. A chemist by analyzing the soil can tell you what fertilizer to use for different products.

If your blood is impoverished your doctor will tell you what you need to fertilize it and give it the rich, red corpuscles that are lacking in it. It may be you need a tonic, but more likely you need a concentrated fat food, and fat is the element lacking in your system.

There is no fat food that is so easily digested and assimilated as

Rev. Doremus Scudder D. D. on Hawaiian Problems.

Outside of Honolulu the Japanese and the Chinese are found upon the plantations in small camps, writes Dr. Scudder.

Plantations often cover many thousands of acres, and as a rule reach in a long line parallel to the sea coast. They are as isolated as a western farm and each is sufficient unto itself. The manager and a very few of his staff are Americans or North Europeans. The thousands of laborers comprise Japanese, Chinese, Portuguese, Koreans, Porto Ricans and a few others.

At convenient points in the plantations the camps are located, containing sometimes only men of a single nationality. Where two or more races are herded in separate quarters, the laborers are, as a rule, housed in separate quarters, the Japanese by themselves, etc.

Considering the climate and the conditions which the laborers were accustomed to in their homelands, the housing is good. The camps are sanitary, the men healthy, well paid and generally contented.

But the Japanese camp is Japan, and the Chinese are in China, the Portuguese live in the Azores.

Nothing purely American is to be seen. These foreigners bring their strange habits of life, their conceptions of personal modesty and immodesty, their differing moral standards and their vices.

Another serious question here is "Shall we lose our Sabbath?" A third menacing reflection sounds in the air. "Is Hawaii to become the saloon-keeper's paradise?" Payday comes around on the plantation and a crew of Oriental gamblers swoop down upon the Asiatic camps and reap a harvest.

Tragedies and comedies peculiar to Hiroshima and Canton make life alternately grave and gay. The children grow up in a nondescript atmosphere unlike anything the world can show elsewhere. For the restraints of life, the traditions that make up the richness of existence in the homeland are wholly wanting here.

Religion is almost entirely absent. A tiny Buddhist temple or Shinto shrine may lurk somewhere about one of the several camps of the plantation, but it is an exotic. It looks like a poor, sickly, transplanted tree in an unfriendly soil. The saddest spots on earth for children are the lonely mid Pacific Asian Camps.

The Retreat of Ensign Beebe

By ALICE LOUISE LEE

Copyright, 1905, by Alice Louise Lee

ENSIGN BEEBE turned to hymn 100, gathered himself together and arose. It was a process worthy of note, a gradual unfolding, as it were, of bone and muscle joint by joint until the result stood six feet four, his substantial feet firmly planted on the floor of the Sunday school room, his bare crown brushing the cobwebs from the ceiling.

His heavy bass voice rumbled against the windows, an unintelligible roar taking the place of any word which he failed to see distinctly. Such wordless sounds were becoming more frequent, although he held the book far from his spectacle-less eyes, whose muscles strained valiantly in the effort to prove the youthfulness of their owner.

He towered above two rows of very little boys whose childish treble was lost in their teacher's bass. They faced two rows of very little girls whose presiding genius sang in a small musical soprano, while one hand made hurried excursions to her bonnet to assure her self of its angle, to the back of her waist to push down her belt, to her throat to ascertain the relations existing between her collar and tie.

All these movements were largely reflected in the eyes of Ensign Beebe as he sang lustily. "And before I'd (indistinct roar) my Saviour I'd lay me (confused mixture of consonants) and die." In an unguarded moment he allowed his gaze to wander in the direction of the little girls. The next instant he rolled his eyes about apprehensively to see if he had been observed. The giggles from a class of sixteen-year-old girls left him in no doubt. Immediately a wave of blood rolled upward through his long neck and submerged his face until, his passage being disputed by his high cheek bones, it overflowed his ears and nose in a glowing flood.

When the school was dismissed Ensign, with a to the depths of his sensitive soul, lastly dodged the hanging lamps and strode out into the churchyard. Here he was promptly waylaid by a brother whose zeal outran his discretion and whose wit fell short of both.

"Hello, Ensign! It can't be that you're havin' very preachin' weather up your way these days or else you and Lizzie would be comin' to church in a double rig."

It was a speech he had rehearsed to himself carefully for an hour, and the men around him loudly appreciated it, all save its victim. He gave one wild glance in the direction of Mrs. Lizzie, who, with skirts carefully raised, was approaching her carriage, and then stammering, "It-it-the weather is"-drove hastily away, followed by good natured roars.

A mile from the church he drew rein in front of a barn which had its counterpart across the road. Hastily stalling his horse, he entered the house a few rods beyond. The house also had its counterpart across the road.

Clouds of dust down the turnpike announced the more leisurely home going of his brother churchmen. Usually on a fine day Ensign was wont to sit out on his porch within a stone's throw of the other porch and exchange greetings with the passersby, but today he shut his front door, closed the blinds, opened the slats and sat behind them in a state of gloom without and within.

Mrs. Lizzie soon arrived at the house opposite and disappeared into the barn with her horse. Ensign ducked his head in shame at the sight. He had taken care of her horse ever since her husband's death, but only the day before in the blacksmith's shop he had been rallied on his gallantry. "Ah, Ensign, I see you've taken possession of t'other barn already soon," accused the blacksmith of Pennsylvania Dutch origin and the remark was ranking yet.

The Browns rolled along, one horse half a length behind the other. Their big wagon was full of smiling faces turned toward the closed slats. Every smile touched a weak spot in Ensign's armor. "Makin' a lot of fool comments on her and me, I suppose," he muttered and then felt the blood surge over his face. He writhed in anguish of soul at the six feet four blushing. But the harder he writhed the redder his face became.

Mrs. Grey came out on her porch and sat down comfortably. She was a plump, wholesome, restful woman who had smiled through a married life overshadowed by a never do well husband and was smiling still.

Every one liked the placid, comfortable, cheerful Lizzie. Every one liked the big hearted, generous, jovial Ensign. As a result every one was cheerfully contributing to the misery of both.

After the last vehicle had passed he arose and went about his solitary dinner. "It'll come worse than pullin' eye-teeth," he said aloud. "But Wilson can manage it if anybody can."

Wilson Beebe, a young Scranton lawyer, was Ensign's idol and confidant. He frequently ran "up country" for a day and usually found his uncle hanging over the picket fence in front of the house waving his hat in hilarious welcome. But the following morning when he arrived he was surprised to find the fence deserted, the door closed and the blinds shut. He traveled the length of the house before discovering the disconsolate householder sitting in a round shouldered heap on a broken chair which decorated the back porch.

"Hello, here!" cried Wilson in a ringing, hearty voice. "What are you up to back here, I should like to know?"

"Wilson," said Ensign, partially unfolding as he gripped the other's hand, "I ain't enjoyin' myself."

Wilson dropped on the edge of the porch and leaned against a post. "Why not?" he asked breezily. "Sick?"

"No," returned Ensign solemnly—"no, not sick in my bones, only in my feelin's."

Wilson whistled. He was not accustomed to seeing his favorite relative in this despondent condition.

"What under the canopy is up?" he demanded.

"Everybody is"—Ensign's tone was rueful. "That's the trouble. Everybody is up right early attendin' to my affairs."

A gleam of understanding shot into Wilson's eyes. "It's Mrs. Grey," he said simply.

Ensign nodded. "Yes, it's Lizzie Grey."

He extended his feet to the edge of the porch and clasped his hands over his vest, announcing darkly: "Wilson, there's goin' to be a big change here shortly—a big change. There's got to be. I'll leave it to you that there's things a man can't stand forever."

"For instance?" prompted Wilson.

"Well, there's church. I've got to give it up."

"You give up church?" cried the other in genuine surprise. "Why, mule, you'd be a fish out of water Sundays!"

"Yes, sirree, I've stood church goin' now as long as I can. I'll leave it to you. I set right back of her. If I look at her the folks up in the choir giggle and say I can't keep my eyes off her. If I don't look at her they say I daren't. And either way—I, well, you know how my face gets, Wilson, and me fifty years old."

Wilson nodded and refrained from smiling.

"In Sunday school it's just as bad. Our classes are close together and facin' each other, with a parcel of pesky g'glin' girls one side of us."

There was a pause and a long sigh. Still Wilson faced his uncle soberly.

"And back here home it's just the same with her across the road and some neighbor or other at every door and window around us, watchin' to see what I'm up to. If I set out in front, they tell me I better not wear out my own porch so long as there's another waitin' for me. If I set back here, some one who hasn't got enough business of his own to attend to starts the story that she's give me the mitten."

When he spoke again his tones were unmistakably stubborn. "I've made up my mind, Wilson, to be quit of this foolin'. I'll show folks that I'm not goin' and hawed around as easy as they think for. I'll give 'em somethin' to talk about all their lives, I'll be blamed if I don't!"

When his uncle first unfolded his plan Wilson was amused. Later he became alarmed. He argued and remonstrated in vain. "I'll be quit of their foolin', I will," was all the reply he received, and when the stage bore him away in the afternoon he was pledged to aid and abet his unhappy relative.

So quickly did he fulfill his pledge that the week was not yet ended when Ensign received a Scranton daily with an advertisement heavily marked in blue pencil. On the margin was scribbled, "Have made inquiries and hear she is an estimable woman."

The advertisement read:

Wanted—A position as housekeeper or companion, by a competent woman with good references. Address 24 Irving street, Scranton, Pa.

Ensign studied the little paragraph as he sat at the little table, his feet braced against the wall beyond. "Housekeeper or companion," he mused aloud and planted his forefinger on the latter word. It had but one meaning for him. Presently he maneuvered the term and looked at it thoughtfully. His face did not express unalloyed joy. He arose and gazed mournfully through the closed blinds at the house opposite.

Mrs. Lizzie was on her way to the barn, milk pail in hand.

Such a sudden hatred of that other "estimable woman" arose in Ensign's breast that he precipitately gathered together pen, paper and ink before Mrs. Lizzie's pleasant face should entirely obscure the advertisement. It was pure obstinacy which drove his pen as he composed a letter addressed to 201 Irving street.

To Miss or Mrs. —

Dear Madam—I notice an ad in the Scranton Press of some one there who would keep house or become a companion. I have the liberty at this time to make known my wants. I have a house all furnished that I would be glad to get a woman to keep and would take such a one for a companion if it was agreeable to both. I will be there tomorrow evening to see if it would be.

When he arose the following morning his mood was no darker than the sky. He ate breakfast gloomily, furled his great cotton umbrella and bowed to the stage. Even his obstinacy was endangered as he looked back and saw Mrs. Lizzie, her sleeves rolled above her round elbows, standing in the midst of her chickens scattering grain.

As the train bore him farther and farther from the carping tongues of his neighbors Mrs. Lizzie loomed larger and larger in his mind's eye until it was with a feeling of positive homesickness that he strode through the station at Scranton and out on Lackawanna avenue. He had intended to go directly to Wilson's office, but he found that his heart was too heavy to be moved.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M.D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair.

This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 South avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair.

HOW TO STUDY PROPERLY.

Books Should Be Well Chosen and Read Carefully. Not Devoured.

Study is like a dinner. The student must be well chosen and eaten slowly, not devoured, then well turned over in the mental stomach for awhile until with ease and comfort they are perfectly digested and furnish nutriment to the brain. Most students study without thought, which is like eating without digesting. Others read merely as a fad and soon forget all they may have learned.

The most satisfactory method of study is the digestive. It is the thorough one—the one that gives strength to the brain. Take the subject you are studying. Read a few lines or a few pages, as the case may be, then put the book down and think on what you have read. Turn it about in your mind from every standpoint. Do not accept it immediately. Argue for and against it in your mind. In other words, masticate it. You need not beat your leisure to do this. Do it in your walks, in your idle moments, at any time. When you have satisfied yourself on the subject go on with a little more in the same way. In a short time you will find yourself more a thorough student than if you had read all at a sitting. The best educated man in the end is the man who learns slowly, but surely.

COINED MONEY.

The Most Ancient Specimens Known Are Those of Aegina.

Throughout the early parts of Scripture as well as through the poems of Homer not a single passage occurs from which can be inferred the existence of stamped money of any description. It is agreed that the Egyptians had no coined money. Herodotus is authority for the statement that the Lydians were the first people who coined gold and silver. The Pagan Chronicle, however, ascribes the first coinage of copper and silver money to Phidon, king of Argos, 805 B. C., in Aegina, which Aelian corroborates, and the best numismatic antiquaries agree in considering the coins of Aegina from their archaic form and appearance the most ancient known. They are of silver and bear on the upper side the figure of a turtle and on the under an indented mark. Coins are among the most certain evidences of history. In the later part of the Greek series they illustrate the chronology of reigns. In the Roman series they fix the dates and succession of events. Gibbon observes that, if all our historians were lost, medals, inscriptions and other monuments would be sufficient to record the travels of Hadrian. The reign of Probus might be written from his coins.

NOSE CHANGES.

They Are Gradual and Imperceptible, but Continuous.

Don't worry about the shape of your baby's nose if it is a snub or be sure if it pleases you by its regularity that it will be the nose that will grow up with it, for scientists have observed that no feature changes more as life progresses. The length of the nose increases so much faster than its breadth that the snub nosed baby may evolve a long, even hooked nose. This change in the shape of noses is gradual and imperceptible, generally more expeditious in the male than in the female, correlated with various other characteristics, such as intellectual attainments or weak constitution, and producing different results. During maturity and senescence the bridge of the nose becomes more and more prominent, often more convex, so that extreme old age may even develop an aquiline nose, so that one need never despair of possessing a satisfactory nose at some period of his life if he only lives long enough. But, like so many other blessings that are deferred, the right kind of a nose may arrive too late to affect one's fortunes or happiness.

A Study In Wrinkles.

When George Rignold was playing Henry V. a friend visited him in his dressing room and remarked a large and handsome photograph of Wordsworth hanging on the wall. Said the friend, "I see you are an admirer of Wordsworth?"

"Who's Wordsworth?" queried the actor.

"Why, that's his picture—Wordsworth, the poet."

"Is that old file a poet? I got him for a study of wrinkles."—London Answers.

Commercialized.

"This is indeed the age of commercialism," said the man of sentiments. "What makes you think so?"

"Some of our statesmen never mention the American eagle any more and are continually applauding the work of the American hen."—Washington Star.

Making a Name.

"Yes, she made a name for herself."

"In what way?"

"Why, she used to be Ellen Cummins Brown. Now she is Aileen Conynus Browne."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Knowledge.

Knowledge will not be acquired without pains and application. It is troublesome and deep, a going for pure waters, but when once you come to the spring they rise up and meet you.

The Engagement Was Recent.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attacks of indigestion to chronic dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. H. H. Hatchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his disease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hatchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Casco, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physio, no Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Peppin, Piment, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

Handle Work With Gloves.

"I hope," said the woman who was ordering a pair of slippers made of flowered satin, "that you will tell your workman to wash his hands before he begins to make these up."

"Wash his hands?" repeated the clerk. "Why, madam, he never will touch these with his bare hands!"

Then the clerk explained that all workmen employed in making slippers of light colors worked with white gloves on.

"Try to keep them clean!" he continued. "I should say they did. They try so hard that they change their white gloves three times a day." Which is not so fantastic as it may seem, for if a shoemaker soils material of this kind the expense to him of replacing the material, to say nothing of the loss of his time, makes it worth his while to work in gloves and keep them clean at that.—New York Press.

The Smell.

It is the opinion of the true gourmet that of all mankind there is none to compare with the snail (obscure morda). This primary rank is its own by reason of its delicacy and delicious flavor, and when fried a light brown in very fine breadcrumbs and served with melted butter there is none that disputes its pre-eminence. Its delightful flavor, however, as well as its medicinal odor, is evanescent. Like the mackerel, it cannot be too fresh. It is from its odor that the snail derives not only its familiar but Latin name, an odor so aggressive of sliced cucumbers that if its presence be manifested only to the sense of smell people are often deluded into such supposition. This odor is not marked except in the freshly caught fish and disappears in the cooking, giving place, however, to a fitting restoration of the smell to an olfactory sense still more savory and delightful.

Vulcan.

Vulcan, the god of ancient blacksmiths and metal workers, was lame in consequence of a pretty hard fall he had in his early days. Jupiter and Juno had a row, and Vulcan sided with his mother against the old gentleman, who promptly kicked him out of heaven. He fell for a whole day and lighted on the island of Lemnos, broke his leg and received as severe a shaking up as though he had tumbled down an elevator shaft. Aesculapius set his leg, but having only just received a diploma did a poor job, and for a long time Vulcan went on a crutch.

Why is it that in a town like ours even small and narrow minds should think that mean and lying election stories will affect unfavorably the candidacy of any official who has tried to do his duty to the town and without any pay whatever? Such stories only react in his favor, as of course they should, and yet we have a few cheap gossips who think they are hurting one man and helping his opponents by resorting to such mud slinging. Fade away.

Newsy Paragraphs.

For the past six months Custodian
Nichols of the schools has been making strenuous efforts to have the charge for the electricity used by the power motor at the High School reduced, he claiming that the town was being overcharged.
The Edison company found after careful tests that Custodian Nichols' claims were correct, and that the motor did not consume the amount of current charged for.
They say the case is very peculiar, the motor being rated at 16 horse power, but carrying only about a five horse power load. As soon as the company found the claim correct they at once made a reduction in the charges, which amounts to about $150 a year.

TOWN MEETING.

A Large Attendance of Citizens Who Evincd Much Interest.

Attempts to Cut Down Appropriations Resisted.

After the town meeting had opened in the morning a motion was made and carried that action on the articles in the warrant be deferred to 7:45 o'clock in the evening. When this hour arrived the Town Hall was well filled with citizens. It can be said of Winchester that its citizens as a whole take considerable interest in its affairs especially at the annual meetings by attending in goodly numbers and taking a lively interest in the debates and voting. Monday evening progress in passing on the articles was quite slow, for the list of appropriations was only two-thirds disposed of when the hour for adjournment was reached. Retrenchment was the principal cause for delay, and the desire was, apparently, to scrutinize carefully every item of money asked for. However careful the meeting will be in voting appropriations, the tax rate is certain to be considerably higher than that of a year ago. As a rule the recommendations of the Appropriations Committee were pretty generally adhered to, thus showing the wisdom of having such a committee probe to the bottom all the appropriations asked for by the several departments previous to the meeting. It also expedites business, as the citizens as a rule have confidence in the recommendations made.

As soon as Moderator George Chandler Coit opened the meeting, he swore in the newly elected officers. Charles N. Harris, Esq., then presented rules for the guidance of the meeting, the town at present having none, he said, because of the Attorney General in his wisdom eliminating those that had served the town so well for so many years. The rules were adopted.

On motion of Mr. John H. Carter the annual report of the town officers as printed was received.

Selectman Rowe stated that in order to conform to requirements $500 would be necessary to be expended on the Town Hall so as to make it available for dramatic performances. He said the law had been amended considerably so that not nearly as large a sum would be required as was at first thought necessary. Mr. Rowe's statement was accepted.

Selectman Woods offered a motion which was carried, that a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to recommend some change in the procedure at the opening of the annual meeting. His object was to devise a means to doing away with the election of the Moderator in the early morning hours, and thus relieve the citizens of the inconvenience and necessity of being present and voting for this officer at so early an hour.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Mr. W. L. Tuck offered the following: That a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to see and urge on member of the General Court, Barker B. Howard, to work and vote for all bills that will help to municipal ownership of fighting plants.

Mr. John H. Carter challenged the meeting to pass this vote. Mr. Howard, he said, was in the employ of the Edison Company, and was when he was elected to the office by the Republicans of Winchester, and he did not think therefore, that the results would prove satisfactory. He (Mr. Carter) had been unjustly accused of having worked in the interests of the Edison company, and it was now in order for the meeting to go a step further. He dared the citizens to pass the vote.

Mr. Tuck's motion was lost by an overwhelling vote.

RATE LEGISLATION.

The following vote, also offered by Mr. Tuck, was rejected:

That a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to convey to the President our high appreciation of the great fight he is waging on behalf of the people, in supporting the Hepburn rate bill, and our regrets that our Congressman and townsman, S. W. McCall, does not give his support to this bill.

FINANCIAL.

On motion it was voted that the Treasurer be authorized to borrow $75,000 in anticipation of taxes. Also that $39,000 be assessed upon the estates and polls of the town and appropriated for the purpose of paying the bonds of the town becoming due in the year 1906.

NO ACTION TAKEN.

It was voted to strike from the warrant the article in relation to establishing and making an appropriation for a grade crossing abolition account. The Appropriations Committee deemed such an account unnecessary.

INTEREST.

It was voted that $12,300 be assessed Interscholastic Meet.

Last Saturday the 17th annual interscholastic meet was held in Mechanics Hall, Boston. Winchester was represented by a larger team than usual, the men entered being: Capt. Barnard, Roy L. Hilton, P. B. Badger, George B. Cummings, Gordon Parker, Sanford Petts, Harold Robinson, Harvey L. Gustin.

In the 40 yd dash were entered: Barnard, Hilton, Badger; Badger was unable to run, Barnard and Hilton each got 3rd place in their heats.

Cummings was entered in the 30 yd run, but did not run, saving himself for the team race. Gustin ran in the mile and finding the pace too hot dropped out before the last lap. Robinson was entered in the 600 yd run but did not finish.

The team race between Winchester H. S. and Arlington H. S. was a great race and the victory of Winchester over Arlington was really due to the work of Parker. Hilton started for Winchester, and led Hendricks of Arlington for 1 1/2 laps, Hendricks then passed him and gained about 8 yds when he stopped running. Parker then took Hilton's place with Arlington's man about 15 yds ahead. By a pretty piece of steady and plucky running he overcame the Arlington man's lead and when he gave way to Cummings he had passed the Arlington man and had opened up a lead of about 5 yds. Cummings took up the race and did not lose any to his opponent. Barnard then took up the race and opened up the lead over Arlington, finishing about 40 yds ahead of his man. Winchester's time was 3 min. 29 1/2 sec. Arlington's was 3 min. 34 sec.

Herbert Kelley of this town ran for Noble and Greenough in the 300 yd run and got 5th place. He also ran on the relay team against Stone school and did very well.

Badger will be unable to run in Lowell meet tomorrow night on account of illness, this is a great handicap to Winchester. The boys will go to Lowell with a determination to fight hard for a victory.

Joshua Phippen Scores a Success.

At a chamber concert given in Chickering hall, Boston last Sunday afternoon, Mr. Joshua Phippen of this town, played the piano part for his own new quartet, a "suite in ancient style," which was performed for the first time and from the manuscript. It is scored for piano, flute, violin and cello, a felicitous instrumentation for the man who can keep his harmonies clear and who can distribute his color effectively. Mr. Phippen is the man.

Mr. Phippen, like Robert Louis Stevenson, "files out to the thickness of a hair" in his delineations, and sticks, moreover, to his models.

He writes counterpoint as a modern, repeats the feats of the old engravers, with appreciation of beauty and a quiet smile at the pattern and rule by which he chooses to abide.

Mr. Phippen and Mr. Hoffmann played two movements from a Cesar Frank sonata, one of which is frequently heard, the recitative less often, though its beauty would seem worth while.—Boston Herald.

The Grade Crossing Commissioners.

When, at some future date, the grade crossings in Massachusetts are all abolished, there will be a very sad set of legal gentlemen who will find a very profitable source of income taken away from them. This being a commissioner on a grade crossing at about $100 a day is a real pretty job, and there has been quite a number of them. The main qualifications desired of a man on a commission of this sort are that he does not probe too deeply, and that he will not kick too much at being led. If he adopts that course he may be well rewarded and find his services called on again and again. There are some men who have made so good a mark that they have served on several commissions of this sort, much to their own profit and satisfaction.—[Practical Politics.]

Death of John Foley.

John Foley, a native of Ireland, and a resident of this town for over forty years, died at his home on Nelson street Wednesday morning. Mr. Foley was stricken with a paralytic shock six weeks ago, from which he never recovered. He was 71 years of age, and is survived by his wife, Mary (Connors) Foley and six children, Ella, Hannah, Mrs. John Hill, of Beverly, Mrs. Herbert Hurd and Mrs. George Parks of Belmont, and Jeremiah. During the forty years of his life in Winchester, Mr. Foley was employed on the street department of the town.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church, this Friday morning at 9 o'clock. High mass of requiem was celebrated by Fr. Henry J. Madden. The interment was in Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

In re Insect Pests.

DON'T forget that every dollar appropriated above $117.46 for this account the town will have to pay one hundred per cent. while for the five thousand dollars between this figure and $117.46 the town will get back from the Commonwealth eighty per cent.

VERBUM SAP.

THE ELECTION.

An Unusually Large Turn Out of Citizens and a Big Vote.

Mr. Coit's Friends Come to His Assistance. J. H. Carter and W. C. Newell Defeated.

The annual town meeting for 1906 opened on Monday morning with one of the largest turn-outs of citizens for some years. The first arrivals were at the hall as early as half past five, but the majority of those present were just in time for the opening. Promptly at 5:45 Town Clerk Carter called the meeting to order and asked the voters to deposit their votes for Moderator. It was on account of the contest for this office that caused many citizens to leave their warm beds so early in the morning, and it may have been the desire to learn of the outcome that caused so many to visit the polls and vote during the early morning hours. Of the 66 votes cast for Moderator, Mr. George Chandler Coit received 53, and Mr. Henry F. Johnson 13. The attendance at the opening of the meeting numbered about 70.

Moderator Coit was immediately sworn in, and after administering the oath to the ballot clerk, the polls were opened to the large and constantly increasing number of citizens waiting to vote. The morning's vote was by far the largest polled for many years, fully 600 votes being cast by nine o'clock. The ballot box frequently missed registration, and after some eight hundred votes had been numbered it registered at only infrequent intervals. For the benefit of the officers in charge, breakfast was served at seven o'clock, the fare of pie, doughnuts, sandwiches and coffee, furnishing an excellent foundation for their day's work. A substantial dinner was served by a caterer at noon.

Last year the total number of votes registered at the annual meeting was $13, and at the State election last fall 966. Last Monday the vote was 980—quite a substantial increase. One of the surprises was the defeat of Selectman Carter, due in great measure to the adverse sentiment arising from the recent electric light hearing when he was accused of partiality to the Edison Company, and which arose because of misunderstanding.

Another surprise was the defeat of Mr. Newell for Town Clerk, as this gentleman and his friends were confident of his election. The present clerk, Mr. Carter, won out by 200 votes over Mr. Newell. Had he been elected, Mr. Newell proposed to run for collector next year and thereby carry out the recommendation of the special committee on improving town business by consolidating the office of collector, Town Clerk and other clerkships. Mr. Carter has expressed a willingness to perform the duties of the clerkship, but not that of Collector also. He has been elected for the term of three years, so that now the full consolidation as proposed, cannot be brought about until after then.

The election passed off quietly. Treasurer Spurr, as usual, lead the ticket, he receiving 815 votes, while Collector Bell was second with 773. Mr. William D. Richards received high vote for Selectman—711.

GEORGE ADAMS WOODS,
New Chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

Chairman George Adams Woods.

Mr. George Adams Woods, who was elected to the chairmanship of the Board of Selectmen Tuesday evening, is one of the best known men in town. He was born in Boston, Nov. 2, 1869, so that he is a young man, the youngest yet to hold this position in Winchester. He was educated in the public schools of Medford, Chauncy Hall school, and Noble's Preparatory school, and at the age of 17 entered the employ of Clark & Carruth, booksellers. Later he accepted a position at the Old Corner Book Store, remaining there for six months when he was with the Glasgow Steamship Company of Chicago, Illinois. For 10 years he held a responsible position with the Suffolk Savings Bank, Boston, resigning in 1902 to devote himself to business in Winchester and Boston. For six years he was water registrar and clerk of the Winchester water board.

He was president of the Calumet Club in 1899, and is now president of the Winchester Boat Club. He is one of Boston's prominent real estate and insurance agents, and besides being the largest handler of real estate here, he has been instrumental in consummating some of the biggest deals that have ever taken place in this town. Mr. Woods is considered admirably equipped to fill the responsible office of chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

Calumet Club Notes.

The annual dinner of the club will be held on next Thursday evening, and plans are being made to make it one of the most successful and entertaining events in the history of the club.

The order of exercises will be as follows:

Six o'clock Gathering of the Club
Half after six, prom.

Eight o'clock, approx.

Introduction of

of Boston

Dr. Bishop is one of the best known sportsmen in the country and he will show by aid of biograph pictures, how he killed a moose. He will also show a number of other events by the biograph.

Half after nine, or thereabouts

Some formal and more informal singing.

The entertainment and smoker at the club on last Saturday evening brought out the largest audience of gentlemen this year. The evening's entertainment consisted of a short address on physical culture and maintaining the health of the body by Mr. Henry M. S. Aiken, assistant physical director of the Boston Y. M. C. A. Mr. Aiken gave in connection with his talk a practical illustration of one method of light exercise to keep the body of the average man in good working order.

Following Mr. Aiken's address was an exhibition of fencing by Carl Bridges and Harry Davis of B. A. A. Several boxing bouts were given by Prof. Gerald Weeman instructor of boxing at the Boston Y. M. C. A. and Emil Paul, also by Mr. John Lynch, Mr. John Rieley of East Boston and Fred O'Brien and Willie Dunn of Chelsea. Messrs. Weeman and Paul gave an excellent exhibition and illustrated several of the blows and counters.

Messrs. Bridges and Davis also gave a very interesting exhibition with duelling swords.

During the evening Mr. Harry James gave several impersonations which were much enjoyed. A collation followed the entertainment.

Lecture on Cooking.

On Tuesday afternoon at the Calumet Club Maria Willett Howard, of Simmons College, gave a most interesting lecture on cooking before a large audience of ladies. The lecture was the first of a series given by the Woman's Guild of the Church of the Epiphany. Miss Howard gave a number of practical receipts with illustration demonstrations, her work being done upon a gas stove. The lecture was considered by many to have been the best of its nature ever given in this town. Three more lectures will be given on the remaining Tuesdays of this month.

Important Sale.

Papers were passed this week for the transfer of a large part of the Quigley property on Main street. The buyer is Mr. Reuben C. Hawes of West Medford, who buys for an investment, and who may later remodel the large stable on the property for boarding, hack and livery purposes.

The property transferred consists of 32,115 square feet of land with three houses and a large stable.

A HANDSOME GARAGE

Costing $20,000 to be Erected by Kelley & Hawes.

Site to be on Church and Vine Sts. and to be Best Outside of Boston.

The firm of Kelley & Hawes are having plans drawn for a large new automobile garage, which, when completed, will be the best and finest garage in this section, being second only to the Park Square Garage, Boston.

The new building is to have frontage on both Park and Church streets, and will cost about twenty thousand dollars. It will replace their present stable on Park street, and the Davis estate on Church street. The two stores on Vine street on the Davis estate will be allowed to remain. The new building will be three stories in height and built entirely of brick and cement with a frontage of sixty feet and one hundred and thirty six feet in depth. It is to be equipped with all the latest appliances for the care and storage of automobiles.

The firm will probably install a number of automobiles for hire, and carry a line for sale. Their present stable will either be moved to their Dinsmore stable property or an addition built to their large stable on Winchester place and the entire business centered there.

Local news can be found on seven pages of this issue of the Star.

Afternoon Tea.

Mrs. George B. Smith of Oxford street entertained a large number of her Winchester friends yesterday afternoon from three to five o'clock at the Winchester Country Club. The affair was the most elaborate and charming afternoon tea of the season, and was attended by over a hundred ladies of this town. The rooms at the club house were tastefully decorated with cut flowers, Fair Maid pinks, violets and palms and presented a remarkably pretty and cosy appearance.

Mrs. Smith received her guests in the new andices was provided by a caterer in the dining room during the afternoon, during which time the following ladies poured: Mrs. Eben Keyes, Mrs. Edward B. Horne, Mrs. James W. Russell, Jr., and Mrs. William Keyes. These ladies were assisted by Miss Edith Stevens of Malden, Miss Charlotte Dwinell, Miss Mary Kellogg, Miss Bertha Smith, Miss Amy Higgins, Mrs. Joshua Kelley, Mrs. Clarence Ordway, Mrs. Ralph Durrell, Mrs. Edward Harmon, Mrs. Nelson Hawley and Mrs. William Ayer. During the afternoon music was given by a stringed orchestra. Mrs. Smith received many gifts of flowers from her friends.

Gifts for the New Church.

The council to recognize the new Second Congregational Church of Winchester meets on Tuesday, March 13, at the Highland Bethany Chapel at 3 p. m., reconvening at 7:30 p. m. for the public exercises of the evening. The Rev. Messrs. D. Augustine Newton, Stephen A. Norton, Joshua Coit, Daniel March, Vincent Ravi, S. Winchester Adriaance, Frank S. Hunnewell, Alfred Dumm and Wolcott Calkins are expected to take part. Miss Marion M. Rice will sing.

Mrs. Jane Herrick has presented the new church with a communion set, in memory of her husband, Moses H. Herrick; and the Highland Bethany Society at its meeting held Tuesday afternoon voted to give the sum of $100 to the church for a communion table and other fittings.

Mrs. Alice M. Richardson.

Mrs. Alice M. (Connell) Richardson of this town died at her home on Oak street Saturday as a result of a hemorrhage. Mrs. Richardson had made her home in this town for the past eight or ten years with three of her five sons, Harry F., Russell W. and Royal. She had not been in perfect health for several years and during her last illness was confined to bed about a week. She was born in Florence, Mass., and was the widow of George W. Richardson, who died a number of years ago. Previous to her coming to this town she made her home in Orange, Mass., with her parents.

Funeral services were held at Orange, the burial being at that place.

Eventide Service.

At the 4:30 o'clock service next Sunday at the Congregational Church Rev. L. F. Bell, but recently returned from Japan, will give an address. It promises to be very interesting and informing as the speaker is well acquainted with the latest movements in the Sunrise Kingdom where history has been made very rapidly in the recent past. Special music. Miss Ogilvie and Mrs. Willard will sing. Everybody invited. All seats free. Come.

TOWN MEETING.

upon the estates and polls of the town and appropriated for payment of interest; and that $10,595 be transferred from water rates to interest account.

HIGHWAYS AND BRIDGES.

The Appropriations Committee recommended that $19,000 be assessed upon the estates and polls of the town and appropriated for Highways and Bridges, the same to be expended under the direction of the Board of Selectmen, acting as Highway Surveyors.

Selectman Woods moved to amend by making the amount $20,000, giving as a reason for the passage of the larger sum, the demands that the citizens are making for improvements in their streets which would cost $2500, and also the great necessity for rebuilding Cross street which was in a wretched condition, poor sidewalks, and because it was the only remaining line of through travel which had not been rebuilt. A small section of Highland avenue was in a dangerous condition, and continually patching it up was costly. The bridge on Lake street leading to the town yard would have to be rebuilt in order to get the steam road roller to the yard without making a wide detour by way of Wildwood street.

Mr. H. F. Johnson criticized the Selectmen for exceeding their appropriation year after year and believed that they should be obliged to keep within their appropriation the same as other departments.

Mr. Woods replied by saying that the deficit was a legacy from the previous Boards and had been handed down from year to year.

Mr. Johnson said that the Selectmen should adhere to the pay as you go policy, and moved that the deficit, $1500, be added to the appropriation and thus wipe it out. This motion was lost later.

Selectman Symmes said that the appropriations were not large enough if the work requested was to be done. It was hard to turn down citizens who ask for improvements on their streets, and then blame the members of the Board for not doing the work.

Mr. Parkhurst believed the shortage should be wiped out, but that owing to the great expenses of the present year, he advocated waiting until another year. Citizens should be considerate of their requests for the present, and if this was done, then the Selectmen by economy would have money enough to carry them through the year.

Selectman Carter hoped the larger sum would be voted. The money is judiciously expended. The question of economy is an old one and this had been used as an argument to continually reduce the appropriation for highways year after year. The adoption of the eight hour law costs the town $2500 annually. The storm of last Saturday will cost the town $700 for repairs. Cross street should be rebuilt also a portion of Highland avenue, and from his observation even the increased sum asked for was not enough.

The larger sum was granted by a vote of 253 to 58.

In addition there will also be about $2300 receipts available from the street Railway Excise Tax and the Street Railway Corporation Tax.

Selectman Carter moved that "Acting Highway Surveyors" in the last line of the vote be stricken out. Carried.

Mr. Johnson then offered the following vote, which was rejected:

That the Selectmen are directed to have not less than $1,500 as unexpended balance Dec. 31, 1906, on Highways and Bridges account.

STREET LIGHTS.

A motion was offered that $7,500 be assessed upon the estates and polls of the town and appropriated for street lights.

Mr. Johnson moved to amend by making the amount $7,000. He claimed that this amount would be ample if the practice of lighting private streets and grounds was discontinued. Did he possess the money he would personally cause an injunction to be placed on the town to prevent this.

Selectman Carter believed that there would soon be a substantial reduction in electric lighting rates not only in town lamps, but of those in stores and houses, and because of this he thought $7,000 would be ample for the present year. The $7,000 was then voted.

TOWN HALL.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

When $10,000 was asked for the fire department, Mr. Johnson protested that the amount was too large. The department is not worth it, he said. It is getting to be too much like the Boston department. There are four regular men employed and one spare man. This was nonsense, as the permanent men are not worked so hard that a spare man was needed to relieve the others. Soon there would be a demand for one day off in five, and in his opinion it was wrong to increase the appropriation $1500 over last year. He knew that he was taking the unpopular side, yet he did not believe the town was able to appropriate this money. Every year there was an increase.

Mr. Tuck hoped the sum as asked for would be given.

The motion as offered was carried.

IN CONCLUSION.

When the school appropriation was being discussed, Mr. Carter asked why the sum asked for was larger than one year ago, considering that many children had left town with their parents on account of the McKay company going to Beverly.

Chairman Currier of the School Board replied, saying that diminution was so scattered over town that it was impossible to save anything in the force of teachers. The expenses for this year would be the same as for last, while the increase of $1000 was for the purpose of meeting out justice to teachers who were inadequately remunerated for their services, and was in line with the policy inaugurated by the Board some years ago of gradually increasing the pay of all the teachers.

In reply to an inquiry by Mr. Carter as to whether the $500 asked for Manchester Field would include the erection of a band stand on the field, Mr. Preston Pond of the Park Board said that it would not and that some other arrangement would have to be made.

The meeting adjourned at 10 o'clock to next Monday evening when the next item on the appropriation list will be that asking for $12,985.68, for the suppression of moths, and over which there promises to be a warm discussion.

The tellers sworn in for the meeting were: F. P. Smith, B. T. Morgan, J. P. Boutwell and E. F. Messenger.

Temptations to Students.

Mr. J. W. MacDonald, of the State Board of Education, in an address before the Congregational ministers at Boston a few days ago said:

"There never was a time when the college offered the student with a purpose, a better opportunity for an education than today, and there never was a time when college life furnished so many temptations to a student to neglect his opportunities and to smother his better self in social dissipation and demoralizing amusements. Many successful resist, and too many yield to these temptations. The college diploma, therefore, is not a guarantee of an education, but rather a mark of social distinction, enabling its holder to join some club or society. Indeed, looked at in one way and judged by one class of its graduates, the college is a place for acquiring an education; but, looked at in another way and judged by another class of its graduates, it is a place where young men and women can be kept for four years from learning things that would be useful to them."

School Fraternities.

The meeting of 300 persons in Winchester to discuss the secret societies existing among the boys and girls in the Winchester high school, and the resolutions condemning these societies which were passed at the meeting, is a rather noticeable attention to a condition which educators in other parts of the country have taken occasion to similarly criticize and disapprove of, and which many of the leading men at the head of large school systems have most generally regarded as being undesirable among boys and girls of the high school age. The subject is new because secret societies among boys and girls of the high school age are of comparatively recent growth, and have become part of school life nowadays just as the high school football team, and the baseball team, and the basketball team, and all other athletic associations are a modern growth of athletics. Now these fraternities exercise a distinct power and influence among scholars, and the criticism of them is that they inculcate ideas of caste and exclusiveness in the minds of boys and girls, and upset the ideas of democratic equality upon which the public school system rests. These people in Winchester would hardly turn out to the number of 300 if the subject was not a pressing one. Of course, it is the parents who must act in this matter, because the school authorities cannot undertake to regulate what have come to be known as "kid fraternities."—[Boston Herald.]

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Sherrick, 220 No. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

An Innovation in Funerals.

An innovation for New England in the way of funeral arrangements was inaugurated a few days ago at Fall River when the body of a prominent deceased citizen was carried, accompanied by the bearers and sorrowing friends, from the First Congregational Church in Fall River, where the services were held, to Marion by trolley.

One of the handsome new trolley express cars was covered with rugs and the casket, buried in a wealth of beautiful floral offerings, was placed upon supports in the centre. Seats were provided in the same car for the bearers.

Running independently behind this car was a special passenger car in which about 40 relatives and friends of the deceased rode. The trip was made from the church in Fall River through New Bedford to Marion, from which point the trip to the Rochester Cemetery where the interment took place, was made in carriages, and occupied but about two hours. This obviated the necessity of the various changes and unwelcome publicity incidental to the steam road service.

Throughout the middle west and the west, trolley funerals are common and many of the street railway companies have special cars built for the purpose of accommodating caskets with arrangements for the flowers, bearers and mourners, but in New England it has been little known. The relatives of the deceased in this instance expressed much satisfaction with the arrangements provided for them.

This unique funeral cortege has attracted wide attention and is looked upon as a possible forerunner of others to follow, particularly where it is necessary to consider the expense and where the distance from the place of funeral to that of interment is extended and both are convenient to the lines of the street railway systems.

The trolley car is about to increase its usefulness to an astonishing degree by the establishment of a route from Boston to Chicago, Ill. The plans are now all finished and rights secured by the Vanderbilt interests. Luxurious trolley smokers, sleepers and parlor cars are included in the program, with substantial roadbeds, mostly on private property. The new assured line from the coast to the lakes means a transcontinental trolley line of over 1600 miles, and an investment of $100,000,000 or more.

Old Men Exercise Care.

In commenting on the suggestion that the older men in charge of the affairs of the savings banks be supplanted by younger directors and presidents, Cashier A. P. Weeks of the Merchants' national bank and a resident of this town says:

"More than any other class of bankers, those in charge of savings banks have a solemn responsibility in connection with the way in which they invest the money entrusted to their care.

"Savings banks are not run for the purpose of promoting schemes. The money deposited in them is largely that of widows, orphans and others who are incapable of looking after their own financial interests, and the men in charge of those banks cannot possibly exercise too great care or discretion as to the way in which they handle these funds.

"To retire men who have grown old in this very responsible business and supplant them with men who are not fitted by experience or capacity to discharge such great obligations, would, in my opinion, be a distinct step backward and not forward."

Often The Kidneys Are Weakened by Over-Work.

Unhealthy Kidneys Make Impure Blood.

It used to be considered that only urinary and bladder troubles were to be traced to the kidneys, but now modern science proves that nearly all diseases have their beginning in the disorder of these most important organs.

The kidneys filter and purify the blood—that is their work.

Therefore, when your kidneys are weak or out of order, you can understand how quickly your entire body is affected and how every organ seems to fail to do its duty.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the great kidney remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

If you are sick you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys. The mild and extraordinary effect of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases, and is sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling you how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. Mention this paper when writing to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

NEW POTATOES. PARSLEY SAUCE.

The experienced cook knows that a new potato should never be peeled, but a beginner must be told to scrape the skin off with a coarse towel. Drop the potatoes into boiling water and cook until they can be pierced with a fine skewer. Do not burst them open with the tines of a kitchen fork or expect them to cook until ready, for that isn't the nature of the first new potatoes that come into market, and which are too young to have the starch cells fully developed.

Drain and arrange in a pyramid on a hot plate and pour over a cream sauce to which has been added some finely chopped parsley. Then sprinkle a teaspoon more of the parsley over and serve at once.

For the sauce, rub two level tablespoons of butter and one of flour together, add a cup of thin cream and stir constantly until it boils, then add one-half teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper and a tablespoon of the finely chopped parsley.

As a substitute for a cream sauce use melted butter with parsley.

Our post-master, Mr. J. W. Richardson gave a very interesting address to a group of boys in the parlor, last Friday evening. Mr. Richardson took as his subject, "How Uncle Sam Handles His Mail." Many interesting points were brought out, which seldom occur to one as he waits for the postman. The boys expressed themselves as having enjoyed a most interesting half hour and appreciated the postmaster's interest in coming to the rooms and speaking to them. A lunch was served, and a social hour followed. Other subjects are arranged, and men secured to speak upon them.

State Secretary, R. M. Armstrong attended the Student Volunteer Convention, held at Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 28, Mar. 4. A souvenir of Camp Durell, season of "HENRY M. MOORE" THE CAMP LAUNCH.

1905 has been published by the state committee. Upon the front cover of the prospectus is a very fine view of the campus showing ten of the tents. A few facts are of great interest to camp lovers. A total number of 158 attended the camp last year. The ages ranging as follows:

Age 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 total
No. 4 10 23 25 35 21 17 12 5 4 2 158

The growth of the camp has been marked during the years 1903 and 5. In 1903 the total attendance was 94 while the year following the total number reached 141. Last year 180 boys enjoyed the life in camp there. Twenty-eight leaders helped to make camp life pleasant for the fellows.

During the nine weeks of camp, 2,420 pounds of fresh meat 300 pounds of fish, 2,500 eggs, 500 pounds of butter 950 pounds of sugar, 10 barrels of flour, 75 bushels of potatoes, 5 bushels of beans, 200 pounds of chicken, to say nothing of ham, bacon, chipped beef, clams, frankfurters and vegetables not mentioned, etc.

Side trips were arranged during the season. Rockland and Thomaston, Maine, with its prison were visited, and often sea trips were taken.

Deep water fishing was a feature much looked forward to and enjoyed. Oftentimes a company of happy boys started out with lots of courage, determined to have a grand time fishing, but only to return with few fish, and in fact too tired and sea sick to care for anything but a quiet place in which to rest.

Durell is an ideal spot in which to spend a vacation. This year the camp will be open from July 1st to September 1st. As the camp is growing so rapidly the number of boys will be limited to 100 a week. When this number is reached a waiting list will be opened.

A branch of the United States Volunteer Life Saving Corps will be organized, membership in which must be won in competition drills designed to prove fitness for emergency. A competent swimming teacher will be in attendance. A division of the National First Aid Association, will be under the direction of an expert, who will teach campers what to do in case of accident.

Camp yells and songs are frequently heard. As the steamer leaves the pier at Boston the general fun begins. The familiar yell:

Razzle Dazzle, Hobbie Gobbie,
Sis Boom, Bah!
Camp Durell,
Friendship, Maine,
Rah, Rah, Rah! Is heard.

One of the camp songs:

"WE ARE GOING BACK, BACK, BACK TO CAMP DURELL."

Tune, "We are going back to Baltimore."

"We are going back, back, back to Camp Durell."

It's the place the boys all love so well.

We have longed for this for many a day.

We're boys from the Y. M. C. A.
The fun we have is more than tongue can tell.

At 6 p. m. we hear the dinner-bell,
And then, O my, how all the boys do yell.

We take our knives and forks and spoons,
And eat our bread and fish and prunes.

When we got back to Camp Durell.

A camp reunion will be held in the rooms April 5th. All campers who have been to Camp Durell or to Camp Becket are invited.

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism.

Chas. Drake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeepers here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me." There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

The Adams bill to institute the whipping post for wife beaters in the District of Columbia was before the House Feb. 13th. One of the speakers, Rep. Y. W. Sims of the Eighth Congressional district of Tennessee, after calling attention to the large number of offenders in the district during the past year and the probable causes, said:

"The best way to cure an evil of this kind is to remove the cause. Why does not the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Adams) offer an amendment to abolish saloons in the District of Columbia to stop all these habitual drunkards from obtaining drink? Why have we not had recommendations along that line? Why, the government of the United States or the District of Columbia is a partner in every saloon in the District. A large fee or license is charged, and a part of the profits of the business that makes wife beaters is shared with these governments. You say that some men when sober beat their wives. It may be that having been drunk and brutalized with liquor they have become brutes enough to beat their wives even when sober."

Every Two Minutes

Physicians tell us that all the blood in a healthy human body passes through the heart once in every two minutes. If this action becomes irregular the whole body suffers. Poor health follows poor blood; Scott's Emulsion makes the blood pure. One reason why is such a great aid is because it passes so quickly into the blood. It is partly digested before it enters the stomach; a double advantage in this. Less work for the stomach; quicker and more direct benefits. To get the greatest amount of good with the least possible effort is the desire of everyone in poor health. Scott's Emulsion does just that. A change for the better takes place even before you expect it.

A Convincing Statement.

In commenting on the annual report of the State Superintendent of the work against the moths, the Boston daily papers failed to notice one of the most important features of that document. We refer to the report made to the State Superintendent by Prof. C. H. Fernald, State entomologist, in which that noted authority on insect life gives most interesting reasons why the people in the Western part of Massachusetts should support a State appropriation of a generous character with which to exterminate the moths.

Prof. Fernald in his report says the assessed value of the land in the moth infested territory is $92,860,984, and that of the uninfested part of the State $272,429,686, showing 77 per cent. of the land value of the Commonwealth to be infested. The total area of the woodlands is placed at 1,460,995 acres, valued at $23,936,362 at $16.38 per acre. Of the woodlands 365,265 acres valued at $9,891,885, or 27.08 per acre, is infested with the moths. The remaining 1,095,729 acres of woodland in the uninfested western part of the State, is valued at $14,041,470 or only $12.81 per acre.

Under the present method of cutting and burning the underbrush and more or less of the worst infested trees in the forest lands, Prof. Fernald says the cost of cleaning is an average of about $50 an acre, not counting the expense of burrowing the remaining trees and killing the caterpillars under the burlaps the following season. Such a cost he asserts, is more than three times the assessed valuation of the entire woodlands of Massachusetts and far more than their intrinsic worth as well.

He goes on to say he considers the property of the Western Massachusetts land owners endangered and the people powerless to help themselves, unless by direct State appropriations to stamp out the moths in the territory they now infest.

The taxable property in this State, he says, is valued at $3,420,197,428, and if that amount were to be assessed $200,000, the tax on $1 would be less than one-seventeenth of a mill and a man owning a farm worth $5000 would pay a tax of $0.294, which he might well look upon as a premium paid the State to insure him against injury by moths. That, he adds, is really far less than persons in Eastern Massachusetts pay for the cleaning of a single apple tree. The State Entomologist then proceeds to show that, supposing it should be found necessary to annually appropriate $200,000 for the next 40 years, as long as any ordinary person would have charge of such a farm, his premiums in that entire time would amount to only $11.76. That, he also adds, is less than many Eastern Massachusetts persons are paying to clean the moths from a small orchard for a single year.

Prof. Fernald's argument is most convincing and should strike home to those in the western section of the Commonwealth who have been opposing State work against the moths. Now that it is practically assured, a national appropriation of some sort will be made to assist the New England states in their contest with the two moth pests, if a generous State appropriation is allowed for a number of years it will be possible to stamp out the insects once and for all time. The Federal appropriation will be used to care for the roads and highways and thus to prevent the spread of the moths to present uninfested territory and the Massachusetts appropriations can then be used to fight the insects in the woodlands and on private estates.

Many people of the infested districts have as yet taken no steps to clean the moth nests and egg clusters from the trees on their property and are apparently waiting for the advent of the city or town spraying machines. It is easier to catch and destroy the moths when they are dormant and visible than it will be later on when they are travelling and can conceal themselves among the leaves. If these negligent people will not make an effort to catch a sleeping caterpillar it is likely they will make an attempt when he wakes up? Now is the time. No matter how earnestly people work, or how thoroughly, there will be plenty of caterpillars about when the time for the effective use of the spraying machines.

County Rings Subject of Discussion.

In a statement issued last Saturday, Richard Henry Dana of Cambridge answers the attack made on him by Levi S. Gould of Melrose, chairman of the Middlesex county commission, in a speech delivered by Mr. Gould at the complimentary dinner to Alvah S. Baker, the new superintendent of the Concord reformatory.

Mr. Gould sharply criticized Mr. Dana for the latter's remarks, made at a dinner, that the worst scandals in the commonwealth during the past 20 years have been in the county governments, that the counties are run by a "ring," and that the civil service should be extended to the various positions in the service of the counties. He likened him to Brutus, who although an honorable man, stabbed Caesar, and said that Mr. Dana would stab every public official.

Mr. Dana in his statement gives several reasons for his belief that county "rings" exist, and gives one specific instance in Middlesex county which led to his conclusion that Middlesex county had a "ring." He refers to a county convention where every deputy sheriff but one held credentials, and also numerous other county subordinates were present, and the great majority of the conventions was made up of these and of persons with whom the county commissioners had dealings.

He comes out strong in favor of the civil service for county positions, stating that it will tend toward better administration, and the relief of the officials from the pressure that they admit they are under in making appointments and even making unnecessary new positions. He also advocates its establishment on the ground that it would do away with subordinates taking a controlling hand in the nominations at county caucuses and conventions.

The Biggest Growing Paper.

The newspaper situation in Boston has entirely and absolutely changed in the past year.

Today The Boston Journal, passing the 100,000 mark in net cash daily sale (not simply papers printed but absolute net sale every day to families), stands as one of the big leaders among Boston newspapers.

In the past year its sale has increased over 40,000 copies a day—and that means a successful newspaper in quality. Its advertising has increased 2,535 columns in the same time, and that means a successful newspaper in business.

It is the biggest growing paper that ever struck Boston—growing steadily, surely, week after week, and growing on clear merit.

General Clerkship.

Town Clerk Carter having expressed a willingness to serve as general clerk, the experiment should be tried. The scheme will, no doubt, be successful and now is the time to put it into practice and later, if deemed advisable, the entire suggestion of the special committee could be put to the test.

Rules for Town Meetings.

The action of the Attorney General in wiping out all the rules for the conduct of town meetings makes it imperative nevertheless that some rules should be provided despite the opinion of the Attorney General. The town has had such rules for years and they have always worked well, have been approved by the Superior Court, and we shall have them again despite any super critical lawyer.

Caucus Endorsement Ensures Election.

We have heard the statement made many times that a caucus nomination did not amount to but very little to a candidate toward an election. This is not so as it almost invariably has proven equivalent to a victory and this was never more apparent than at the election of last Monday when every caucus nominee won out and every person who took out nomination papers was defeated.
We prefer the endorsement of the caucus when we run for office.

Conditions Serious at Centre Fire Station.

It seems that conditions in the interior of the central fire station are really more serious than those on the outside of the building as told in last week's STAR. The house is not connected with the sewer and the stench arising from the constantly overflowing cesspool under the building is very offensive, not to say dangerous, to the men. The Board of Health, it is understood, is to insist that the house be connected with the sewer if it is to be longer occupied and if this should be done it would cost not only a large sum for digging and piping, but many hundreds of dollars for the plumbing which would be necessary throughout the house. This would mean money thrown away absolutely. There will be a motion offered at the meeting Monday to appoint a committee of five to investigate the matter. This committee when appointed should be instructed to report as soon as possible to a special meeting that action may be taken looking to a new house immediately. This old house presents a condition that should not be allowed to exist even for one year.

E. E. Hale Plays.

The Edward Everett Hale Ten of the Lenda-Hand Society of the Unitarian Church gave two very successful plays on Tuesday evening at Mercalf Hall in the church before an audience of over 250 persons. The plays were entitled "In Honor Bound" and "Julius Caesar," the latter being a musical burlesque. Preceding the plays and during the intermission music was given by members of the society, Miss Mabel Wingate and Mr.
Leslie Goff.

The first play was a one act drama by Sidney Grundy, and the cast included four of the best known amateurs in town.
It was these players who gave "Sweet Lavender" so successfully last year, and their work in "In Honor Bound" was fully equal to any of their previous efforts.
The musical burlesque brought down the house. The acting was very good, and the play was unquestionably a decided success. At the close of the performance dancing was enjoyed until a late hour. The society realized almost $50 by its efforts.

Following is the program:
Violin duet, Miss Wingate and Mr.
Goff.

Why He Was Not There.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:
I hope the gentleman who was elected Moderator last Monday, will forgive some of his friends in the north part of the town, for not coming down to vote for him.

The writer of this got up at 3 o'clock a. m., and made up his mind that it was a little too early to go to the polls, so went back to bed again and did not awake until 6 o'clock.

I want to say right here that if my vote could elect this gentleman President of the United States, I would gladly do it.

Club is not dead yet!

Loss of appetite always results from faulty digestion. All that is needed is a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and give you an appetite like a wolf. These Tablets also act as a gentle laxative.

Credit Exchange.

In order to protect members from being imposed upon by dead-beats the Wakefield Merchants' association, at its monthly meeting last night, voted to have a committee appointed to investigate the adviseability of forming a credit exchange, and the committee will report at the next meeting in April.

As in every other town there are plenty of people who buy their groceries, clothing, coal (and even printing) of a firm until the good natured proprietor calls a halt; then they try another victim. Merchants' associations in other places have formed credit lists, for confidential use of members only, and Wakefield business men are to do likewise. It will then be a case of pay-as-you-go, or go, with the more notorious "bums." Every member of the association can probably contribute quite a few names for the "list" and it ought to prove beneficial for members—

PROBATE COURT.

To the heirs-at-law, next of kin and all other persons interested in the estate of Eliza R. Fay, late of Winchester, in said County, deceased.

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for Probate, by Robert Gott, who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond.

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Cambridge, in said County of Middlesex, on the twenty-seventh day of March, A. D. 1906, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Winchester Star, a newspaper published in Winchester, the last publication to be one day, at least, before said Court, and by mailing postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation, to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, CHARLES J. McINTIRE, Esquire, First Judge of said Court, this eighth day of March in the year one thousand nine hundred and six.

W. E. ROGERS, Register.

Mrs. Hannah Doyle.

Mrs. Hannah Doyle of this town died this week at the Home for aged Poor, Somerville, of a cancer. She was 65 years of age and the widow of John Doyle. She had made her home in Winchester for the past thirty years, being born in Ireland. For the past month she had been an inmate of the home in Somerville, her health being such that she could receive better treatment there. She had one daughter, Margaret, who died a few years ago.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's Church this Friday morning at 10 o'clock. The burial was at Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

Mrs. Andrew M. Fitz, formerly Miss Florence L. Dyer, the well known soprano of this town, is now the soprano in the quartette of the Pilgrim Church in Seattle, Washington. Mr. Fitz is the bass in the same quartette.

One of the developments of modern advertising is the use of printers' ink to call attention to church services. A Springfield church regularly uses a large space in the advertising columns, right among the dry goods, clothing, and grocery ads. A Chelsea church does the same thing. In a Boston paper this morning there is a large advertisement in display type of special Easter services. In this case the church "ad" loses nothing in its attractive qualities by being accidentally put alongside an advertisement exploiting the merits of a certain brew of bock beer.—(Wakefield Item).

Material for the new patent leather factory for J. F. Boyle & Bros., at Cross street, has arrived and work on the foundations commenced. The building is to be 250x50 of two stories, and will be for the manufacture of patent and enameled leather. The owners of the proposed plant, wishing water for immediate use and prospectively to supply the system of automatic sprinklers, asked the board of public works at Woburn last Wednesday evening to replace the four-inch water main now in use at Cross street with a six-inch main. As the change would involve a delay of two months, the concern was advised to ask Winchester for the right to connect with its 12-inch main at Cross street.

I Had Stone in the Bladder, and my kidneys were affected. None of the means taken for relief produced any lasting benefit until I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, of Rondout, N. Y. The pain ceased—the calculus or stone having been dissolved by the medicine. I am ready to testify that my recovery was due to Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.—E. D. W. Parsons, Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. William E. Beggs of Main street entertained three tables at whist on last Saturday evening at her home, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Woodruff, Jr., of Holyoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Woodruff formerly resided in this town, and those present at the whist constituted the members of the whist club of which they were members when living here. The prizes were won by Mrs. Herbert Symmes and Mr. Woodruff.

Miss Alice Shattuck has returned after several weeks' visit in Washington and the South.

Arthur Adams, the ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Adams, started out yesterday to see a little of the world by himself. After his absence from home during the day was noticed his parents notified the police, and the wanderer was found last evening in South Boston, with his funds exhausted and ready to return home.

The Federation of Women's Clubs of New England are to have a bazaar at Horticultural Hall to begin Wednesday night, March 14, ending Saturday, March 17. At the bazaar they are to have an arts and crafts department. The Handicraft Society of Winchester has been invited to take charge of that table associated with the New Hampshire Daughters. Mrs. Hermann D. Murphy of the Winchester Society is chairman of the committee. It promises to be very interesting.

Pale, Thin, Nervous?

Then your blood must be in a very bad condition. You certainly know what to take, then take it—Ayer's Sarsaparilla. If you doubt, then consult your doctor. We know what he will say about this grand old family medicine.

This is the first question your doctor would ask. "Are your bowels regular?" He knows that daily action of the bowels is absolutely essential to recovery. Keep your liver active and your bowels regular by taking laxative doses of Ayer's Pills.

Artist Murphy's New Studio

Though retaining his wood-carving studio in the Grundmann, Hermann Dudley Murphy has given up his painting studio and transferred his easel and palettes to his country estate at Winchester, where he has now opened a large new studio. It is a beautiful building, with all the most modern equipment. Built high on a hilltop, it overlooks the Mystic Valley, commanding an extensive view. There are many balconies, with a veranda and a pergola on the southern exposure, and further down the slope Mr. Murphy is having ground arranged for an Italian garden.

On exhibition at Mr. Murphy's wood-carving studio is a splendid portrait of Fritz Van der Loo, captain of the Hoer army, which is being shown for the first time in Boston, although it was quite a feature of the artist's recent exhibition in Providence.

This young Dutch officer, who is most attractive in form and personality, is at present lost to the world on an obscure New York farm, where Mr. Murphy came across him during a summer painting tour.

He is posed in a dark blue fatigue uniform, and his rich flesh tints are accentuated by the glow from a red cap the sort artists wear in Paris, which evidently was introduced for its dashing color. The portrait which is full length, has strong, vigorous handling, and is low in tone.

In his other art, wood carving, Mr. Murphy's most interesting achievement this season is the very original sign he has delivered to Mr. Crowninshield, the architect. It is cut from a block of solid mahogany, showing a Viking ship under full sail in a light sea. A charming cloud effect is produced by the background carving, and the boat is highly emblazoned in the gold and brilliant color.

Crowninshield, being a Norwegian name gave the old Norse suggestion, and this is further carried out in an effective iron support of Scandinavian design and workmanship. The sign has just been swung at Long wharf, over the office entrance of the Crowninshield buildings.

Preparing for Spring.

Now is the time for all housekeepers to take preliminary steps in that important task—spring cleaning. Use Cabot's Sulpho-Naphthol throughout the house, especially in the cellar, about the sinks, the bath room, toilets and for cleaning the entire drainage system of all greasy, decomposing accumulations. Sulpho-Naphthol is a great spring remedy for these places, for it kills all disease germs, foul, poisonous odors, etc., thus placing the house in a perfectly healthy condition. Then when the spring comes there will be no active germs to breed disease and the work will be rendered much easier. Sulpho-Naphthol is the most valuable agent the housekeeper has to maintain clean, healthy homes. It is far superior to soaps—it is in fact the ideal cleaner.

Castle Square Theatre.

Romance and Robert Louis Stevenson were sworn friends. Of the dozen and more love stories that he wrote, not one lacks the romantic spirit that helped to establish firmly his reputation. And in no story of his is romance and picturesqueness stronger than in "Prince Otto." Its fantastic story of a mythical kingdom and its mythical prince, of his ambitions, his loves, his hates, and his struggles, is told with all that skill of which Stevenson was a master. Some years ago, a play was made from this story by Otis Skinner, and it was acted by him very successfully for a season or two. He never happened to reach Boston with it, however, and its first performance in that city will therefore take place next week at the Castle Square Theatre. The title role will be played by John Craig and the heroine Lillian Kemble, and to the other leading members of the stock company will be entrusted the principal characters.

Monday matinees are now being given at the Castle Square, and they are proving among the most popular afternoon performances. During the week of March 10th, "The Edge of the Storm," an English melodrama originally produced by Forbes Robertson, will be played at the Castle Square.

USEFULNESS OF SHARKS.

A Word of Praise For the Scavengers of the Ocean.

The shark is undoubtedly a "dog with a bad name." He is called opprobriously the "tiger of the seas" or the "sailor's foe" or any other scurrilous name which happens to be handy. Much mud is thrown at him, and as he seldom finds a defender most of it sticks. Hard lines this! Because in reality this blue water bogy is a humble and useful public servant, who performs uncomplainingly the duties connected with the sanitation of the seas.

The shark is the common scavenger and general undertaker of the ocean. He is not and, for reasons connected with his very moderate speed limit, never can be primarily a fish of prey. Open any captured shark and you will find clear proof that this is so. A few tangled bits of rope yarn, a battered corned beef tin, a corked bottle containing an insulting message to the finder (thrown overboard by some nautical wag) or a sailor's cap which has been lost in a gale, all tend to show that the shark is a fish of businesslike habits, with a keen eye to any chance windfalls which may come in his way. But the more digestible contents of his stomach, consisting mainly of carrion of every kind, all give the clearest of factory evidence that the original owners of them were not alive—in fact, were very much dead—when this marine sanitary inspector came along and, condemning them as nuisances, removed them into his own internal refuse bin.

A large accumulation of carefully collected evidence on this point proves conclusively that there are, as a matter of fact, only two articles of his ordinary menu which the shark is able to capture alive—namely, an occasional unwary sea fowl which he may happen to surprise asleep on the surface of the water, and the ugly, octopuslike squid, whose limited powers of locomotion give a chance to our hungry four knot prowler.

The shark, then, so far from being the gore dyed pirate which the novelists paint him, is a mere hardworking, commonplace drudge, and as such deserves, if not kindness, at any rate, toleration.—Pearson's Magazine.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Jealousy is like enmity. The less said about it the better.

The club all through life seems to be in the wrong hands.

The meanest father that ever lived isn't half as mean as the meanest husband.

Occasionally love affairs drag on so that Cupid disappears and Father Time takes his place.

When there are sickness and trouble and mother is sent for that is one occasion when no one notices she wears old fashioned clothes.

Don't keep your eyes on the man you have just heard something bad about. It is more important that you keep them on your mouth.

If a man is saying anything he shouldn't and his wife gives him a little punch under the table he takes it for an encore and says it again.—Acheson Globe.

Early Glassmaking.

The first attempt at glassmaking in this country was some years before the Revolution and was made at Quincy, Mass., by a company of Germans. Some specimens of their articles still exist. The place in Quincy where their manufactory was established acquired from them the name of Germantown, which name it retains to the present time. The site of their manufactory is now occupied by the institution called the Sailors' Snug Harbor. About 1785 Robert Hewes, a well known citizen of Boston, made probably the first effort to establish a window glass manufactory on this continent. Mr. Hewes carried his works to the fuel and erected his factory in the forest of New Hampshire.

Safety in Elevators.

Many persons have an objection to riding in elevators, or, more properly speaking, this objection should be classed as a feeling of dread or fear. But according to the superintendent of a big office building in Philadelphia the safest place for a person to be in an elevator—that is, statistically speaking. In the set of elevators for which statistics have been kept by the superintendent there has been an average transportation of 2,400,000 persons each year for seven years, an aggregate of 16,800,000, and of this number but one person has been injured, and that injury did not result fatally.—Rochester Post-Express.

A Famous Widow.

One of the most famous widows of antiquity was Agrippina, the widow of Germanicus. During the lifetime of her husband she attended him in all his campaigns and shared his dangers. Suspecting that her husband had been poisoned, she had his presumed murderer assassinated and was herself soon after treated with such indignity by Tiberius that she was driven to despair and starved herself to death.

Tradition Defied.

The bull had just entered the china shop. "Here," he remarked, "is where I knock tradition upside." Carefully backing from the place without so much as jarring a saucer, he inquired the route to the stockyards and went his way.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Breaking the Record.

Small Brother (enthusiastically)—Oh, grandma, Harry broke the record at the college contest! Grandma—Well, I declare, that boy is always breaking something! What will it cost to fix it, or will he have to get a new one?

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents. d8,ly

Reckless of Danger, the Great Soldier Was Often Wounded.

In reply to the question in what engagements he considered himself to have been in the greatest danger of losing his life Napoleon once said, "In the commencement of my campaigns." Indeed, if further proof were demanded to show that he did not spare himself at Toulon it is only necessary to add that during the ten weeks of its siege Napoleon, in addition to a bayonet wound in his thigh, had three horses shot under him, while at the siege of Acre during the expedition to Egypt he lost no fewer than four in the same manner.

During the last days of his life, when captivity, disappointment and sickness had well nigh completed their work, it is said that the agony of his fatal disease drew from him on many occasions the piteous cry of, "Why did the cannon balls spare me?"

During his long military career Napoleon fought sixty battles, while Caesar fought but fifty. In the early part of his career he was utterly reckless of danger while on the battlefield, and this spirit of fearlessness contributed largely to the love and esteem in which he was held by his armies. There was a curious belief among the English in Napoleon's time that he had never been wounded, and indeed the report was current that he carefully if not in a cowardly manner refrained from exposing himself. Nothing could be more contrary to the truth, for he was in reality several times severely wounded, but as he wished to impress upon his troops the belief that good fortune never deserted him and that, like Achilles, he was well nigh invulnerable, he always made a secret of his many dangers. He therefore enjoined once for all upon the part of his immediate staff the most absolute silence regarding all circumstances of this nature, for it is almost impossible to calculate the confusion and disorder which would have resulted from the slightest report or the smallest doubt relative to his existence. Upon the single thread of this man's life depended not only the fate and government of a great empire, but the whole policy and destiny of Europe as well.

NATAL AUTOGRAPHS.

Sign Manual of the Child That Does Not Change in Life.

There is born with every one of us and continues unchanged during our lives an unerring and inalienable mark or marks, which absolutely distinguish each one of us from every other fellow being. These physical marks never change from the cradle to the grave. This born autograph is impossible to counterfeit, and there is no duplicate of it among the teeming billions in the world. Look at the insides of your hands and the soles of your feet; closely examine the ends of your fingers. You see circles and curves and arches and whorls, some prominent with deep corrugations, others minute and delicate, but all a well defined and closely traced pattern. There is your physiological signature.

Run your hands through your hair and press your finger tips on a piece of clear glass. You see all the delicate tracing transferred—not two fingers alike. Even "the left hand knoweth not what the right hand doeth." They are distinctly different. Even twins may be so little different in size, features and general physical condition as to be scarcely distinguishable, yet their finger autographs are radically different.

In fact, in all humanity every being carries with him on his baby fingers and his wrinkled hand of decrepit old age the identical curves, arches and circles that were born with him. Nothing except dismemberment can obliterate or disguise them. Criminals may burn and wear their hands, but nature, when she restores the cuticle, invariably brings back the natal autograph.

MENTAL ATTITUDE.

It Has Much to Do With Winning Success in Life.

The mental attitude which we all have toward our work or our aim has everything to do with what we may accomplish. If you go to your work with the attitude of a slave who goes lashed to his task and see in it only drudgery; if you work without hope, seeing no future in what you are doing beyond getting a bare living; if you see no light ahead, nothing but poverty, deprivation and hard work all your life; if you think that you were destined to such a hard life, you cannot expect anything else than that which you look for.

If, on the other hand, no matter how poor you may be today, you can see a better future; if you believe that some day you are going to rise out of humdrum work that you are going to get up out of the basement of life into the drawing room, where beauty, comfort and joy await you; if your ambition is clean and you keep your eye steadily upon the goal which you hope to reach and feel confident that you have the ability to attain it, you will accomplish something worth while. The direction of your effort will follow your eye. If that looks up as well as on, you will climb.

That one quality of holding persistently the faith in themselves and never allowing anything to weaken the belief that somehow they would accomplish what they undertook has been the underlying principle of all great achievers. The great majority of men and women who have given civilization a great uplift started poor and for many dark years saw no hope of accomplishing their ambition, but they kept on working and believing that somehow a way would be opened. Think of what this attitude of hopefulness and faith has done for the world's great inventors—how most of them

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Caseo, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Phlegm, no Acid, no Alkali, no Pepsin, no Pancreatic Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert Chemical Co., Boston, U.S.A., and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

poisoned on through many years of dry, dreary drudgery before the light came, and the light would never have come but for their faith, hope and persistent endeavor.

What if they had listened to their advisers? Even those who loved them tried to beg them to give up the foolishness of chasing their lives into that which would never be practical or useful. We are enjoying today thousands of blessings, comforts and conveniences which have been bequeathed us by those resolute souls who were obliged often to turn a deaf ear to the pleadings of those they loved best as they struggled on amid want and woe for many years.—Success.

What's in a Name?

Frequently in the south one finds among the negroes as remarkable Christian names as those bestowed upon their offspring by the Puritan fathers. A gentleman of Virginia tells of a negro living near Richmond who for years had been familiarly known to him as Tim. It became necessary at one time in a lawsuit to know the full name of the dorky. The not unnatural supposition that Tim stood for Timothy met with a flat denial.

"No, sah!" exclaimed the negro. "Mah name ain't Timothy. It's What-timorous-souls-we-poor-mortals-be Jackson. Dey jest calls me Tim fo' short."—Success Magazine.

Angelo's Verdict.

Once a painter notorious for plagiarisms executed a historical picture in which every figure of importance was copied from some other artist, so that very little remained to himself. It was shown to Michael Angelo by a friend, who begged his opinion of it. "Excellent," said Angelo, "only at the day of judgment, when all bodies will resume their own limbs again. I do not know what will become of that historical painting, for there will be nothing left of it."

All at the Head.

Glass stands first of elastic substances, pearl is the heaviest of animal substances, mercury is the heaviest liquid, the heaviest woods are pomegranate and lignum vitae, cork is the lightest wood, and platinum is the most ductile metal, capable of being drawn so fine as to be invisible.

A colored gentleman called at the residence of a lady on Washington street a short time ago, and asked if he could not clean her trees of the moth nests. The lady told him to look over the place and submit a bid. After looking things over for about half an hour, he said he would do the job for $50. Taking his cue from the expression that showed itself on the lady's face, the colored gentleman said: "Well, I'm not particular about doing the work, anyway, as the creosote makes my hands very dirty."

TOWN MEETING.

$10,000 Voted for the Moths After Long Discussion.

Committee Appointed on Engine House—No Money for Wyman Schoolhouse.

The second session of the annual town meeting was held Monday evening, there being a fair attendance. The greater part of the evening was taken up in discussing the appropriation of $10,000 for the suppression of the moths. The consensus of opinion was that Winchester should do its full share in eliminating these pests and all adverse criticism regarding the large expenditure was turned down by an overwhelming majority. The next session of the meeting will probably be the last, as there are but seven articles remaining to be acted upon and some unfinished business.

Moderator Coit called the meeting to order, whereupon Mr. Marcus B. May offered a motion which was carried, that the usual Appropriations Committee of citizen be appointed by the Moderator for the present year.

Mr. John H. Carter offered a vote, which was carried that a committee of three be appointed by the Moderator to study the conditions of ponds in the centre of the town and report at some future town meeting.

Mr. D. B. Badger reported for the committee on building the new town stable. He said that the work had been completed, the building occupied by the several departments, and that there was a balance of the appropriation left of $2.47. The report was received.

INSECT PESTS.

Tree Warden Guild offered the following vote:

That $1,929.34 be transferred from Shade Trees and Insect Pest Extermination Account to Gypsy and Brown Tail Moths (or Shade Trees) Account, that $1,050.34 be transferred from the Treasury Fund to Gypsy and Brown Tail Moths (or Shade Trees) Account, and that $10,000 be assessed upon the estates and polls of the town and the total amount of $12,085.68 be appropriated for Gypsy and Brown Tail Moths (or Shade Trees), of which amount the sum of $500 shall be paid to the Tree Warden for salary, said sums to be expended under the direction of the Tree Warden.

Mr. Guild in support of his motion, spoke in detail of the conditions existing in Winchester in which he said that the town was not making a creditable showing in comparison with surrounding cities and towns. He had asked for $20,000 but the Appropriations Committee had prevailed on him to try and get along for the present with the $10,000. He was not prepared to say how far this money would go, or that even $20,000 would be sufficient for the year—it may require a great deal more than that. He wanted the citizens to distinctly understand that later in the year another appropriation would be asked for, the amount of which he was not prepared to state. The State had made an appropriation for the reimbursement of cities and towns of 80 per cent. of expenditures of sums of money over 1.25 per cent. of their taxed valuation. Under this provision Winchester had been awarded $4000. If over the allotted 1.25 per cent. was expended by the town he was not prepared to state that Winchester would be reimbursed for the excess. This he wanted to make plain to the citizens, so that there should be no misunderstanding later. The town did more effective work last year than has been the case thus far this season. One thing was certain money had got to be voted or else the town would be penalized to the extent of $100 a day for its neglect, and untold damage done the town from the moths.

Mr. John H. Carter thought it unwise to expend more than the State called for, and that it was a queer business policy to vote more than the maximum amount required by the State on which there would be a rebate. The town cannot afford to clean woodland, and attention should be given solely to the shade trees on the streets and trees in the residential parts of the town.

Mr. S. S. Symmes urged that only the $5000 be spent in order to get the rebate. Later more money could be voted if necessary. There was grave danger of voting too much. Expend just what the State requires, and await developments, as it is going to be a long fight of from five to ten years. He moved to amend by reducing the amount to $6,731.78, so as to keep within the requirements of the State and thus secure the rebate.

Mr. Allen Chamberlain was opposed to Mr. Symmes' amendment. He had been over the figures of the Tree Warden and knew just what was required, and he did not approve of appropriating one half now and the remainder in July. We should plan for the future and in order to do this the money asked for would be Important Decision to Winchester.

A decision just announced by the Supreme Court is to the effect that former Walnut street between Main and Washington streets, taken a few years ago for a state parkway, is in effect a public street and not wholly a reserved parkway over which the park commission has complete control. If the mill pond is ever filled and the land built upon, each lot facing the parkway is entitled to a separate entrance to the parkway just as if it were a public street. It may be remembered that when Walnut street was taken for a parkway, certain rules and regulations were imposed upon abutters which took away from them certain rights and easements they were entitled to in the street. In the case of the mill pond property, no damages were awarded and the state declined to pay a dollar. A suit ensued and substantial damages were awarded in the Superior Court and a decision has been rendered by the Supreme Court which takes away the full control of this portion of the parkway heretofore assumed by the Metropolitan Park Commission. Would not it have been better for all concerned if the state had recognized the abutters' rights in Walnut street in the first place, paid something for them and controlled the situation? As the matter stands now, the state has lost its contention that no property has been damaged, it has to pay a substantial damage and cost of the court, besides having established that it cannot cut off entrance and abutters' rights to the mill pond property along Walnut street even if Walnut street has been taken for a parkway. Probably the amount of money each side has paid out in this case would have given the state full control of the future development of the part of the mill pond in question. Now the state has no control whatever of the situation.

The Billboard Nuisance.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The agitation now under way against the intrusion of advertising billboards facing Boston Common suggests the importance of an equally determined effort to stamp out this growing nuisance here in Winchester before it makes any further headway.

The billboards around the pond north of the Center convert an otherwise attractive spot into an eyesore, forced upon the attention of the traveling public, and hardly in keeping with the scenic reputation of the town as a high class residential suburb. The Siegel billboard on Washington street is a possible forerunner of what may follow in other parts of the town, wherever a landowner can be found willing to rent the use of a vacant lot.

It is time that some definite action be taken, either by helping create sentiment in favor of a heavy state tax on all such billboards, or against the patronizing of firms which insist on imposing these hideous monstrosities upon us wherever they can find a particularly conspicuous spot, cheapening the tone of public thoroughfares and incidentally the value of adjoining residential sections. If the concerns that bid for public patronage in this manner should find that the result was to drive away instead of encourage trade in the communities affected, it would have much more practical effect than polite protests in the press, or committees sent to beg the removal of these nuisances as a favor.

Public sentiment ought to be developed for vigorous action, whatever the specific plan found to be wisest, and I earnestly hope that leading citizens of Winchester will take the matter up.

Yours truly,

HAYES ROBBINS,
30 Lebanon street.

The Second Congregational Church of Winchester.

Tuesday, March 13, 1906, will be reckoned a red letter day for Winchester Congregationalists. At the Bethany Chapel on Cross street, Winchester Highlands, a Council of Congregational Churches and delegates met at the joint invitation of committees of the First Congregational Church and the Highland Chapel. The committee of the First Cong. Church was made up as follows: E. Lawrence Barnard, Rev. Joshua Coit, A. S. F. Kirby, Rev. Frederick H. Means, Harrison Parker. The committee from the Bethany Chapel included: Mrs. Henry Smalley, Rufus Bridges, John Park, Justin L. Parker, Mrs. John Rice. The day for the event was all that could be desired, and at 3 o'clock Rev. Joshua Coit, Secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, called the Council to order and read the letter-missive, conveying the invitation to the Council at the conclusion of the evening services adjourn sine die. The programme for the evening, as presented by the committee, having been approved, a recess was taken.

A bountiful collation had been prepared by the ladies of the Second Congregational Church, and the members of the Council and invited guests were most hospitably cared for.

The public exercises of the evening took place at 7 o'clock, the Moderator, Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., presiding. After the reading of the records by the scribe, the Moderator announced that the Second Congregational Church had been duly organized, and heartily welcomed the church to the fellowship of the churches.

The hymn "I Love Thy Kingdom, Lord" was sung and Rev. Vincent Ravi, Pastor of the Methodist Church of Winchester, offered the prayer of invocation. The scripture was read by Rev. Dr. Macfarland, Scribe of the Council, and SECOND CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, CROSS STREET.

Council, Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., was chosen Moderator, and Rev. Charles S. Macfarland, Ph.D., of Malden, Scribe. After a fervent prayer by the Moderator, the roll was called and sixteen churches of the Woburn Conference were found to be represented. Besides these, Rev. Daniel March, D. D., of Woburn, and Rev. Messrs. Adriance, Coit, Guttererson and Means of Winchester, and the Baptist and Methodist Churches of Winchester were present as members of the Council.

Rev. D. Augustine Newton, pastor of the First Congregational Church, set forth the connection of the Mother Church with the new organization, its hearty sympathy with the new movement, as shown in uniting with the new enterprise in calling a Council, and in the aid, both material and spiritual, which for years had been given the work at the Highlands.

The Moderator then called for a statement from the new organization, and Mr. John Park, the clerk, read the minutes of the various meetings which had been held among them, that of Jan. 23, 1906, when it was voted that a church be organized, that of Jan. 30, 1906, when a creed and covenant was adopted and the name selected—"The Second Congregational Church of Winchester, Massachusetts," and the meeting of March 3, 1906, when the church was fully organized. The creed and covenant, and the by-laws which had been adopted were also read to the Council. The record showed the following as officers of the new church, which is organized without a parish: Deacons, Justin L. Parker for four years, William H. Huber for three years. The other two deacons to constitute the board of deacons are to be elected later. T. H. Kelley was elected Sunday School Superintendent. It was stated that of the charter members from other churches, 23 were from the First Cong. Church, Winchester, 3 from the Baptist Church of Winchester, 2 from the Methodist Church of Winchester, 4 from the Methodist Church of Woburn, 1 from the First Cong. Church of Woburn.

At the Communion service to be held next Sunday morning at the Chapel, 34 are to be received by letter, and 20 by confession, making the total membership of the new church to start with, fifty-four.

This is certainly a most promising beginning for the new church, and is the result of the movement which began 22 years ago, when the Bethany Society was organized, leading a little later to the erection of the present house of worship, which was dedicated Sept. 5, 1887.

After all the information called for by the Council had been given, the following resolution was adopted: "Moved, that this Council, in accordance with the letter missive of invitation, approves the steps already taken looking toward the formation of a church, and that it proceed to the organization and recognition of a church at Winchester Highlands, the name of the church to be The Second Congregational Church of Winchester, Mass."

The motion having unanimously passed, the Moderator then announced that the church had been duly organized. The next business before the Council was the examination of the Pastor Elect, Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight, who gave an account of his religious experience and early preparation for the ministry. A child brought up in an earnest Christian family, with father and grandfather ministers of the gospel, he had, when twelve years old, united with the Presbyterian Church at Englewood, N. J. His advanced studies were pursued at Yale College, and his theological preparation at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, whence he graduated in 1884. He had engaged in Home Missionary work while a student, and after his graduation from the Seminary spent some time as a missionary in Turkey. Returning to America, he had been for ten years settled over a church at Closter, N. J. Following this account of his religious life and previous ministerial work, he read a carefully written statement of his religious belief. This showed a clear, unswerving faith in the great doctrines as held by the orthodox churches. Entire satisfaction was expressed by the Council in the examination, and it was unanimously voted to approve of the candidate, and a committee was chosen to arrange with the pastor and people the programme for the evening.

The records were then read by the scribe, and it was voted that the Council, Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., and Marion M. Rice rendered the solo, "Beautiful Land of Beulah."

Then followed the Service of Recognition of the new church. Rev. D. Augustine Newton brought the greetings of the Mother Church, the First Congregational Church of Winchester. He expressed the gratitude he felt for this happy occasion. He reviewed briefly the first beginnings of the work at the Highlands, in the early meetings, then the erection of the chapel, still later of his own experience in teaching the Bible Class on Sunday afternoon each month in the Sunday School. Then followed the enlarging of the work, the adding of new departments to the work, and the gradual development of the work until the present church organization was reached. He expressed his rejoicing that the Mother Church viewed the result with no bitterness, but sent out its members to the new church with a hearty good-will and the prayer for the richest blessings upon the new movement. At the same time the step meant a large amount of sacrifice both by the Mother Church and the members of the new church. It was not easy to take letters from the Church home of many years, full of holiest associations, nor was it less easy for the Mother Church to give up the consecrated people whose fellowship it prized so highly. Notwithstanding this he voiced the satisfaction of himself and the Mother Church over the new movement, and thought that the future was one full of hope and promise. As an evidence of love he called attention to the fact that the electrical equipment of the new church was a gift of the Mother Church, that the beautiful new Individual Communion set was the gift of one of the beloved ladies of the First Church, that a special hymn had been written for the occasion by a member of the First Church, and that it was ready also with financial assistance, and would give the new enterprise $250 this year. In concluding he said, "our hearts are with you. We shall pray for you as we know you will pray for us." He would conclude with the Aaronic Benediction: "The Lord bless you and keep you; the Lord make His face shine upon you and be gracious unto you; the Lord lift up His countenance upon you and give you peace."

The greetings from the Woburn Conference were voiced by Rev. B. Alfred Dumm, Ph.D., of Stoneham. He first felicitated the Mother Church on her generosity in giving away so many choice members to the new body, beside other gifts bestowed. This sacrifice however could not help but make the First Church all the richer. On behalf of the Woburn Conference he brought the recognition and hearty welcome of the Conference. This he was empowered to do, since the whole body of churches of the Conference was invited to take part in the council. He would emphasize the spirit of evangelism and the spirit of unity. This had already been shown in the participation of other denominations in the early history, in the after growth, and now the participation of other denominations in this council. He welcomed the new church to the new question of church union in which members of Congregational, United Brethren and Methodist Protestant bodies were now taking part. He would welcome them to the new social life of the church. He closed by bidding them God-speed and praying the blessing of God to rest on them continually.

Rev. Wolcott Calkins, D. D., pastor of the Montvale church, itself until this time the youngest church of the conference, brought the greetings of the village. He confessed to a little disturbance, which used to be called in the family "getting the nose out of joint." His church at Montvale has been the baby. He was glad there was a new baby and a big baby. Continuing in a serious vein, he said, "you have the most precious institution in the world, except this Church as Jesus sees it. You fifty-four people, in your Christian work and fellowship ought to be as one. You would be a great power in the Conference."

Rev. Frank S. Hunnewell of Reading gave the right hand of fellowship to Mr. Dwight, heartily welcoming him to the circle of churches and pastors. Rev. S. Winchester Adriance then read the following hymn which he had written for the occasion, and which was heartily sung by the congregation.

CAPT. PAUL B. BADGER,
Who will be the captain of the High School boys' ball team.

Mr. Gurners overlooked, thinking God that another wireless station had been set up on these hills to send messages everywhere in the world.

After a solo by Miss Marion Munroe Rice, the service of installation of Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight occurred. The sermon was preached by Rev. D. Augustine Newton on "Some Essentials of a Church's Life," from Rev. 2:1. The first paraphrase was a Ministry clothed with strength and authority. The congregation of the Church that God had directed his co-servant servant to the pastoral office in a church. The second essential of success was a light-giving people. "In this need not a ways of brilliant but in a way of service, they are fulfilling in their mission, to shine." He referred to the usefulness of the member of the new church, who for years had faithfully rung the bell, summoning the people to prayer and praise. The third essential to success in a church's life is the Lord in the midst of the church. Without this divine presence nothing is avail to bring success.

The venerable Dr. Daniel March of Woburn, offered the Prayer of Installation, a prayer so rich and tender, so strong in faith and love, that a hush of sacred awe seemed to brood over the people. The charge to the Pastor was given by Rev. Stephen Norton, D.D. He laid stress on the fact that the chief business of a minister was to preach the Word. "You may have a hundred minor duties, but a minister's chief duty is to get ready for next Sunday. For it is a wonderful message which the preacher has to give. There are three kinds of preachers: a preacher you can listen to, a preacher you can't listen to, and a preacher you can't listen to." He charged the pastor to be tried every Monday morning. He urged him to be a good pastor, as well as a preacher, and spoke of the great privilege of it. "Take these souls and make them stones in a great temple." He wanted him to stay long with the Church. "We don't want any short pastorate here. We want to come back 20 years hence and find you still pastor." In closing he referred beautifully to the benediction influence of the mere presence of Dr. March in the streets of Woburn.

Rev. Joshua Coit gave the Charge to the People. The pastor had been with them and they already knew his worth. He urged the people to be ready to follow the pastor, and to rally around him in his work, and so make this a strong church. He described a composite photograph, as commonly taken in photographs, and asked "what is the composite picture of this Church as Jesus sees it. You fifty-four people, in your Christian work and fellowship ought to be as one. You would be a great power in the Conference."

Rev. Frank S. Hunnewell of Reading gave the right hand of fellowship to Mr. Dwight, heartily welcoming him to the circle of churches and pastors. Rev. S. Winchester Adriance then read the following hymn which he had written for the occasion, and which was heartily sung by the congregation.

HYMN

THE COMMUNION OF THE SAINTS.
Written for this occasion by the Rev. S. Winchester Adriance, and dedicated to the Second Congregational Church of Winchester.
Tune, "Ellerton."
God of our fathers, by whose love divine
Thy Church hath ever been guided on its way,
Whom our path with heavenly peace dost shine,
Turning our night unto Thy matchless day.
Upon the many lives together bound
The largeness of Thy Spirit here bestow,
In our communion may true love be found,
The fellowship of Thy dear Church below.

Written for the occasion of the High School boys' ball team.
Sounded and source of love and conquering might.
Let each be ever true to his deep spirit,
To win the love and sympathy of his deep spirit.
To be, to bear, to go where duty calls,
That so the world in a hour and day may love,
Be the result, might a little less a while,
By this may every church its mission prove!

The exercises closed with the benediction by Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight.

Farewell Party

Mrs. Joseph Stone, who is soon to leave town and make her home in Esom, N. H., where Mr. Stone has purchased a farm, was given a pleasant little farewell party on Friday afternoon by Mrs. Edward M. Messenger and Mrs. Dr. Hammond, at the Messenger home. A number of old friends who have enjoyed each other's society with Mrs. Stone for about 20 years were present. The features were whist and sociability. When the prizes were awarded, Mrs. Stone, although not having the highest score, was awarded the first prize—a beautiful silver fern dish—which was contributed by those present. Words could not come to express her surprise and thanks, so a gentleman present responded for Mrs. Stone. It was given as a loving remembrance to the many pleasant times enjoyed with the "Hill-crofts." Mrs. Charles Chapman, who has been quite a lucky player this season, again captured the first player's prize, a beautiful Bohemian compote, and Mrs. Hammond the consolation, a bouquet of violets. After a dainty collation the guests departed with many happy wishes for the future of their old friend.

Calumet Club Notes.

Owing to the occurrence of the club-dinner and of various town meetings the following modification of the bowling schedule will take effect beginning with March 16:

Friday, March 16	8 vs. 10, 3 vs. 6
Wed. "	21 vs. 8, 5 vs. 9
Thurs. "	22 vs. 11, 1 vs. 9
Fri. "	23 vs. 8, 7 vs. 10

Ladies night will be observed Tuesday evening, March 20th. The entertainment will be provided by Mr. Edward P. James of Boston, who will give an exhibition of sleight of hand. Mr. James is considered one of the best amateurs in this section. He appeared here a few years ago, and will be remembered with pleasure by all who saw him at that time. At the close of the entertainment refreshments will be served.

Ladies afternoon at the club on next Friday, March 23rd, will consist of bowling, cards and pool. This will be a pleasing innovation to the ladies, many of whom have expressed a desire to use the alleys and pool tables. Tea will be served during the afternoon. The committee in charge is: Mrs. Mott A. Cummings, Mrs. D. Nelson Skillings, Mrs. Henry Weed, Mrs. Frank Cutting and Mrs. Fred Clark.

Mr. James Theodore Howe, father of Mrs. George Adams Woods of this town, died at the home of his daughter yesterday afternoon of heart trouble. He was 66 years of age, his home being in Dorchester, and he had not been in good health for some time. Funeral services will probably be held in Dorchester on Sunday.

TOWN MEETING.

necessary. He knew of a citizen who had spent $2000 on his place, while his neighbor had neglected his trees. Was not the man who had spent his large sum entitled to some protection?

Mr. H. F. Johnson did not believe the Tree Warden needed so much money. Clean off every brown tail in town and we will have them back again in swarms. Some persons were going crazy over the matter, and he would refuse to vote for the money asked for. He criticized the men who cleaned the trees. They smoked and loafed when they should be working, and thus was the money frittered away. It was an outrage. The trees that were cleaned this year would require the same treatment next year, and so on from year to year. The town cannot stand the expense, and he did not believe the State had money enough to reimburse the cities and towns. He moved to amend Mr. Symmes' motion by making the amount $1000 less.

Mr. W. L. Tuck accused the deputy Tree Warden of engineering the appropriation through the Appropriations Committee of which he was a member. He was opposed to granting the sum asked for.

Mr. Marcus B. May for the committee denied that the deputy Tree Warden had done anything to influence the committee. He did not vote on the matter when it came up, neither did he take part in the debate.

Mr. Lewis Parkhurst spoke in favor of the larger sum. The residential section should be cleaned up and the moths held in check. Neglect the trees and the town would become a barren desert and nobody would want to come here to reside. He favored supporting the Tree Warden by giving him all he asked for, and then more. The situation is too serious to trifle with.

Mr. James H. Winn would gladly vote for $20,000 if there was any assurance of suppressing the moths. Despite all the work done, the moths were as thick as ever. The residential trees can be cleaned, but it is impossible to care for the woodlands. They cannot be exterminated. The Almighty God has got to take hold and keep them in check.

Mr. H. D. Murphy and others supported the Tree Warden, and after voting down the amendments, the original motion as asked for by Mr. Guild was passed by a large majority.

The following motion offered by Mr. J. H. Carter was also rejected:

Provided, however, that no sum shall be expended during the present calendar year in excess of the maximum amount which the town will receive back from the Commonwealth, the 80 per cent. rebate as provided by law.

APPROPRIATIONS.

Poor, $4600.
Health Department, $1000.
Water works, $6700 be transferred from water rates to water department maintenance.

That the balance of Water Rates not otherwise appropriated be transferred to Water Department Construction.

Memorial Day, $250.
Indexing town records, $350.

SALARIES.

Collector of Taxes	$1400
Town Treasurer	850
Town Auditor	750
Registrars of Voters	100
Inspector of Animals	100
Inspector of Plumbing	300

The item appropriating $500 for the salaries of the Assessors was laid on the table until the next meeting, as was also the $1200 salary for the combined office of Town Clerk, Assistant Water Registrar, Clerk of Sewer Board, Board of Assessors, Board of Selectmen, and Registrars of Voters.

In connection with the latter, Selectman Woods said the Selectmen had voted to hire their own clerk.

On motion of Selectman Rowe the recommendation of the Appropriations Committee that all fees received by the town officials as such, be paid by them to the town, was laid on the table.

TRANSPORTING SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The School Committee were authorized to expend whatever sum was necessary in transporting school children residing in remote points to and from the public schools.

TOWN COUNSEL.

The Selectmen were authorized to employ a Town Counsel and defend and settle suits and claims against the town.

CIVIL ENGINEER.

The Selectmen, Water and Sewer Boards were authorized to employ jointly, a civil engineer, the expense to be divided pro rata.

UNPAID TAXES.

Voted, that on all taxes assessed for the year 1906, which remain unpaid at the close of business, on Oct. 31, 1906 interest shall be charged from Nov. 1, 1906, until such taxes are paid, at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum, such interest to be added to and be a part of such taxes.

JURY LIST.

The jury list as prepared by the Selectmen and printed in the STAR several weeks ago was adopted, with the exception of taking from the list the names of W. H. Maynard and William Adriance.

NEW FIRE ENGINE HOUSE.

On motion of Engineer Symmes the following article was referred to a committee of five to report at a future meeting: To purchase or take a lot of land or make use of any land now owned by the town on which to erect a Fire Engine house, furnish and equip same, raise and appropriate money therefor, or sell any land now owned by the town and appropriate the proceeds thereof for above mentioned purposes.

FLAG POLE.

It was voted to appropriate $400 to purchase and erect a flag pole on the common.

WYMAN SCHOOLHOUSE.

The article to raise and appropriate money to be expended for the improvement of the heating and ventilating appliances in the Wyman schoolhouse was ordered.

In considering this matter the Appropriations Committee made the following recommendation:

"It appears that a new heating and ventilating plant at a cost of about $3500 was installed in the Wyman school about five years ago. Complaint is now made that in extremely cold weather it is difficult to heat the Wyman school, owing to the peculiar construction of the indirect heating apparatus and to the condition of the boilers. The committee is unanimously of the opinion that the School Board out of their appropriation can make such repairs as will be necessary in the Wyman school without the necessity of a large appropriation. The committee understands that there are at present in the Prince school certain rooms which are available for the older pupils in the Wyman school, and that since it will probably be necessary in the near future to rebuild the Wyman School, it would be inexpedient to expend a large sum of money upon that building at the present time."

Mr. Carpenter of the School Board Monday evening asked for $1500. Present conditions were a menace to the children because of lack of heat and the unsanitary condition of the building. The boilers were worn out and one was cracked, thus making the heating unsafe.

The meeting, however, coincided with the views of the Appropriations Committee by refusing the $1500 asked for by Mr. Carpenter.

The meeting then adjourned to next Monday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

NOTES.

Selectman Wood's motion that $100 be appropriated as salary for inspector of wires was laid on table. Mr. Woods did not think the electrician of the fire department competent to do the work required, and that a first class man at a good salary would be required. Mr. Parkhurst of the Appropriations Committee recommended the fire department man as he was informed that he was competent. Thus the matter rests.

The combined Clerkship will probably receive its quietus at the next meeting, as the scheme recommended by the special committee has failed as a whole. The Selectmen have taken the initiative by voting to employ its own clerk. The motion to lay on the table was, however, for the purpose of giving the several departments an opportunity to get together and consider the question.

A determined attempt will be made at the meeting of next Monday evening to rescind the vote passed at a special town meeting whereby all street, water, sewer and park work should be under the control of one superintendent.

The matter of petitioning the General Court for an act under which the Boards of Water and Sewer Commissioners, and their duties may be consolidated will also receive considerable attention.

The most important article yet to be acted upon is that relating to establishing a municipal lighting plant. A strong committee of business men should be appointed to consider the matter if any action, at all, is taken.

The next meeting will probably finish the business.

Taken as a whole the two meetings thus far held are strong arguments in favor of the old-fashioned town meeting. The debates have been clean and whole some.

Bowling.

The Calumet team lost its opportunity to defeat the leaders in the Boston pin league and take a rise in position itself on Tuesday evening. The leaders in the league, B. A. A., got just enough points to warrant their winning the honors for this season, taking three of the four. The score.

W. H. S. Notes.

Besides the regular race for the Lawson Canoe Trophy this spring, plans are being considered for double and single canoe races, and swimming races, with a relay swimming team race between neighboring High Schools.

The tank for the hot water to be used in the showers is now up and it looks as if the baths might be installed in a short time.

As the basket ball season is now over, indoor base ball practice will begin. The track team soon expects to be able to use the outdoor track on Manchester Field.

This spring the manager of the track team intends to secure dual meets with the schools of the surrounding towns. A triangular meet between Winchester H. S., Arlington H. S. and Cambridge H. S. is under consideration.

Members of the track team who have won their "W" are: Barnard, Parker, Hilton, Cummings, Carpenter, Kelley, Sheridan.

Pictures of the hockey and track teams have been printed and are very satisfactory. These pictures may be had from the managers of the teams for fifty cents.

Stereopticon slides of the 1905-1906 High School teams are being made. Slides of the foot ball, basket ball, hockey and track teams will be shown at the lecture at the High School tonight.

The lecture last Monday was on the "Alhambra" by Miss Susan F. J. Brown, one of the corps of our High School teachers. This was a very interesting and instructive lecture. This lecture was followed by an illustrated recital of Scott's "Lady of the Lake," by the members of the class of 1908 in Room 14. This was very well done, no member of the class making a mistake.

On account of loss of sneakers and other articles of clothing from the dressing rooms, the doors will hereafter be kept locked.

The Canoeing Season Near at Hand.

The Massachusetts Interscholastic Canoe Association, of which Charles E. Richardson of Winchester is president, will hold a meeting in Boston Monday, March 19, to elect officers and arrange for a regatta on Mystic lake the latter part of May, in connection with the annual race for the Lawson trophy. It is planned to have the list of events include swimming and novelty canoe contests, singles, doubles and tandem, etc.

Dedham High now holds the trophy, having won it two seasons. It is proposed to offer another cup for the school winning the greatest number of points in the contemplated regatta, also medals of unique design for individuals.

The crew representing Winchester High will at once begin practice. The captain of the crew is Harold T. Webber and the coaches will be James A. Newman and F. Leroy Pratt. Webber is stroke, Ernest Symmes No. 2, and Charles Richardson No. 4. The substitutes include Archie Walling, Philip Sheridan, Philip Redfern and H. I. Gustin.

The Fortnightly.

At the meeting of The Fortnightly, March 12, $35 was appropriated for the vacation school, and $25 for the Federation Bazaar.

At the close of the business session Mrs. Rufus Herrick, chairman of the literature committee, presented Miss Caroline Ticknor, the granddaughter of the famous publisher, as the speaker of the afternoon. Miss Ticknor's subject, "Literary London," was a most fascinating theme; her experiences were entirely of a personal character, consisting of visits to the homes of Du Maurier, Dickens, Anne Thackeray Ritchie, and Jane Austen's nieces.

Miss Ticknor has a familiar colloquial habit of address which is exceedingly pleasant to listen to; her description of her visit to the home of the son of Dickens, the famous novelist, and her acquaintance with Miss Hogarth, the sister-in-law, who brought up his children after their mother's death, was of great interest.

She quoted at length from the will of Dickens: "I conjure my friends on no account to make me the subject of any monument, memorial or testimonial whatever. I rest my claim to remembrance of my country on my published works, and to the remembrance of my friends on their experience of me in addition thereto."

A luncheon at the home of Mrs. Thackeray Ritchie gave Miss Ticknor an opportunity of hearing much of the great novelist, whom his daughter strongly resembles in feature. Mrs. Ritchie described to her a party given in her childhood when Charlotte Brontë was the guest of honor, and where the Carlyles and other noted people came to do honor to the creator of Jane Eyre. But the evening was unspeakably dull, the brilliant author did not shine, and finally Thackeray overwhelmed by the dullness of the occasion, stole away to his club, leaving his guests to themselves.

Both Dickens and Thackeray are remembered in the homes of their children with undiminished love and reverence and their works cherished as most precious.

Miss Ticknor's acquaintance with Jane Austen's family was most pleasantly referred to; she described the desk upon which all those charming tales were written, and which is treasured in the home of her nieces. She found these ladies very shy, desirous not to be made the subject of curiosity, but very delightful and not at all unworthy to be the descendants of the author of "Sense and Sensibility" and "Pride and Prejudice" which have charmed us for so many years.

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

GRAPE JAM TARTLET.

The good old-fashioned pie, with two crusts and a mystery for filling not disclosed until you cut it, is not served as often as it used to be at the family table. It is even possible to keep house and set a good table and not know how to make a pie, which is one of the many proofs that housekeeping, considered the most conservative of all trades, has changed wonderfully after all. But a good pie tastes just as good now as ever, and so the pastry shell or tart with various fillings and meringues is substituted.

Some of the celebrated chefs of the country believe that pies cannot be made now as good as in the days when our foremothers made thirty or forty at a time and brought them out as occasion required, heated and served them as fresh as if newly baked. The reason, they state, is the use of canned fruit or that which has been long picked, exposed in markets, and land which is not like the home-tried land.

The grape tart illustrated is merely a shell cut from a paste made from one cup of sifted pastry flour, one-quarter teaspoon each of salt and baking powder, and one-third cup of butter. Mix with cold water and from the trimmings cut leaves and rounds and arrange like a bunch of grapes after the shell is filled with grape jam or marmalade.

Dual Track Meet—Lowell Wins 73-8.

Last Saturday night in the Lowell High School gymnasium, a dual meet was held between the Lowell and Winchester High Schools. Lowell winning by the large margin of 65 points. Winchester was unable to win a first place in any one event.

In the thirty yard dash Winchester did not get a place; in the thousand yard run, Kelley got third place for Winchester by some very pretty running and Cummings secured third place in the pole vault. In the three hundred yard run Barnard started off in the lead, with Dow of Lowell second and Cummings of Winchester third. This order was kept throughout the race, until the last lap when Dow passed Barnard and won by a foot. In this event Barnard got second place and Cummings third.

In the six hundred yard run Winchester did not get a place, and also she failed to make good in the thirty five yard hurdle race.

Carpenter secured third place in the running high jump, and Sheridan got third place in the shot put. The team race was won by Lowell.

A large crowd of Winchester people attended the meet and left on a special car with the team at 5:30, arriving in Lowell at 7:30; returning the car left Lowell at 10:30 and arrived in Winchester at 11:40.

The Winchester boys' showing was fairly good considering that there are 600 boys to pick from in the Lowell school while in Winchester the number is only about 75. Events:

30 yard dash—Won by Lew. Lowell; second, Raymond, Lowell; third, Dow, Lowell. Time, 4 sec.

1000 yard run—Won by Gleason, Lowell; second, Pease, Lowell; third, Kelley, Winchester. Time, 20:52.35 sec.

Base Ball Team '06.

Last Friday evening in the High School gymnasium the High School team played their last game of the season, defeating their rivals the Winchester Athletic Association by a score of 27-23, and thereby winning the championship of the town.

The game was fast and hard and kept the spectators on edge throughout both halves.

In the first half Winchester A. A. was ahead 10-0, but the High School boys got together and at the end of the second half they were victorious over the heavy fast Athletic team.

The work of Webber of the High School was excellent and A. King did well for the A. A. team.

Great credit is due Capt. Mobbs for his work in turning out one of the best teams the High School has ever seen; credit must also be given Manager Larivee for his able management of the team.

Base Ball Team '06.

Last Monday Captain Badger called the High School base ball team out for indoor practice. A large number of candidates responded, forty six men in all. From this squad two teams will be picked to play against each other as soon as the ground is dry enough. From these two teams will be picked the first High School team.

This year the school will not employ a coach, as the finances of the Athletic Association are low.

Capt. Badger is pleased with the large number of candidates who have reported for practice and it looks as if there might be a winning team turned out this spring.

Following is a list of the candidates: Badger (Capt.), Cummings, Donovan, Donahue, Witmer, G. Parker, Sheridan, Carpenter, Webber, Hunt, Caulfield, Little, Richardson, Symmes, Robinson, Symmes, Atherton, H. Parker, Fultz, Grant, W. Witmer, Ames, Foster, Cameron, Welch, DeBussy, Pond, K. Atherton, Hilton, Hudson, Thompson, Dotten, Kelley, Collings, Lane, Murphy, Foley, Simonds, Gustin, Higgins, Hamilton, Belleville, Pettis, H. Cummings, King, Wingate.

A Manifest Absurdity

Mayor Fitzgerald, of Boston, must be destitute of a sense of humor, or he would laugh at some of his own propositions. He favors the passage of a bill giving the cities and towns in the metropolitan district an organization which shall have some control over the enormous expenditures for metropolitan parks, water and sewerage—even though his power is no more than negative upon proposed outlays. The bill is reasonable, but up jumps Mr. Fitzgerald to say that if there is to be such a council, he must be its chairman or he won't play. When we remember how near Boston has come to electing some very bad men to office, and think what may happen in the future, it is not to be wondered at that the other cities and towns object to a statutory provision for making the mayor of Boston chairman of the council.—[Cambridge Chronicle.]

Leicester K. Ely.

Leicester Kent Ely, aged 53 years, died at the Studley house on Grove street on Sunday last of paresis. He was a familiar figure to many and had a large circle of acquaintances in this town, having made his home here at the Studley's for the past five or six years. Mr. Ely was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., of Henry Gilbert and Mary Putnam Ely. For many years he was engaged in the leather business in Boston under the name of L. K. Ely. He was married in 1878 to Miss Minnie Constock of Brooklyn, N. Y., who survives him. He retired from business some nine years ago and had been ill for a number of years, his mind having weakened. Besides his wife he leaves one sister, Mrs. George M. Swift, of New York City.

Funeral services were held from his late residence on Tuesday morning, being of a private nature. Rev. J. W. Suter of the Episcopal Church officiated. The remains were taken to New York for burial in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn.

The action of Mayor Barton in vetoing the order granting use of the city auditorium to the High school junior class is consistent with his attitude while a member of the board of aldermen. He strongly opposed at all times cutting rates of city hall rentals for any purpose.—[Melrose Reporter.]

"SAVED MY LIFE"

—That's what a prominent druggist said of Scott's Emulsion a short time ago. As a rule we don't use or refer to testimonials in addressing the public, but the above remark and similar expressions are made so often in connection with Scott's Emulsion that they are worthy of occasional note. From infancy to old age Scott's Emulsion offers a reliable means of remedying improper and weak development, restoring lost flesh and vitality, and repairing waste. The action of Scott's Emulsion is no more of a secret than the composition of the Emulsion itself. What it does is to do through nourishment—the kind of nourishment that cannot be obtained in ordinary food. No system is too weak or delicate to retain Scott's Emulsion and gather good from it.

We will send you a sample free.

Be sure that this picture in the form of a label is on the wrapper of every bottle of Emulsion you buy.

Municipal Lighting Plant.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

If you can allow the space I believe the following taken from the report of the Municipal Light Board of the town of North Attleboro for the year ending January 30, 1906, would be interesting to the light consumers of Winchester who are looking for information on Municipal Light other than that presented by the agents and attorneys of the Edison Light Company.

Yours respectfully,

FRANK EUGENE BARNARD.

There has been installed the past year 49 new meters, making a total of 265 commercial meters, with the equal of 10,113 16 c. p. lamps.

We are pleased to call attention to, and the town has reason to be proud of, the increase in revenue from the commercial lighting, the increase during the past year being over $8 per cent.

The cash receipts for the commercial service alone more than pays the entire cost of operating expenses, maintenance and repairs, interest on bonds and notes, and is as follows:

Receipt of lighting in cash	$13,830 00
Gross operating expenses	$11,010 00
Interest on bonds	2,000 00
Interest on notes	457 71
	$13,517 71

This does not make any allowance whatever for street lights, which at a price as low as 4 cents each per night would bring in over $9,000 revenue. This sum, or more, would have to be paid to any private ownership of this plant, and taxpayers can readily see that this would be an extra direct tax for them to pay yearly.

In last year's report attention was called to the fact that the use of the commercial light was up to the full capacity of the plant for production, and in the rush season when the factories were working nights, some of the street lights had to be shut off to help out the commercial service.

Your Board have given some study and attention to the crude oil plants, which are coming more and more favorably into use for producing electricity, and have placed them in comparison with the steam plants hitherto almost universally employed. The great saving in cost as between coal and oil and their results, as well as the general convenience and economy, as claimed by the oil plant, appeals strongly to those who have looked well into the matter of generating electricity for light and power use.

The town of Mansfield, Mass., about two years ago, put in a plant of this character, and the report of their commissioners is that they have continuously and satisfactorily produced electricity for light and power, and are now contemplating adding more equipment of this same kind for additional light and power. In making provisions to furnish power to those who desire its use it would be well to carefully consider the advantages and economy of the oil plant for this purpose.

By a new law passed last year Chap. 410 Acts 1905 your Board is obliged to include in the amount asked for appropriation for the ensuing year, a sum for depreciation which shall equal 6 per cent. of the total cost of the plant since it was built. This, with other requirements of the act, are so manifestly unjust as against the best interests of all Municipal Plants, that it would seem that its immediate repeal will be demanded.

Quoting from the Hon. Albert E. Taylor, Mayor of Chicopee, Mass., who says: "Whether or not the imputation be deserved, it is the opinion of most officials in cities and towns where municipal lighting plants are established, that the laws governing and regulating such plants, indicate too plainly the fine hand of the attorneys of the more or less notorious 'Gag Lobby' at the State House. The worst of these thus far incurred, is Chapter 410 of the Acts of 1905. To arrive at its full understandings and effects will not be so easy, as it is so drawn as to puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer. To my mind, the provisions of the law, if observed, would so throttle every existing municipal plant which has recently built up a business supplying light to private consumers, that its continual use would be impossible."

In accordance with this Chapter 410, Acts of 1905, we are obliged to ask for an appropriation this ensuing year as follows:

Maintenance	$11,500 00
Sinking fund	1,000 00
Interest on bonds	2,000 00
Interest on notes	457 71
Note due 1906	695 00
5 per cent. depreciation on total	4,479 00

This less the estimated receipts of $13,830, leaves a total of $5,861 71, for which the Assessors must make provision by taxation, also for the construction we ask $2,300.

School Statistics.

The following facts from the latest report of the state board of education shows the amount of money appropriated for the support of public schools for each thousand dollars of valuation in the following places:

Name of place.	Amount	Standing
Everett	$6.49	1
Wakefield	6.07	2
Malden	5.88	3
Chelsea	5.64	4
Revere	5.45	5
Somerville	5.35	6
Melrose	5.17	7
Arlington	4.95	8
Medford	4.86	9
Winchester	4.64	10
Lynn	4.39	11
Belmont	4.23	12
Cambridge	4.11	13
Winthrop	3.79	14
Watertown	3.66	15
Newton	3.26	16
Brookline	1.98	17

It appears from this tabulation of the seventeen places mentioned as a basis of comparison of school expenses, seven appropriate less for each thousand dollars of their valuation than Winchester. The amount for Middlesex county is $4.71, for the state $3.83.

Cooking Lecture.

The second cooking lecture in the series of four demonstration lectures being given at the Calumet Club by the Woman's Guild of the Church of the Epiphany was held on Tuesday afternoon. The attendance was even larger than that of a week ago, and Miss Howard confined her talk to "chaffing dish receipts and cake." Several chaffing dishes were loaned by the ladies for the preparation of the dishes, and a number of excellent receipts were made by Miss Howard and sampled by those present. Miss Howard also made cake during the lecture, using the gas stove for the demonstration. The next lecture will be upon salads, rolls and sandwiches.

Mr. Edmund H. Garrett is expected to return from his year abroad about May first. He will bring with him many new pictures and a lecture entitled "Joan of Arc," made during his travels last summer.

Newsy Paragraphs

Three men visited Winchester a few days ago with a wagon load of doubtful eggs, now thought to have cost about 9 cents a dozen, in storage. Leaving the load on a side street, the men filled baskets with the most likely looking eggs and went from door to door, saying their wares had just been collected from private henneries on the outskirts of the town. The price asked was 25 cents per dozen, and sales were easy and quick. The load was soon disposed of and the men disappeared.

The Cost of Electric Lights Under Municipal Ownership.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

An interesting study of the cost of incandescent lighting to the consumer under municipal ownership conditions in Massachusetts was recently made by the Boston Edison Company, and it was found that in almost every case the municipal customer was paying more for each lamp hour burned than as though he purchased central station electricity at the Edison rates. Of twelve plants examined, only one charged less than 75 cent per lamp hour, nine charged over 8 cent, and all exceeded the Edison rate of 7 cent given to mercantile houses, offices, etc., burning lamps two hours or over per day. The average Edison rate for residence lighting is 8 cent per 16 candle power lamp hour, and only two of the municipal plants renew lamps free of charge when they have passed their useful life. The efficiency of the municipal lamps selected at random was poorer by from 10 to 18 per cent than the Edison lamps; that is the former consume much more current for the same light giving power. The best central stations renew lamps free, and this tends to prevent keeping blackened bulbs in service after they become depreciated.

The modern consumer prefers to pay for actual light and power rather than for current lost in inefficient apparatus, and the results quoted above are certainly significant in their bearing upon the municipal ownership problem.

CALUMETS DINE.

Annual Dinner a Great Success.

The annual dinner of the Calumet Club, held at the club house last evening, was a decided success, despite the worst storm of the winter. The members began to gather at the club as early as half past five, and by six o'clock the house was well filled. When dinner was announced, about one hundred and sixty members and guests sat down. The storm kept some away, as the committee had about two hundred applications for tickets. The tables were very attractive, trimmed with candelabra and large vases of pink, the latter being the gift of Mrs. J. H. Dwinell, the wife of the president, to the members of the club. During the dinner an orchestra furnished music.

After an excellent dinner the tables were removed, and Dr. Heber Bishop gave some very fine pictures of hunting and fishing, interspersed with comic scenes with his biography. The pictures were exceptionally good, showing trout and salmon fishing, quail shooting at Pinehurst, and two very interesting views of shooting moose. The biography pictures were explained by Dr. Bishop as they were shown, and the hunters in the audience could not see enough of them.

Following the biography Mr. W. H. W. Bicknell gave two solos which were received with great applause by the company. Mr. Bicknell was followed by Dr. J. Churchill Hinde, who was also called upon for an encore, and it was with reluctance that the gathering broke up at the close of his selections. Mr. Joshua Phippen presided at the piano for both gentlemen. There was no speakers this year, and the innovation of the biography and songs proved a pleasing alternative to the usual program.

The Boston & Maine R. R. it is reported have about completed plans for an immense repair shop somewhere within the confines of the city of Medford. It is said that the plant when completed will be one of the finest in the world and will cost something in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

An Interesting Story About Worcester.

The following which appeared in that excellent publication the New England Magazine, entitled "Worcester's Great Opportunity," possesses considerable interest to Winchester people as the author was Mr. Frederick W. Coburn of this town. The story is handsomely illustrated and is printed in the March number:

When the will of Stephen Salisbury, who died on November 16, 1905, was opened it was discovered that he had made the Worcester Art Museum, originally founded at his prompting, his residuary legatee, and that property the value of which is estimated at between three and four millions of dollars will shortly be available for the creation of one of the largest depositories of art objects in the United States. The resources now at the disposal of the institution to which Mr. Salisbury gave largely of his thought, care and private means during the last years of his life will make it, even if no other accessions follow, one of the three or four richest museums in the United States.

The establishment in an inland New England city of an institution destined presumably to gain international as well as national fame, vitally concerns not only Worcester but this entire section. As an aid to material progress art has already become one of the vested interests of New England, since only with its assistance can the competition of other portions of the United States which have readier access to raw materials be adequately met. In a spiritual sense, too, art has become a necessary asset in order that for as many as possible existence may be commuted into living by exercise of the creative imagination.

Since the announcement of Mr. Salisbury's gift leading citizens of Worcester, in interviews given to the newspapers, have been unanimous in expressing their appreciation of the plan and of the magnificence of the opportunity which it offers not to their city alone, but to New England and to the country. As regards the final character of the museum, some have emphasized the possible material achievements, including the facilities offered by a great museum and school of industrial arts and crafts. Others have spoken seriously of the uplift to be exerted by examples of the best art of the ages in a community in which, without art, life would tend inevitably toward monotony. But there has been no dissent from the thankfulness to the donor and the determination to execute his ideas for a comprehensive museum of fine arts.

What has already been accomplished in Worcester gives at least a hint of what may be done with the larger means now at hand. To most people the present museum, housed in a modest building in the style of the Italian Renaissance, is known, if known at all, as the scene of the summer exhibitions of paintings which for several years past have brought together each summer a good proportion of the best contemporary art from the exhibitions in the larger American cities, and have enabled the public of Worcester and the near by cities and towns to see advantageously displayed the best that is now being done in America. These summer exhibitions have acquired national celebrity, and the best painters of Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Chicago contribute to them gladly, not only on account of the prizes offered, and the chance of making sales, but also because of the certainty that their pictures will be well hung in thoroughly suitable galleries.

Although these summer art shows are a principal attraction they are by no means the sum total of accomplishments in the decade of the museum's existence. That includes the creation of a well equipped building, the creation of a promising school, the beginnings of collections in several departments and frequent minor exhibitions in various branches of the fine arts.

The institution is just about to enter upon its eleventh year. It was organized at a meeting on February 25, 1896, at which Mr. Salisbury presided and at which he announced his purpose to give to the new corporation the sum of $100,000, as well as a tract of valuable land fronting on Salisbury street and lying between Tuckerman and Lancaster streets. Plans were drawn by Stephen C. Earle, a local architect, for a building of fireproof construction, with low plinth, steps and basement of granite and with a superstructure of light brick with marble trimmings. The visitor enters the building by a recessed main entrance, having three openings each eight feet wide, and giving into an open porch seven feet wide. A corresponding doorway leads into the main staircase hall, which is of imposing dimensions and in which appears a marble and iron staircase connecting the several stories. In the basement are four rooms for classes and administration offices, and on the other floors are the usual galleries for exhibiting sculptures, prints and pictures.

The cornerstone of the museum was laid June 24, 1897, and the structure was turned over to the corporation on May 10, 1898, simultaneously with the opening of an exhibition which was arranged by cooperation of the Worcester Art Museum and the Worcester Art Society.

Since that auspicious opening the growth has been moderate and thoroughly normal. An art museum is not to be created out of hand, especially if its resources are comparatively limited at the outset. The Worcester museum was recognized as being largely experimental. The directors were trying to discover in what way they could make the institution most useful to the community. Through out the early years Mr. Salisbury was its guiding genius. The benefit of his intelligence and good taste was felt at every turn, though the scope of his intentions was not known. Hardly a day passed—so we are told by the manager of the museum, Mr. John G. Heywood—that Mr. Salisbury did not make his tour of inspection through the building. Every object in the collections he knew intimately. His frequently expressed desire was to have built up in Worcester a good all round art museum rather than one especially strong in a single department or in two or three departments.

In accordance with such wishes good beginnings in several directions were made in his lifetime. The gallery of oil paintings, for example, contains a number of notable works—among others Edmund C. Tarbell's "The Venetian Blind," one of the best pictures of a man whom some critics have come to recognize as the strongest living painter; "October Sunshine," rich and warm in tone, by Ralph A. Blakelock; Gilbert Stuart's "Mrs. Perez Morton," one of the good portraits from the earlier period of American art; Eugene Boudin's "The Port of Trouville," gray and exquisite as is this master's manner, and a very decorative "Woman Bathing," by John La Farge. These and several other works belong to the museum, and there are at this writing in the gallery pictures or collections of pictures loaned by Mrs. J. C. Bancroft, Mr. Robert C. Vose, Miss Norcross, Miss Williams, Mrs. Henry Holt, Mr. William T. Richards and Mr. Waldo Lincoln.

The other departments include the customary casts, so invaluable to students, and a large gathering of Japanese prints and books, said to be one of the strongest in this country. These are the gifts of John Chandler Bancroft. There are articles in terra cotta, glass and bronze, including a number of objects from the Troad, bought of Frank Calvert, who spent most of his life in excavating the cities of northeastern Asia Minor. An original marble head of Sappho, which was purchased in 1903, has lately been mounted and placed on exhibition. Various small collections of objects of applied art constitute at least a respectable nucleus from which to build up.

To render these departments more useful and to extend the influence of the museum in the community an art school has been started. This has a present respectable standing and excellent prospects. The instructors are Philip L. Hale, who teaches the classes in drawing from the cast and the live model; Hermann Dudley Murphy, who has charge of the painting classes, and Gustaf Rodgers, whose department is the arts and crafts. The last named instruction is something that was introduced for the first time last autumn. It bids fair to be remarkably successful.

The foregoing results have set a certain standard. From the unanimity with which a few general ideas were advanced in a recent symposium of opinions in the Worcester "Telegram," as well as from present day tendencies in museum making, it may be possible to make two or three unofficial conjectures as to the direction in which this art museum, the perfecting of which affects every bread winner in New England, may be expected to develop.

An enlargement of the physical plant is to be looked for. Plans have been considered for a structure of which the present building will be only a small part—one that will have a front of 270 feet on Salisbury street, a wing of 270 feet along Tuckerman street, and one on Lancaster street of 340 feet. The present building, which will thus be relegated to the rear side, is 120 feet long by 60 feet wide. The entire structure will cover a lot of about ninety thousand square feet, and will enclose a courtyard, offering such opportunities for decorative treatment as are found in the courtyard of the Boston Public Library.

The museum will be three stories high, with a basement for offices and workshops. No date has been set for its completion, since some of the funds consist in investments in real estate upon which it may be decided, best to realize slowly. It has been stated, however, that the new building may possibly be completed within four or five years. Whether the photometric experiments which have recently been going on at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston will be taken cognizance of is a matter that has perhaps not yet been considered. The conclusions reached by the scientists in these investigations will, no doubt, be worth examination in perfecting the plans of the Worcester museum, as of every art museum subsequently to be built. During the time needed to plan a building of such importance there will be ample opportunity for such work.

Regarding the departmental collections, one of the most frequently expressed thoughts is that the museum should be made as far as possible to supplement the industrial life of the city and of the entire section. This means specifically that good collections of the so-called minor arts should be brought together, as well as appropriate instructions in the arts of design. New England manufacturing, as is well known, not only in the textile but in other industries, is gradually accommodating itself to a new set of conditions. In the higher grades of industry it matters little if raw materials are a trifle more expensive in Worcester or Lowell than in Pittsburgh or Birmingham, for it is the city whose citizens are able to impart greatest value to the materials through exercise of artistic skill and taste that will have the advantage over the others. Prosperity by grace of the art school is judged in Worcester to be preferable to prosperity by grace of the railroad rates.

Another idea that is frequently advanced is that the Worcester museum should give more attention than most museums in this country have given to gathering the best available examples of American painting and sculpture. Few of the leading art museums, as has frequently been pointed out, have representative collections of the works of artists whose names now rank high among the world's greatest. Viewing the subject from the purely financial standpoint, an institution which thirty years ago, should have bought good canvases by George Innes, A. H. Wyant and Homer Martin would have realized largely on its purchases. There is little chance of being tricked by spurious works in this field. The prices put upon European old masters on the rare occasions when an undoubtedly genuine work comes upon the market are almost prohibitive, even for the richest of art museums. Meantime the works of several American landscape and figure painters are believed by many critics to have the promise of becoming old masters. They are often available at moderate prices, and although some of them will drop in value instead of increasing, there is no question but that a museum or an individual collecting them judiciously on a large scale is certain to find them on the average a good investment.

One of the uses to which the Salisbury millions will, apparently as a matter of course, be put, will be the creation of an art school of national standing. The educational institutions of the city are already many and famous. The museum school will be a valuable addition and will normally have the effect of bringing strong young painters, sculptors and designers to Worcester.

The attendance at the school has up to this time come mainly from local sources. Conceivably the institutions may within a few years be nationalized and incidentally rendered nearly or quite self-supporting. The establishment, for example, of resident scholarships and traveling fellowships for the best students from other places would have the immediate effect of inducing promising young people from other cities to flock to Worcester with a view to getting in line for one of the prizes.

The directorate by whom the foregoing and many other matters will have to be decided in the next few years consists at present of Daniel Merriman, president; Francis H. Dewey, vice president; Thomas H. Gage, Jr., clerk; Lincoln N. Kinnicutt, treasurer; Lyman A. Ely, George E. Francis, John G. Heywood, Nathaniel Paine, Austin S. Garver, Charlotte F. W. Buffington, Frances M. Lincoln and Helen Bigelow Merriman, directors, and John G. Heywood, manager of museum.

What with the growth of this institution in Worcester, with the textile schools in Lowell, New Bedford and other cities, the museums already well started in Providence, Hartford, Springfield, New Haven, Northampton, Brunswick and several other cities, and with the general awakening of interest in art matters, there is a likelihood that the twentieth century may find New England as prominent in the fine arts as it was preeminent in literature in the nineteenth century. Coordination of arts with industries is going on apace and life is being quickened by such activities just as it was quickened by the literary awakening of two generations ago. The problem of giving to the average man an incentive to struggle toward that form of self-mastery which produces art—a self-mastery that is the outgrowth of a vigorous individual, local and national life—is to be solved in this section. For his part in bringing forward a rationalization of American material civilization, the future is likely to be grateful to the memory of Stephen Salisbury.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M.D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 9 South Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now resembles nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 50 cents.

TRICK WITH DOMINOES.

A Feat That Will Puzzle Those Not In the Secret.

An interesting feat can be performed with the dominoes, which the operator announces as follows: "I will lay the dominoes in a line, one beside another, lying on their faces and making one black line. Now I will go into the next room, with my eyes as closely covered as you may desire. In my absence you may take from the line any number of dominoes you please provided you take them from that end which is now at the opposite end, so that, except for the change in the places of the pieces, the line is just the same as before. On my return, without unbandaging my eyes, I will tell you the number transported from one end to the other. I will do more. From the midst of these dominoes, of which you have changed the position, I will draw one which, by the addition of its spots, will tell you exactly the number which you took from right to left. After they have made the change count with your fingers—if your eyes are bandaged—the dominoes from left to right as far as the thirteenth. The spots on this thirteenth will invariably represent the number of dominoes whose position has been altered. But in forming the line originally you must have arranged the first thirteen dominoes, beginning at the left, so that the spots on the first form the number 12, of the second 11, of the third 10, and so on up to a double blank for the last and thirteenth. You place the other dominoes afterward in the order in which they happen to present themselves."

THINGS NOT TO EAT.

Among Them, According to a Medical Man, Are Baked Beans.

Abolish soup from the dinner table, eschew tea and coffee, pass the baked beans with silent contempt, beware the genuine pancake, be not lured into turning traitor to your stomach by America's common enemy, pig, be tranquil and cheerful at mealtimes, even if you are nursing a chronic grudge the rest of the time, and never, never go to bed with your stomach filled.

These are scattering fragments of a thirty-two inch shell of advice fired before the Chicago Medical society by Dr. Edwin B. Tuttle, who lectured on "When to Eat, What to Eat and How to Eat."

"Soup," declared the doctor, "is superfluous in a substantial dinner menu. So is tea and so is coffee and, in fact, any moisture except that which is naturally contained in the foods. Soup in the form of beef broth, without eggs, cereals or vegetables, would starve a dog to death in ten days. Beef tea made from the solid extract sold for the use of invalids is a mere stimulant, a non-nutritious, queer tasting temperance drink. Tea and coffee are not foods, but stimulants. They retard digestion and often cause gastric catarrh, nervousness and insomnia."

"Beans, the dried and baked variety, cooked with salt pork, are baneful. Temperance soldiers and Boston intellectuals subsist upon them to some extent. Pass them by."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Belcher Artesian Well.

The Belcher well in St. Louis is one of the famous artesian wells of the world. The boring of it was begun in the spring of 1849 by William H. Belcher, who had a sugar refinery near the river a few blocks north of where the Eads bridge now is. After the expenditure of $10,000 the well was in 1854 driven to a depth of 2,150 feet, where a flow of seventy-five gallons a minute was struck, but the water proved to be so impregnated with mineral matter that it was unfit for use in the sugar refinery, for which Mr. Belcher wanted it. It is used now only for medicinal purposes and for sanitary baths.—St. Louis Republic.

A Hostess and an Emergency.

Lady K. had sent Parnell an invitation to dinner, but Charles, who was very absent-minded with respect to social functions and unconventional in the extreme, had forgotten the right date of the party. He therefore turned up a couple of evenings afterward an hour before the time. Lady K. glad to have him on any terms, did not undress him as to his error, but hastily sent off several notes explaining the situation and asking some of her most intimate friends to help her in her emergency. She also ordered a hastily improvised dinner from a near caterer's.—Life of Parnell.

The Pottery Tree of Para.

One of the curiosities of Brazil is a tree whose wood and bark contain so much silica that they are used by potters. Both wood and bark are burned, and the ashes are pulverized and mixed in equal proportions with clay, producing a very superior ware. The tree grows to a height of 100 feet, but does not exceed a foot in diameter. The fresh bark cuts like sandstone, and when dried is brittle and hard.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his disease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in disease of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this pill, and since its introduction on the American continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Case, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be one more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Phosphoric Acid, Alkali, Ginger, Pepsin, Patented, Soda, Morphine or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called Dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

Long Beards.

Howell's "Welsh Celebrities" says: "Llewellyn had the longest beard of which we have record. When loose and flowing it fell down over his horse's shoulders almost to the animal's knees. It was of a peculiar yellow or straw color, which was all the more curious, both his parents being dark haired mountain Welsh people. Years afterward the mountain people had proverbs which referred to this freak, they often using the expression, 'About as long as Howell's beard' or 'Yellow as the whiskers of Llewellyn.'"

George Killingworth, whom Queen Mary sent to Russia in 1555 as one of her agents to Czar Ivan the Terrible, had a beard five feet three inches in length, and Count Ruloff of Poland, 1857, rejoiced in the possession of a mustache which was so long that he could not touch the ends of it with his fingers.

Sulphur.

Sulphur is a solid, nonmetallic mineral which has been known from earliest ages. It is hard, yellow and brittle and has a most offensive odor. It is found in veins or beds, mostly near active volcanoes. The imported sulphur mostly comes from Solfatara, in Sicily, but large quantities are also procured from copper and iron pyrites. These minerals are heated, and the sulphur being volatile flies off in fumes, which are conveyed by means of pipes to a condensing room. If left in the powdery state in which it condenses it is called flour of sulphur. If melted and cast into bars it is called roll sulphur.

The Arlington Gas Light Company is having numerous requests from property owners for extensions of its mains in various sections of the town and there is every prospect that gas will be very popular this year for lighting, while it is attracting the attention of more women than ever for cooking and heating now that the days of the coal furnace are numbered. The Company is anxious to accommodate property owners and the amount of extension work to be done will depend on the number of applications and the order in which they are received.

Newsy Paragraphs.

A bursting pipe at the home of Mr. C. E. Barrett, Bacon street, caused consternation Wednesday morning when the family arose. A small stream of water had been flowing the greater part of the night on the first floor which fortunately passed off into the cellar. The only damage done was to the plaster of the cellar ceiling, a portion of which fell. The street main had been blown out the day previous and the accumulation of air in the pipe caused the trouble.

GRADE CROSSING HEARING.

Adjourned Because of Absence of Interested Parties.

Many Prominent Citizens Present Deeply Disappointed.

A hearing was to have been held in the Selectmen's room last Saturday forenoon before the special commission in relation to the abolition of the grade crossing in the center of the town, but owing to the absence of G. F. Swain of the commission and W. H. Coolidge, counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad, the hearing was adjourned to April 3, at 10 a. m.

The brief session was presided over by G. W. Wiggin of the commission, and R. E. Joslin appeared for the town, and E. W. Burdett for the Boston & Northern.

Mr. Joslin said that as the matter was a most important one to the people of Winchester, he urged that the date for the next hearing be set as early as possible.

Mr. W. L. Tuck objected to the hearing being held during the day time, as it would greatly inconvenience the business men and prevent many from attending. He favored an evening session, and also advocated an early date that actual work on the crossing might be commenced as soon as possible.

Mr. John H. Carter also urged the commission to fix on an early date, that there might be no delay in the actual work.

Mr. Burdett for the Boston & Northern, did not believe undue haste was necessary. He was not ready to admit at the present time that the abolition of the crossing is not a necessity, but he did not think the situation by any means as dangerous here as in many other parts of the State. He intimated that he would oppose abolishing the crossing at the hearing to be held as conditions did not warrant it.

Mr. A. E. Whitney believed that with an improvement in the gates danger would be practically eliminated. Three-fourths of the accidents occurred because of the inefficient protection afforded by the gates. Better protection can be afforded, without recourse to elevated tracks or streets. Mr. Whitney stated that he did not appear in opposition but to suggest some method of preserving the present center of the town.

Mr. Wiggin reminded the gentlemen present that the commission at the present hearing would only deal with the date of adjournment, when all interested would be given an opportunity to be heard. He suggested, however, that the petitioners instead of each arguing the question, place their cases in the hands of Mr. Joslin for presentation as much time would be saved and the same results accomplished in the end. April 3 was then fixed on as the date for the next hearing.

The entire session lasted but about ten minutes. There was a large attendance of prominent citizens, almost all of whom came out from Boston to attend the hearing, and they were much disappointed over the unexpected adjournment and the consequent loss of time from their business.

Ladies' Night.

The ladies' night at the Calumet Club for this month was observed on Tuesday evening. The club has been particularly unfortunate this season in having stormy weather for its monthly events, but the storm of Monday came just ahead of the entertainment this week, although the snow and slush made the travelling very bad. Notwithstanding the snow, there was a large attendance to see and hear Mr. Edward P. James of Boston, who gave a very fine exhibition of sleight-of-hand. Mr. James is an amateur of exceptional ability, and had appeared at the club on previous occasions, Tuesday evening being his first appearance before the ladies. At the close of the entertainment refreshments were served in the billiard room.

Bottle Pin Tournament Finished.

The last match in the bottle pin tournament at the Calumet Club was rolled the first of the week, and team 1 won the series of games by a large margin. Mr. F. C. Keith took the individual prize for high single string with handicap—222—15—237.

The winners:

First team prize won by team 1—A. S. Littlefield, capt. F. C. Keith, J. H. Winn, H. E. Richardson.

Second team prize won by team 3—T. Price Wilson, capt. A. A. Hazelton, W. D. Richards, C. A. Baldwin.

Individual prize won by F. C. Keith.

Eventide Service.

At the First Congregational Church in the main auditorium at 4:30 p. m. with preaching by the pastor will occur the fourth Lenten Eventide Service. Pastor's theme—"The Living Way." There will be special music by a Quintette of stringed instruments and the rendering of "My Redeemer and my God," Buck; and "These are they which came," Gaul's Holy City, by Miss Mary C. Ogilvie. The attendance is more and more encouraging. Come with your families. All seats free. Everybody welcome. Come.

Opening Services of the Second Congregational Church.

The people of the new church which was organized by council at Winchester Highlands last week have reason to congratulate themselves on the favorable weather which has attended the opening exercises of their organic life. The day of the Council was all that could be wished for, and with the dawning of last Sabbath also came a clear day. At 11 o'clock the church home on Cross street was full. As others were still coming extra chairs were required. When all were seated, the count showed that 126 were present. As almost all of these were people of the Highlands, there is no question but that the new organization has a constituency of its own. The room was fragrant with the perfume of numerous bouquets of English violets which Messrs. Justin L. Parker and Charles A. Lane had sent. Several cages of canary birds were hung about the room, and their feathered occupants engaged at frequent intervals in their own service of song. The pastor of the new church, Rev. Charles A. S. Dwight was assisted in the opening services and at the communion by Rev. S. Winchester Adriance. After the doxology, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," the prayer of invocation was offered by the Pastor. The grand old hymn, "I love Thy kingdom Lord," which Dr. Timothy Dwight, President of Yale College, wrote in the year 1800, was sung with a will. It was most appropriate that a hymn written by one of the name of Dwight should be sung. This was followed by the responsive reading of Psalm 27. Rev. S. W. Adriance then read the scripture lesson from the fourth chapter of Philippians, after which the pastoral prayer was offered by Rev. C. A. S. Dwight. At the conclusion of the prayer the audience joined with the pastor in the Lord's Prayer. Following this came the offertory, which was collected by the deacons, and then several notices were read by the pastor. In connection with the notices he expressed the thanks of the church for the many kindnesses which had been shown, to the Editor of the STAR, for the full and appreciative notices and reports of the new church, which he had published in his columns, to Mr. J. L. Parker and Mr. C. A. Lane for the beautiful flowers which they had given, and the great generosity of the First Congregational Church, shown in so many ways. It was announced that Mr. and Mrs. George Tyler and Mrs. S. M. Snow had been received by letter to the church, and thus were included among the charter members of the church. A special church meeting was called for March 30, and the notice given that the church manual was soon to be printed. The pastor and Mrs. Dwight invited the newly elected officers of the church to a dinner at their home, 40 Eaton street. The regular Sabbath services of the new church are the Sunday school at 10 a. m. and 7 p. m., preaching services at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m., at 4:45 p. m., and Y. P. S. C. E. at 6 p. m. There is also the regular prayer meeting every Tuesday evening at 7:45, and the Ladies' Prayer meeting every Friday at 3 p. m.

After singing, the pastor of the church preached a most appropriate sermon on "The Joy that is Coronal," from Paul's epistle to the Philippians, IV: 1: "My brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown, so stand fast in the Lord, my dearly beloved." In introduction he called attention to the fact that much of Paul's life was a hard experience. It was made up of ceaseless sacrifice and toil. His travels were arduous and the care of the churches was ever upon him. The burden of a heavenly message, which he must give, never left him. It led him sometimes into desolate regions, sometimes into cities of art and culture, over strange and boisterous seas, by and by to thralldom at Rome, and finally to martyrdom. What had a man of such trials to do with either crown or joy? Yet he had both. He had a regal happiness in serving God by serving man. He took great joy in the generosity of the Philippians church. It was like the generosity of our own First Church which has dealt with us so nobly. The joy of Paul is the joy which every minister takes in the church with which he labors. The new aspiration of the converted Pharisee was to save souls. The best of life comes through unselfishness. At this point the pastor addressed personally the members of the new church, reminding them that while they had known each other before, they had now come into new relations, with each other. As pastor and people they might choose a church color, fitly selecting gold. Colors are often spoken of in the Bible. Scarlet is the color of sacrifice. In the new testament the glorifying color is gold. It may be called the "ultimate color." It is heaven's crowning color. It we are faithful heaven will be the natural culmination of earth's experiences. To this heaven of his anticipation, Paul was eager that others should go with him. Paul's words are our inspiration today. The work we do for others will pay. Through such work comes the joy that is coronal. Will you let God use you?

After the sermon the creed of the church was read. It is a creed simple in language, similar to the confession of the Congregational and Presbyterian churches. This was followed by the reception into the fellowship of the church of the members. Previous to the observance of the Lord's Supper the two deacons of the new church, Justin J. Parker and William H. Huber were set apart to their office, the pastor using a simple and impressive form of service for the occasion.

The Communion Service which followed was most impressive. Thirty-five were received by letter from other churches, and twenty united with the church on confession of faith. Many of these were young men. The rite of baptism was administered in a large number of cases. In the observance of the Lord's Supper the pastor was assisted by Rev. Mr. Adriance, the two new deacons served the bread and the wine, and the beautiful individual communion service, given to the Church by Mrs. Moses Herrick was used for the first time.

At the conclusion of the service the special hymn written by Rev. Mr. Adriance was sung, and with the benediction by the pastor the service closed. Thus ended a service, which none of those present will ever forget. 120 were present in the morning and about 100 are enrolled in the Sunday School.

Years Ago this was Winchester's Manufacturing Centre.

A Scrap of old Winchester.

Thinking the above plan might be of historical interest, Mr. D. W. Pratt, civil engineer, of this town, has copied the same from the original plan drawn by Alexander Wadsworth, who did most of the surveying in and around Boston from 25 to 75 years ago. The office of Ernest W. Bowditch, with which Mr. Pratt is connected, has purchased from the estate of Alexander Wadsworth all of his plans, notebooks, etc., which are now of great value. At the time those plans were made, paper was scarce and expensive so that both sides of the paper were utilized and upon many of the sheets four or five surveys were plotted. In the collection is one plan of Cambridge drawn upon sheets of parchment sewed together. With reference to the plan here produced, probably there are not many now living who remember the factory village west of the railroad and just east of what is now Wedgenere station and it is hard to realize that that was the case but sixty years ago. At that time Symmes river (now Aberjona) was a little, narrow, crooked stream which ran through the meadow grass land, which was afterwards flooded to make a water supply for the city of Charlestown, and is now the upper basin of Mystic Lake.

A Sign of Reform.

EDITOR OF THE STAR.

All good people of Winchester rejoice that some one has cried out with great boldness against the Mud Pond people who have desecrated the town by letting a bit of their back yards for advertising signs. Suppose these misguided people do get $10 a year per sign to help along scanty incomes and big families, they ought to know better than to allow themselves to take money for such use of their land, knowing that people of exquisite taste who live in other parts of the town do not favor signs in the Mud Pond landscape. The loud cry of offended civic virtue should not stop at large advertising signs but should take in with a loud roar all smaller signs in the electric cars and subway stations, all unattractive business and newspaper advertising and demolish them at once. The people who frequent Mud Pond Park can, if they wish, contemplate the placid Aberjona, the towering heights of Horn Pond mountain, the great blue dome of the sky, the beautiful green slopes of Middlessex Fells and not look at the signs at all, but he who journeys in the electric cars must of necessity look upon all within his circumscribed vision or close his eyes to the light of day. What horrid things we have to look at in the line of electric car advertising! I cannot read my Brownings with fat men, lean men, men with rubber heels, men with nursing bottles and other necessities looking down upon me and urging me to look into the merits of their different wares and pills offered only for the benefit of mankind. No one knows how much I have suffered reading these signs and how much of my time has been wasted which I might have saved for my Socrates or my Emerson.

To go a little farther, why should people be allowed to have manure heaps, ash heaps and hen coops in their back yards if those with aesthetic tastes and cultivated vision object to such base uses of land? I do not like the looks of them and why should my eyes be offended by my neighbor even if he cannot afford to have his ashes taken away every day or give up his hen coop? The Winchester Civic Aesthetic Association should take this matter up at once as our brother Mud Ponders and others should not be allowed to offend us in this way. The common people should be taught that they have burdens to carry as well as other folks. It must be their own fault that poor people who have need of $10 bills in payment of sites for advertising signs and those who have need of assistance of hens to provide good food for their families are put to such wicked ways to get money. Why do they not get their money by writing or talking instead of working so hard for it as they do? If they would only worship the true, the beautiful, the good in its outward aspects and write interestingly about it in the papers, they would not be pinched for money as they are. They should be taught how to live as the members of our Association live and then they would revolt at taking egg money and sign money, especially the latter in such small amounts ($10 per year, in advance) not one tenth of what the electric car companies (mostly Aesthetic stockholders) receive for their advertising spaces.

It is to be hoped that the good work of telling the poor how to live so as not to offend the highly cultivated tastes of their more fortunate brothers may go on with increasing strength and enthusiasm. It does not cost much to keep up the agitation as the little paltry money loss must come on those who offend, not on the offended. In this particular good work in Winchester, it costs but little to be good, therefore almost everybody should join in the crusade against offensive advertising of any kind.

TOWN MEETING.

Committee Appointed to Investigate a Municipal Lighting Plant.

Meeting Refuses to Reconsider Wyman School Vote.

The third session of the annual town meeting was held during the worst snow storm of the season. It was of blizzard proportions and the result was an exceedingly small attendance, the great mass of citizens preferring home comforts to facing the disagreeable storm. On account of the small number in attendance many present thought the meeting should have been held over so that there might be a larger representation, but the desire prevailed to finish up the warrant which was accomplished at about ten o'clock.

Moderator Coit was present, and appeared to be laboring under the effects of a severe cold.

WYMAN SCHOOL.

Mr. F. F. Carpenter, of the School Board, got the permission of the meeting to take up the article relating to repairs on the Wyman school building which was defeated at the meeting of last week. He asked for a reconsideration of that vote whereby $1500 was asked for for new heating and improved ventilation. Mr. Carpenter claimed that debate at the last meeting was unintentionally cut off owing to the Moderator failing to see two or three gentlemen who desired to speak on the question. The boilers are in bad shape and any bad results that might occur because of a refusal to appropriate the money, would be laid to the town. The boilers could be patched up for from $100 to $200, but this would be money thrown away as new boilers would have to come next year anyway. The ventilation was so defective as to jeopardize the health of the children. The ventilation was never in good condition. The plumbing was all right. Present conditions were not fair to the children attending this school.

Mr. Lewis Parkhurst opposed consideration at so small a meeting, when the matter had been rejected at the large meeting of last week. It would not be fair.

Mr. H. F. Johnson did not believe conditions were as serious as represented, or that all the children attending this school were going to die. The matter was settled at a large meeting, and he did not favor a reconsideration when so few were present.

Mr. W. L. Tuck favored reconsideration. He claimed that at the previous meeting the attendance was small when the vote was taken as many had gone home.

Selectman Woods had three children attending this school and he was not at all alarmed at present conditions. He had investigated and had found the plumbing in good shape and the building was not unsanitary. There is room enough at the Prince School for many of the children and if necessary they should be sent there for a time. He therefore opposed reconsideration.

Mr. H. T. Dickson spoke in favor of reconsideration, because he wanted to see the children of the Wyman School given the same protection as those of all other parts of the town.

Mr. J. H. Carter said there was no need for haste as the matter could wait until June when there would in all probability be another meeting.

The meeting by a vote of 36 to 21, refused to reconsider the vote passed last week.

LAID ON THE TABLE.

The following articles were laid on the table:

Article 17. To determine what officers, boards and departments of the town the Town Clerk as a clerk shall serve and the compensation for such service.

Article 18. To rescind the vote passed at a special town meeting held January 29th, 1906, whereby all street, water, sewer, and park work should be under the control of one superintendent.

Article 23. To petition the Great and General Court now in session for an act under which the Boards of Water and Sewer Commissioners and their duties may be consolidated.

Article 24. To accept an act of the Great and General Court, now in session, providing for a consolidation of the Boards of Water and Sewer Commissioners and their duties.

CONTRACT FOR LIGHTING.

The Selectmen were authorized to make contracts for lighting the streets for a period not exceeding one year.

TRUSTEE OF ASA FLETCHER FUND. The resignation of Mr. H. A. Emerson was accepted as a trustee of the Asa Fletcher Fund, and on motion of Mr. D. N. Skillings, Mr. John L. Ayer was chosen to the vacancy.

DID NOT CARE TO HEAR THEM.

Mr. W. L. Tuck offered a vote that a committee of three be appointed to invite speakers to address the citizens on municipal ownership and other important topics. The suggested speakers were Robert Treat Paine, Robert Luce, T. W. Lawson and Mr. Schofield. The motion was lost by a vote of 27 to 12.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING PLANT.

Under this heading, John Abbott, Esq., offered the following motion:

Voted, That a committee of five members be nominated by the Moderator, with authority to investigate, in behalf of the town, the subject of municipal lighting in Winchester, and to consider whether it is for the best interests of the town to construct, purchase, or lease and maintain within its limits one or more plants for the manufacture and distribution of gas or electricity for furnishing light for municipal use, or light, heat, or power for the use of the inhabitants, and to report at a future town meeting, such committee to have authority to fill vacancies occurring in its membership and to be authorized to spend not exceeding $1000, to be charged to incidentals.

This motion was the outcome of a mass meeting of citizens held a few weeks ago. The committee, appointed at that meeting, have had no time to investigate the question, and therefore it was deemed best to bring it before this meeting where it would be vested with authority and standing to investigate and report back at a future meeting.

Mr. H. F. Johnson did not want any entering wedge for municipal ownership. Under the town laws the men would work but eight hours a day and this would require three shifts of men every 24 hours. Those who had a political pull would get the offices and the town would suffer. He opposed appointing a committee, and favored going to the Legislature, if necessary to get grievances righted.

Daniel F. Murphy, claimed that a municipal plant rightly managed would result in a saving. He gave a mass of figures and statistics to bear out his assertions, also figures for the cost of a plant for Winchester.

Mr. John H. Carter informed the meeting as to what steps the town had taken in the past. The first step toward a municipal plant was inaugurated April 11, 1892, when Messrs. A. E. Whitney, D. N. Skillings, T. S. Spurr, P. W. Swan and J. J. Todd were appointed a committee. After investigation they reported favorably on March 1, 1893. The first vote was taken April 10, 1893, when the vote stood 188 in favor to 8 opposed. The second favorable vote was taken June 22, 1893, when the result was 37 to 0. The committee then continued to make further investigation. A committee was then appointed consisting of Messrs. Spurr, Swan and Dorsey to bring in a list of officers to manage the plant. The full committee was then discharged March 12, 1894. A second committee consisting of Messrs. S. C. Small, J. J. Todd, P. W. Swan, Edwin Robinson and J. F. Dorsey, was appointed April 26, 1894. This committee made majority and minority reports, and a motion to establish a plant was tabled April 1, 1895, and the last act was to indefinitely postpone on April 8, 1895. There, Mr. Carter said, the matter had rested. These two votes however stood and the town could establish a plant whenever it saw fit on taking on more favorable vote. He favored the appointing of a committee to investigate. But this committee should not only consider the cost of a plant, but the purchasing of the wires, poles and transformers of the present company also the question of purchasing its electricity from the Edison, Cambridge or Malden plants.

Mr. F. F. Carpenter wanted to know if the committee would have power to investigate gas also, whereupon Mr. Abbott replied that it would.

Mr. Abbott's motion to appoint a committee was then agreed to.

The Moderator appointed the following committee: John Abbott, William Baggis, Frank Cutting, George Neiley, D. N. Skillings.

FEES.

On motion of Mr. Carter it was voted as the sense of the meeting that all fees received by town officials be turned into the town treasury.

SALARIES.

On motion of Mr. Parkhurst $300 was voted for the Assessors, $500 for a clerk and $50 for extra assistance, making a total of $1250. Town Clerk $600. The salaries of inspectors of wires and milk and Clerk of Selectmen was ordered to be paid from incidentals account.

Mr. Johnson moved that as the collector of Taxes had been requested to turn his fees over to the town, that his salary be increased so as to make up for the difference same as was done with the case of the Town Clerk. Lost by a vote of 25 to 10.

ASSISTANT WATER REGISTRAR.

Mr. J. H. Carter offered a motion, which was lost, that the Town Clerk, as a clerk, perform the duties of assistant water registrar.

TO EMPLOY CITIZENS.

A motion by Mr. Tuck that the Town Warden be requested to employ citizens of the town so far as advisable in the tree work, was lost.

The meeting then dissolved.

The Moderator has appointed the following committees:

On condition of ponds and river: Alfred

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The 16th annual conference of the Boy's Department of the Young Men's Christian Association of Massachusetts and Rhode Island was held in Springfield, Mass., March 16, 17, 18. Robert Hamilton, LeRoy Atherton, Stanley Weld and Russell Armstrong were appointed delegates from the local Association, and attended with the general secretary. 399 delegates were present, representing nearly every association in the two states. The meetings were conducted by boys and the entertainment for delegates was looked after by members of the boy's branch of the Springfield Association.

An orchestra composed of about twenty pieces, furnished music.

Sunday afternoon nearly 800 boys attended the meeting. Every one pronounced the conference a success.

From a number of charts which had been arranged by the State Boys' Secretary, Mr. H. W. Gibson, and placed upon exhibition at the conference it was learned that Winchester stands seventh in boy members. Forty-three associations were reported.

Considering the fact that a number of members were lost from our association when the McKay factory moved to Beverly, this does not seem so bad for the local field.

In 11 towns and cities in Mass. and R. I. from 4700 to 1500 inhabitants, Winchester stands 7th in population, 7th in number of boys 18 years of age and under, eligible to membership, 4th in percentage of members and 3rd in number of members.

The third in the series of short talks was given by Mr. Oscar Martin, on Tuesday, March 15. Subject, "The Norwegian Lad." 19 were present.

Bible Class supper last Tuesday evening followed by a social hour.

Longed for Whipping Post.

Chasley Fitzgerald, a curly colored man of Winchester, was brought into court this morning on a complaint charging assault on his wife. According to her testimony on the witness stand she received terrible treatment.

Questioned by Justice Edward F. Johnson as to whether he wished to offer anything in defense, he complained of his wife's cooking.

Justice Johnson told him if he had nothing further than that to offer he did not care to hear it; that if the law permitted the use of a whipping post he would thus dispose of Fitzgerald's case.

He sentenced him to two months in the House of Correction, the fact of several small children needing his aid at home, aiding in his getting so light a sentence. [Woburn Times.]

A Chicago Alderman Owes His Election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

"I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shennick, 220 So. Peoria St., Chicago. "Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overheated, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the Council." This remedy is for sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

Gift of Town Reports to High School Library.

Mr. George H. Carter has very generously and thoughtfully presented to the High School Library a complete set of Town Reports since the year 1766 except for the year ending Feb. 28, 1873. These volumes constitute an invaluable source of information and will always be highly prized by those studying the past history of the town.

It is very desirable to complete this set if possible, and the School Department would heartily appreciate the gift of any or all of the volumes not included in the above list if there is anyone who possesses them and would like to add them to this collection.

A Safe Cough Medicine for Children.

In buying a cough medicine for children never be afraid to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it and relief is always sure to follow. It is especially valuable for colds, croup and whooping cough. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

The Sign Board Nuisance.

The sign board nuisance seems to be attracting a good deal of the attention of Bostonians, just now. A specially offensive sign has found its way to the public eye, and the protests are strong and vigorous. Curiously, the law does not recognize as evil a thing which offends merely the sense of sight. If a man maintains something which is disagreeable to the sense of smell, he may be punished, but not if he annoys the eyes, merely. Why this partiality is shown by the statute has never been explained satisfactorily. There are people to whom the sight of such a sign board as the one under consideration is worse than the worst of stench, but the nose has the advantage over the eyes, and is protected.

The remedy for such an evil is not easily found. The theory of the law seems to be that a man has a right to do what he will and with his own, in this regard. If he can sell "space" on any part of the building, or in the air above it, he has a right to the income. To take this income away from him, because somebody else doesn't like the use made of the space, is a confiscation which the statutes do not approve.

There is but one way of "getting square" with those who offend in this way—by a boycott. They flaunt an objectionable sign to catch the public eye, not because they have no taste, or want to annoy people, but to sell goods. If those who are offended will make the offender understand that they will not buy his goods, he will stop.

One of these days the public will insist upon being rid of objectionable signs, and advertisers will have to erect artistic signs or none at all. Their remedy will be to advertise by the use of printer's ink. The newspaper serves the best purpose, and brings a better return than any other form of advertising.

The Boston & Maine Railroad is having all trees and bushes on its line in this vicinity removed, partly on account of insect pests and partly to improve the appearance.

In commenting on the changes likely to be brought about in the management of the Boston Record and Advertiser through the death of Mr. Barrett, Practical Politics says: "Herbert S. Underwood, who for some years has been the managing editor, is a wonderfully capable and versatile newspaper man, as can be easily seen even by the casual reader. Mr. Underwood for years has ground out the Record editorials, which are probably the only editorials read steadily in the entire city. Mr. Underwood knows how to run a newspaper, but he has not had an alarming amount of leeway. His hand will show stronger now."

OYSTER SOUP OR BEAN PORRIDGE. CROUTONS OR TOASTED BREAD.

Bean porridge belongs to the early days and the oyster was also used in old times. If the soup is selected drain one quart of oysters from the liquor, pick out bits of shell, chop the oysters rather fine, add to the liquor, drained from them and one cup of water. Heat slowly to the boiling point, strain, add four level tablespoons of butter and four and cook until smooth. Heat one quart of milk and a slice of onion to the boiling point, add salt, pepper and every salt to season, then pour onto the hot oyster liquor, scatter crotons over the top when served or press them separately in a small bowl. For bean porridge, take one pint of beans, one-quarter cup of corn meal and three pounds of corn beef. Soak the beans over night in cold water, drain and cook in fresh water with a pinch of soda until the skins will slip off, drain. Cook the meat until it is tender, cut in small pieces, skin the fat from the liquor and put all together and cook six hours very slowly until it is a smooth mass of the consistency of a thick soup. Season with salt and pepper.

A Pleasant Social.

A most pleasing and largely attended musicale was given by the March Group of ladies of the Congregational Church last evening. The two Winchester artists who took part were warmly received and their work was exceptionally good. Mr. H. Stanley Marsh gave four numbers on the organ which induced much applause, while Miss Caroline Pond presided at the piano to the satisfaction of all.

Miss Jennie Trecartin, soprano, and Mr. Carl Webster, violoncellist, also gave some fine music. The evening was in charge of the March Group, of which Mrs. Freeland E. Hovey is the chairman. The members of the group follow:

W. C. T. U. Notes

The New York Central railroad has issued rules for the protection of abstaining travelers that such patrons will greatly appreciate. In the Chicago Tribune the rules are given:

"No passenger in a sleeping car or chair car may take a drink of anything stronger than water. Porters being forbidden to serve such refreshments, in these cars passengers must go to the cafe or dining car when thirsty. Dining cars being attached only at meal hours and cafe cars being barred to women, they cannot obtain even a bottle of ginger ale or mineral water between times." Although the moral standard set by railroad companies is encouraging, there is room for improvement. A write ribboner travelling on the coast recently witnessed a scene on a dining car that was as repulsive as any saloon occurrence. A quiet couple were seated opposite a gentleman who ordered and drank four bottles of beer. In maudlin generosity he insisted that the lady, a total stranger to him, should accept a treat. The woman's husband was greatly incensed, but recognizing the fact that a protest to a drunken man is worse than futile, the gentle country folks hurried through the meal and sought refuge in their own car. Sleeping car passengers on the same train reported in one car a night carousal in which porters slyly paraded a carousal too revolting to detail. As rapidly as the saloon is taken off the wheels of travel sober people will cease to be annoyed by such occurrences.

THE above picture of the man and fish is the trademark of Scott's Emulsion and is the synonym for strength and purity. It is sold in almost all the civilized countries of the globe.

If the cod fish became extinct it would be a world-wide calamity, because the oil that comes from its liver surpasses all other fats in nourishing and life-giving properties. Thirty years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion found a way of preparing cod liver oil so that everyone can take it and get the full value of the oil without the objectionable taste. Scott's Emulsion is the best thing in the world for weak, backward children, thin, delicate people, and all conditions of wasting and lost strength.

Newsy Paragraphs.

The grafters were not unknown in the infancy of the nation, though not recognized by that name. It is asserted that once when Washington lost his temper with Congress and told that dilatory body that "the army is occupying a cold bleak hill and sleeping under the frost and snow without blankets," he expressed his opinion of the grafters of his time as follows: "I wish I could bring those murderers of our cause, the monopolizers, forestallers and engrossers to condign punishment. I would to God that some of the most atrocious in each state were hung on gibbets, upon a gallows five times as high as the one prepared by Haman."

The death of Gen. John M. Schofield leaves out one of the old division commanders in the civil war still alive, and that is Gen. O. O. Howard, who resides in Burlington, Vt. Gen. Schofield's record was of the best and there are no glaring mistakes either in his civil or military life that can dim his honor. He graduated from West Point in 1849, and from thence on served continuously in the army until retired by the operation of the age limit in 1895.

Veterans of the civil war will be interested in the progress through the legislature of a bill which has been favorably reported by the committee on taxation. It provides that soldiers and sailors who were honorably discharged shall be exempt from a poll tax and that the property of those who are above 65 years of age or their widows or wives, shall be exempt from taxation to the annual amount of $1000, provided that the whole estate real and personal, does not exceed $5000 and provided that only $1000 shall be exempted to only one family and that the amount of property held by such family does not exceed $5000.

It is expected that the new telephone exchange will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year. The old building on the property on Washington street will have to be moved and the cellar excavated as soon as the frost leaves the ground. The exchange will be fitted with the latest and most improved switchboard and other appliances, and automatic connections between the customers and central, so that there will be no need of calling up the latter. This system is now in use in Boston.

While the price of ice per hundred pounds has been or will be increased somewhat it is reported the price to the housekeepers will remain as before.

The electric railroads are still collecting that extra five cent fare between Winchester and Medford square and passengers are paying it too. It is cheaper than going to court and a good deal less trouble.—Woburn News.

There was no opposition to the bill at the State House providing for music on the State parks. The bill provides for band concerts at five places, Revere beach, Nantasket, Blue Hills, Charles River reservation and Middlesex Fells. If at what point will it be in the Fells? If at the Stoneham end there will be a kick; if at Melrose there will be another, and the same in the cases of Medford and Malden. Winchester will have a great chance to express itself at the selection of any of these places, as she will not get even a faint echo of the music, although aware of being a large contributor.

Selectmen's Proceedings

It is said that the new Board of Selectmen do not propose hereafter to give the public the benefit of their proceedings. If this is true, this is not a "Winchester Idea" that the people will recommend to outsiders as an advanced step in town government. This used to be the custom here many years ago when public interest was at a low ebb, but now the people have become educated in what is taking place and are keenly interested as to how town affairs are being administered. Let down the bars, gentlemen, and make the public reports of the proceedings as complete as can be done consistently.

One Way to Operate a Lighting Plant at a Low Cost.

The statement was made at the town meeting last Monday evening during the discussion on a municipal lighting plant, that it would be necessary to operate the plant for a portion of the night only, that a storage battery would do the rest, and that there would be no necessity of running the current during the day as people who had dark closets, rooms, etc., could use some other illuminant. This statement was made in order to show that a plant could be operated at a small cost. It economy in lighting is to be sought through any such means, then we had better abandon electric lighting altogether. But this the people will not do, neither will they favor any scheme of a town plant that will not provide light at all times during the twenty-four hours of each day. The investigating committee having the matter in charge should consider this, and furthermore that a town plant under the present eight-hours a day rule will require three shifts of men. We should be careful lest the jump be from the frying pan into the fire.

ELECTRICITY.

Eyes are too precious to be endangered by flickering or streaked and spotty illumination of book or evening work--the lungs are too important to be jeopardized by breathing air of which the oxygen has been destroyed by any open-flame illuminant. With the Electric Light you gain a steady, clear light, which vitiates no air. It is convenient, healthful, safe, and is not expensive if you manage it properly.

Have you learned to be light-wise?

The proper management will be explained if you'll write our Contract Agent, or telephone (Oxford 1150), or if you'll call when in Boston.

Hoyt Residence Partially Burned

A telephone call to the central fire station yesterday afternoon from the residence of Mr. Thomas S. Hoyt on Forest street caused the ringing in of Box 32 for a fire in that house.

The blaze caught from a chimney fire, the sparks falling upon the roof and setting it afire. The roof of the house was partially burned off, and there was quite a heavy water damage. The prompt and efficient work of the firemen saved the complete destruction of the house, as the fire had eaten into the inside considerably when the department arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt had but just returned from Lawrence, where they had been passing the winter.

Thanks to Winchester Firemen

Should Winchester need any similar assistance at any time, you will find Woburn will gladly respond.

Yours truly,

After the lecture dancing was enjoyed until half past eleven. About ten dollars was cleared from this lecture which goes to the support of the track team.

WOOD WORSTED MILLS, LAWRENCE.

The Wood Worsted Mills, Lawrence, Mass.

The above picture represents in all probability the largest single building which has ever been built for manufacturing purposes. It was planned by Dean & Main, engineers, of Boston. Mr. Charles T. Main is a resident of Winchester and the present chairman of the Water Board, a position in which he takes much interest and where his advice is most valuable.

This mill is located on the south side of the Merrimack river on land lying between Merrimack street and the river, the lot being 332 feet wide at one end and about 530 at the other, and 2040 feet long.

The buildings are now in process of erection, having been begun about the first of September. 500 ft. in length is now roofed in and the rest of the work on the building is nearing completion.

The buildings consist of a main building, to be used for manufacturing purposes, an office building and a power plant.

The main building is built in three sections, known as A, B and C sections. A and B each being 500 feet in length, and section C 441 feet, making a total length of 1441 feet.

The office building will be 123 feet wide and 105 feet long, of the same height as the main building.

The power plant will consist of a boiler house 328 feet long by 104 feet wide, an engine house 141 feet long by 75 feet wide, and a coal pocket 88 feet by 375 feet.

All of the buildings are to be of the type of low burning mill construction with the exception of a portion of Section C, which is to be used for wool washing, dyeing and wet finishing.

For the help there will be installed escalators, or moving stairways, which will have a capacity of carrying 2000 operatives from the second to the third and second to the fourth floors, and from the third to the fifth and fourth to the sixth floors. This is the first instance in which escalators have been used in a manufacturing plant. At this entrance there will also be a one-story porch about 85 feet by 40 feet, under which persons coming to bring dinner at noon can be sheltered from the sun and rain.

The office building is so planned as to form a portion of another mill in the future, which will be practically a duplicate of the one now in process of construction. 500 feet of this mill is to be built now.

Sections A and B will be used for manufacturing purposes and will contain 1000 worsted looms and all of the necessary machinery. Section C will be used for wool storage, sorting and scouring and for wet finishing and dyeing goods. The wool storage will be in two stories of Section C, wool sorting will be the fifth story of C, and the storage of sorted stock in the third story of C. This will drop through the floor back of the wool scouring machines, and after passing through them it will be blown 400 feet to the card room which is located in the second story of Section A.

The drawing is located on the fourth floor of A and B, the spinning on the 6th floor of A and B.

The buildings will all be heated and ventilated by a blower system of the most approved type and everything will be done to make the hygienic conditions the best possible for a textile mill. All of the toilet arrangements will be of the best pattern.

The boiler house will eventually contain forty horizontal return tubular boilers 78 inches in diameter and 20 feet long, two economizers with duplex fans, for each one, producing mechanical draft, and two steel stacks of feet 6 inches in diameter by 120 feet high.

The electrical equipment will be furnished by the General Electric Co.

The main mill is probably the largest single building which has ever been built for manufacturing purposes, and will contain about 1,000,000 square feet of floor space. The floor space contained in all the buildings will be approximately 1,300,000 square feet. Immediately after the purchase of the land, clearing was begun, and in a short time a large number of men were at work on the excavation, the number increasing finally to over 1300. The number now employed is something over 1200. With so large a number of workmen rapid progress has been made. It is expected that by Sept. 1, 1906, which will be a year from the time that the project was conceived and construction started, the plant will be in operation.

The yard is connected with the Boston & Maine Railroad by a spur track, the level of which is such that the floors of the cars will be on a level with the first floor of all the buildings, and tracks will be run wherever it is desired to deliver material on ship or barge. There will be about a mile of side track in the yard. The coal will be elevated on a trestle and dumped into the coal pocket.

The mill is named after Mr. William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Company. It has been planned by Dean & Main, Engineers, of Boston, who are supervising the construction and equipment of the plant.

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism.

Chas. Drake, a mail carrier at Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeepers here recommended this remedy, and it completely cured me." There is no use of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale at O'Connor's Pharmacy.

170,000 Telephones at your Service.

One hundred and seventy thousand users of the telephone in Boston and vicinity. This is a recent startling statement of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. In other words, every user of the telephone, without going out of his office or his home, can talk at any time with this vast army of people. Two thousand new telephones a month and the increase more rapid during every succeeding month. In a short time the person who has not a telephone at his service will be living elsewhere. Once you have a telephone, you'll always have one, for you can't give up the habit for the reason that you can't afford to.

Mr. C. J. H. Woodbury of the telephone company gave a very interesting illustrated lecture before the members of the Suburban Press Association at the United States Hotel, Boston, Monday afternoon. There was curiosity to know what he could find in the telephone service to talk about, and yet his talk of an hour caused time to take wing, so interesting and with all instructive were the many pictures and the description of this great system which reaches across the country from ocean to ocean.

Mr. Woodbury made the interesting point that when a person uses a long distance telephone, a large amount of property is at his exclusive service. For instance, in speaking from Boston to Omaha, as one business firm does every morning, the value of the fraction of line and apparatus is at its sole disposal, as, at the present price of copper, over $83,000, while it requires the service of nine operators at the switchboards at various points along the line.

The weight of this copper is 1,131,000 pounds, or 565 tons, and the wonder is not so much in the fact that a human voice can cause vibrations in its unison throughout this immense mass of metal, even to its uttermost limits of 1,600 miles with those delicate touch of tone, which determine the individuality of one voice from another, as it is that the telephone is so delicate that it can catch these vibrations and transmit them into speech.

Pictures shown by Mr. Woodbury, traced the telephone wires through cities, into conduits to the country farm houses, the mining camp, over deserts and mountain rivers and ravines into the most inaccessible places, and to the handsome stations of the company. In fact wherever there is civilization there will be found the telephone. The company is not unmindful of the hundreds of thousands of girls employed as a careful watch is kept over the comfort of all. Reading and lounging rooms with an abundance of literature and dining rooms, are but a few of the many conveniences the company provides for them at the central stations. The mechanism of the telephone is but little understood by the people, so too is the vast amount of human machinery that keeps the lines in operation day and night and at your constant service.

Castle Square Theatre.

As a novel, "When Knighthood was in Flower," sold hundreds of thousands of copies, and as a play it has been witnessed by upwards of a million spectators. First made popular on the stage by Julia Marlowe, it has since been played by other stock companies and stars throughout the country with unparalleled success. As a result of the vote recently taken for the most popular play among the patrons of the Castle Square Theatre, it will be produced at that house next Monday for one week only. The scenes are laid in England at the time of Henry VIII, the great king himself being one of the most important personages in the play, and his sister the heroine. It is her love for Charles Brandon that provides the romance, and the steps taken to thwart them make up four exciting and powerful emotional acts.

A great production of Sardou's drama "The Exiles" will follow. "When Knighthood was in Flower," at the Castle Square.

Wonderland Nearing Completion.

While there are scores of other attractions in Wonderland, the new million dollar pleasure park, now rising like a magic city at Revere Beach, that are calculated to interest and entertain the multitude of sightseers and pleasure seekers, there is one particular and distinctive feature which seems bound to create a sensation. It is Fire and Flames, located at the east end of the park, the Spectators' Pavilion, which is not alone one of the largest but also one of the most ornate and stately appearing structures in Wonderland.

Viewed from the grand stand as the curtain rises, the scene presented will be that of a typical city square, acres in circumference, with block on block of stores, factories, hotels and dwellings. The square itself will be alive with traffic, and the hum of business and conversation will be incessant, while, to carry out the idea of city life in all its aspects there will be street lawns followed by arrests and other characteristic incidents of a metropolis. At this will serve but as a prelude to the Fire Show itself, in which everything that tends to realism is provided, beginning with the jet of flame, which follows the accidental dropping of a match amid inflammable material, and ending with the rescue of the horror-stricken inmates of the stores, hotel, and dwelling houses. Incidentally, as the conflagration progresses, with the crowd concentrating on every side, pressed back by the cordon of police, there is the spectacular arrival of the fire apparatus, the stretching of fire lines, coupling of hose to hydrants, sordding of life nets and the perilous ascents and descents of the brave fire-fighters themselves. Needless to say, this climatic phase of the Fire Show is intensely realistic and thrilling beyond description. It is indeed as real and as soul stirring as any conflagration can possibly be in a thickly settled metropolitan community.

The Perilous Path of Diplomacy

By HOWARD FIELDING

Copyright, 1905, by Charles W. Hooker

"NONSENSE, my dear," said Mrs. Lockwood. "You can't tell the truth to a man. It has been tried and has always failed."

"But why, auntie—why? Honestly, I don't understand it at all. I haven't a dearer wish in the world than to be absolutely truthful to Donald. I've nothing to do about except the fact that I'm a fibber, and I might as well tell the truth about that, because he knows it already. He catches me at it all the time."

"That's your own fault, Edith," said the elder woman. "You must learn to do it better."

Her tone revealed sincere sympathy. There was a heartiness in this admonition which made it truly diabolical. Edith looked quickly into Mrs. Lockwood's eyes, instinctively expecting to see some of her own sense of sin reflected there, but no such revelation came.

"Donald is so utterly truthful," said Edith.

Mrs. Lockwood glanced over her shoulder at the girl and smiled in a way not quite so agreeable as before, a cynical smile this time.

"Now, auntie," protested the girl, "you mustn't try to destroy my faith in him."

"Far, far from it," said Mrs. Lockwood. "You couldn't make a better match, and if it's broken off while you're living in my house it won't be my fault. Is he jealous of Nat Hardy?"

"Oh, no; not jealous. And yet, of course, he knows that I received Mr. Hardy's attentions and that some people thought I was engaged to him."

"Unfounded the fellow?" said Mrs. Lockwood, with a calm and steady earnestness that gave her mild explication the value of an oath. "And yet I favored him at the time. I thought him your best chance. I never dreamed that Donald Ainsworth was a possibility. He always had a great notion of blue blood, and while yours is well enough in its way, there's none of it remaining except in your own veins. Your family on both sides of the house is only a tradition."

"If my father and mother had lived," said Edith, "I should have been a better girl. You know how I was reared. I try not to be bitter about it, but—"

"Appropos of truth telling," said Mrs. Lockwood, with management, "the conditions were not ideal. Your foster mother was a nervous wreck, and you lived to her as an act of mercy. It was a rule of the household. And your foster father was a nagging crank, to whom you dared not tell the truth unless you were quite sure that it would suit him. Oh, I knew my brother and his wife! So from the age of four until you were mercifully orphaned a second time and came to me you had small use for the virtue of veracity. And I have never insisted upon it. But why repine? The matter is of no consequence. Prevarication is a woman's natural weapon."

Edith's pretty childish face was wrinkled or perhaps dimpled would be the better word—with a deeply studious attention. She believed that Mrs. Lockwood knew the world and all its ways. Everybody said she was a very brilliant woman, yet it was often hard to understand what she meant. Of course she didn't really believe that lying was right. She was a good woman, whose life was without reproach so far as it was known to this unsophisticated and affectionate girl of twenty summers.

"In regard to Mr. Hardy," said Edith, "it's very annoying that Donald has to see him so often. They are obliged to consult together because some of their clients are mixed up in the same law case. And Donald does not like—"

"He does not, wholly approve?"

"He short, he knows that Nat Hardy is a scamp," said Mrs. Lockwood, "and he wonders how you could ever have loved him. Well, there was a time when I was afraid you didn't, and now I'm mighty glad you don't, and there's an end of it."

"I wish there were an end of it," returned Edith, "but there isn't. Last evening Donald asked me if I had received a letter from Mr. Hardy, and of course, I said no. Then I saw Donald's eyes wander for an instant to my ring, and that meant that he didn't believe me. I must tell you that we've made a treaty, as he calls it. When he asks me anything by the sign of the ring I'm to answer the exact truth."

"Goodness, how did he happen to make such a request as that?"

"I'd fibbed about so many little things. You see, I love him so much that I can't help saying what I think will please him."

Mrs. Lockwood laughed with great enjoyment and then suddenly became serious.

"This matter of the Hardy letter is a different business," said she. "I guess you'd better tell him the truth."

"But I did, auntie," Edith protested. "I haven't seen any such letter."

"In our dealings with the sterner sex," responded Mrs. Lockwood, "we must always remember that the truth is not necessarily a statement of the facts; it is something that the man will believe. This philosophy should be taught in every girl's school; it is more important than cookery to the American home. But to return to our text. I'm of the opinion that Donald has reason to believe that Nat Hardy has sent you a letter. If he goes over to see Mr. Hardy frequently he may have seen the letter on that gentleman's desk."

"You don't mean to imply that Donald would?"

"Read it? Of course not unless through some accident. But one sees a name on an envelope at a single glance."

"If Donald saw a letter for me in Mr. Hardy's office, why didn't he tell me so straight out?" said Edith. "It's not like him to make a mystery of such a thing."

"He had a man's curiosity to know whether you would admit receiving the letter. The circumstance is odd enough to arouse his interest. Why should Nat Hardy be writing to you? I'm sure I can't guess, and I'd very much like to find out."

"Of course I asked him why he supposed that I might get such a communication," responded Edith, "and he said that he fancied that Mr. Hardy might have something to tell me. His manner was as if he thought I should be pleased, as if there were some surprise in store for me. I was so puzzled that I didn't care to ask any more questions."

"We must know more about this," said Mrs. Lockwood, with decision. "Get and a telephone ought to help us."

"You are going to ask Mr. Hardy? I'm afraid Donald wouldn't like that."

"Donald will never know anything about it, my dear," answered Mrs. Lockwood.

She was absent from the room about ten minutes, and when she returned her face disclosed the self complacency of justified pride.

"I have the whole affair at my finger ends," said she. "Do you remember that little photograph of yourself taken at the interesting age of three years? You were greatly grieved by its loss. I heard you tell Donald of the inexplicable mystery of its disappearance."

"Well, what could I say? Donald wanted to see it, and I couldn't tell him that I suspected Mr. Hardy of stealing it. That would have made him angry."

"Your suspicions, my dear, were entirely correct," said Mrs. Lockwood. "Mr. Hardy has the picture, and Donald said it in his apartments on Monday evening."

Edith gave a little cry of surprise and alarm.

"Auntie, you don't suppose that Donald thought I had given Mr. Hardy that picture and had told a falsehood about it?"

"He thought, my child, Donald knows the truth or as much as is good for him. Seeing the picture there and having heard your story, he was naturally in a difficult position, from which he extricated himself handsomely. He merely mentioned to Mr. Hardy that you valued the picture highly because the memorandum upon the back of the card was in your mother's hand and happened to be the only bit of writing that remained to you, whereupon Nat Hardy had a remarkable impulse to do right. Quite a miracle, as it seems to me. He confessed that he had thoughtlessly stolen the picture because it was so quaint and pretty and said that he would send it back to you with a humble apology immediately. While Donald was looking over some legal papers Nat wrote a letter to you, and he mailed it next morning."

"And it's lost, and the picture with it!" exclaimed Edith. "Oh, I'm so sorry!"

"Fortunately, our friend decided not to trust the picture to the mails. He merely wrote to tell you that it was safe; that he regretted his misdeed and that he would return it by messenger."

Edith sank back in her chair, doubly relieved in mind.

"Thank goodness, there's nothing here that I must hide from Donald!"

Mrs. Lockwood smiled with an air of almost infinite wisdom mingled with pity.

"Mr. Hardy's letter has not come," said she. "Undoubtedly it has been lost in the mail. Will you say so to Donald?"

"Why not?"

"Because, my child, he will not believe you. The incident is possible, of course, but in real life it is very rarely happens. Remember, Donald does not know that you know what he knows. Do you follow me?"

"You mean that if I knew that he knew for certain that Mr. Hardy had written to me I should tell the truth, but otherwise I might take the easy course and deny having received a letter?"

"Precisely. And you mustn't do it. I tell you, Edith, that this trifling matter is a bomb loaded with destruction. I have noticed a change in Donald's manner of late. He has been a bit chilly to me, and that's a fact. And when a man turns the cold shoulder toward the matchmaker, it means that the match is in danger."

"Donald loves me," said the girl. "But he doesn't fully trust you. So much you have made clear to me."

"I have thought that if I could really be what he wishes me to be, if in great things or small I could speak always the whole truth."

"Nonsense, my dear; charming, childish nonsense! Now listen to me." And Mrs. Lockwood expanded at considerable length her wretched gospel of deception, and upon the end of it set forth concrete evidence.

"Remember," she concluded, with a shrewd eye on the girl, "that you are doing this for his own good and for the eternal salvation of his peace of mind. I say 'eternal' because it's the only word for married life. It's so long, so very long." And she indulged in the least little yawn at the memory of her own.

There intervened some hours. Evening came. Clocks, which were a fid of Mrs. Lockwood's, were calling from room to room of the house. Edith had set her resolution, like a species of alarm clock, for this hour, and when all the

"WHY DID YOU TELL ME THAT YOU HAD RECEIVED THIS?"

clocks were still she looked up at Donald, who was standing before her, and said:

"You remember the little photograph that I lost?"

"Yes," said he, with the smallest possible start of surprise.

"Well, I've found it."

"You have found it?" he said slowly.

"I mean that I know where it is. Mr. Hardy has it."

"Indeed! Have you seen him?"

"No," she answered, shifting her look from his face to his tie.

"Perhaps Mrs. Lockwood?"

"Oh, no; she hasn't seen him either. I have had a letter from him."

He was much surprised, but Edith did not know it because she was now looking at a cuff of his coat.

"Yes," she went on in a voice not quite steady. "He wrote to say that he had taken it, not knowing how much I valued it nor why it was especially precious. He apologized humbly and promised to send it back to me at once."

"Perhaps he has already done so," said Donald after a brief pause.

"No, he hasn't; but I'm sure he will. What made you think he had?"

"As I was removing my overcoat in the hall a few minutes ago," he answered, "I happened to displace a tray upon a table. There was an envelope under it addressed to you in Mr. Hardy's writing. It was probably forgotten by the servant to whom the postman handed it in. I will get it."

He went out into the hall, leaving her rigid and staring. Before she could form a coherent thought he had returned and had put an unopened letter into her hand.

"If you would care to read it now," he said and crossed to the piano, upon which he began to play softly.

Edith glanced once at him, then tore open the envelope. It contained, of course, the delayed communication from Nathaniel Hardy. And she had already told Donald what was in it!

"Oh, yes, yes," she said in a choked voice. "Just a note to ask if I'd received the other. You see, I hadn't acknowledged it."

He turned toward her, and their eyes encountered. She could not withdraw hers, though his glance was unendurable to her. Slowly she advanced toward him and put the open letter into his hand.

"Why did you tell me that you had received this?" he asked. "By the ring, Edith, answer by the ring."

"I was afraid you wouldn't believe me," she whispered.

"How did you know what was in it? You said you hadn't seen him."

"Auntie talked to him by telephone. He rose and walked away from her, then slowly returned."

"It seems to me," he said, "that we have come to a moment of decision."

She looked into his face, speechless with grief and terror.

"This can't go on," he said. "We must plan anew."

"Oh, Donald, she wailed, "I will never, never!"

"It's not a time for promises," he interrupted gently. "It's a time for action. I must take you away from here. Tomorrow? Will you marry me tomorrow?"

She burst into uncontrollable tears. "Poor little girl!" he whispered, with the uttermost tenderness. "You've never had a chance; never, never a fair chance. I must change all that."

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a fine and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stetson, 6 South Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston, Mass., proprietors. Sold by Young & Brown, Winchester. Price 25 cents. 45-15

The Lamenting Owl.

One of the most pathetic of birds is the lamenting owl of Florida, and some other southern parts. He sits well up in a tree at night and emits a series of loud, strange hoarse throat sounds like half human laughter. The sound is sufficiently terrifying to a nervous camper unaccustomed with the habit of the bird, though less gruesome than the unearthly call of the Chusquea boon heard at all hours of the night along the shores of that bay—New York Telegraph.

One of the most pathetic of birds is the lamenting owl of Florida, and some other southern parts. He sits well up in a tree at night and emits a series of loud, strange hoarse throat sounds like half human laughter. The sound is sufficiently terrifying to a nervous camper unaccustomed with the habit of the bird, though less gruesome than the unearthly call of the Chusquea boon heard at all hours of the night along the shores of that bay—New York Telegraph.

THE BEAUTIFUL HAND.

A Decision That Stood the Test of All Time.

There was a dispute among three ladies as to which had the most beautiful hand. One sat by a stream and dipped her hand into the water and held it up, another plucked strawberries until the ends of her fingers were pink and another gathered violets until her hands were fragrant. An old, haggard woman, passing by, asked, "Who will give me a gift, for I am poor?" All three denied her, but another who sat near, unwashed in the stream, unstained with fruit, unadorned with flowers, gave her a little gift and satisfied the poor woman, and then she asked them what was the dispute, and they told her and lifted up before her their beautiful hands. "Beautiful indeed," said she when she saw them, but when they asked her which was the most beautiful she said, "It is not the hand which is washed clean in the brook, it is not the hand that is tipped with red, it is not the hand that is garlanded with fragrant flowers, but the hand that gives to the poor is the most beautiful." As she said these words her wrinkles fled, her staff was thrown away and she stood before them an angel from heaven, with authority to decide the question in dispute, and that decision has stood the test of all time.

STATE LOTTERIES.

They Were Once Very Common and Very Popular in Europe.

Lotteries were common in ancient Rome, and during the middle ages lotteries were utilized by the Italian merchants for the disposal of their goods. Some of the Italian states then adopted the lottery as a means of raising revenue, and the institution of state lotteries afterward became very common and very popular throughout Europe.

The earliest English state lottery of which there is any record was in 1569, when 40,000 chances were sold at 10 shillings each, the drawing taking place in the west door of St. Paul's cathedral.

The prizes consisted of articles of plate, and the profits were employed for the repair of certain harbors. Early in the reign of Queen Anne private lotteries were suppressed "as public nuisances," but government lotteries, however, were still maintained, and from 1769 to 1821 considerable sums were annually raised in lotteries authorized by acts of parliament.

The average yearly profit to the government from 1763 to 1824 was over £340,000. On the ground of injury to public morals lotteries of all kinds were abolished in England in 1826—London Saturday Review.

FORGET YOURSELF.

No One Can Grow While His Thoughts Are Self-Centered.

Forget yourself. You will never do anything great until you do. Self-consciousness is a disease with many names. No matter what they do, they can never get away from themselves. They become warped upon the subject of self-analysis, wondering how they look, how they appear, what others will think of them and how they can enhance their own interests. In other words, every thought and every effort seems to focus upon self; nothing radiates from them.

No one can grow while his thoughts are self-centered. The sympathies of the man who thinks only of himself are soon dried up. Self-consciousness acts as a paralysis to all expansion, strangles enlargement, kills aspiration, cripples executive ability. The mind which accomplishes things looks out, not in; it is focused upon its object, not upon itself.

The immortal acts have been unconsciously performed. The greatest prayers have been the silent longings, the secret yearnings of the heart, not those which have been delivered facing a critical audience. The daily desire is the perpetual prayer, the prayer that is heard and answered—Success.

What the Blind See.

"I can always tell when people are looking at me," said a blind man. "Indeed, nearly all blind persons can tell when people are looking at them. I have always about me a soft golden glow of light. When people whom I like come into my presence this glow becomes paler, lovelier. When those I dislike are about the glow is darkened and besmudged. I can tell what kind of characters people have by the touch of their hands. There is individuality in the touch. A man's touch shows me whether he is alert or sluggish, cold or passionate, kind or cruel."

Stone in the Heart.

A Greek woman employed in the American hospital in Caesarea, Turkey, was stirred by a revival. She straightway asked leave to visit a woman whom she had injured and to whom she had not spoken for ten years. When the stranger through the snow three or four miles to ask her "enemy's" forgiveness her relatives were sure she had gone mad, but the next day, when she came back to the hospital, she said, "We made peace, and the stone in my heart is gone."

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Little, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his disease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Little's claim that his success was due to the use of this pill, and since its introduction on the American continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Case, Me., writes: "I am now past 40 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Phosphorus, Acid, Alkali, Sugar, Peppermint, Soda, Morphine, or any preparation of opium, or in fact any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well being guaranteed to benefit of the pill—price returned. Sold at drug stores of by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert's Little Dinner Pill, Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

DIAMONDS.

If You Want to Make Them, Here Is the Process of Manufacture.

Would you like to know how to manufacture diamonds—real diamonds? The process is somewhat difficult, requiring time, patience and some outlay of money, but then consider the possible results! The diamond, we know, is simply carbon in a transparent crystalline form. It comes of humble parentage and is brother to the lump of coal.

Unlike only crystallizable bodies, carbon is fusible in all ordinary solvents, but molten metals will combine with it. Let the diamond maker choose iron for a solvent for charcoal, melting it in an electric furnace, allowing it to take up as much carbon as it can—in other words, saturate itself with carbon. The electric current will then be turned off and the molten metal will be poured into a bath of water. The result will be that the carbon of iron will rise to the surface of the bath and are quickly cooled on the open surface. Inside the hard outer shell there will be some time in a molten state, and the iron expands in solidifying, the contents of these little globules of iron will be unattainable by any of the means.

When the hard outer shell and the globules of iron will be cooled and the hard outer shell will be removed, the iron will be removed, and the carbon will be left in the mass. The result will be a powerful acid first the iron will be removed, and a residue of carbonaceous matter will be found to contain many crystals—real diamonds. Any chemist with a well equipped laboratory can make diamonds in this way, but the largest of them will not be more than a fifth of an inch in diameter.

THE CULT OF SILENCE.

Truest Intercourse Between Congenial Spirits Is Without Words.

Now, to keep one's freshness there ought to be a zone of silence around every human being during some part of every day. It is significant that the great religions of the world have come out of silence and not out of noise, and the finest creative work is done, as a rule, in seclusion, not necessarily apart from men, nor in solitary places, but away from the tumult and away from distracting sounds.

It is in silence alone that we come into possession of our selves. The noises of life disturb us as a cloud of dust intervenes between the eye and the sky. There ought to be a cult for the practice of silence—a body of men and women committed to the preservation of the integrity of their souls by neither hearing nor making speech for certain periods, pledged to the culture of the habit of quietness.

Master Eckhart has pointed out the fact that the best things are never spoken, and the truest intercourse between congenial spirits is carried on without words. If we said less and thought more there would be far fewer things to quarrel about. The source of irritation would be removed from the surface, and the peace of the mind, which is necessary to the highest development, would be restored.

Newsy Paragraphs.

Customers of the Edison Company express appreciation of the new form of bill which that Company is using for the first time this month. From the new bill it is plain to see that the customer is charged for only what current he uses, and not on the number of lamps he may use at one time, and it is possible for the customer to check the correctness of the bill from figures given.—[Woburn Journal.]

Mrs. Emily Dodge of Concord, N. H., who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Geo. A. Fernald and her son, Mr. George A. W. Dodge of this town, for a number of weeks, will return home about the first of April. Mrs. Dodge, a dear old lady of 84 years, but from appearance not over 70, has endeared herself to all she has met while in town, by her happy, kindly disposition. She has been in the habit during her stay here of taking a daily walk, unattended, calling on her friends etc., in a manner surprising for one of such advanced years.

Miss Eliza Chaloner, is much improved in her health, and able to move about her room a little.

Mrs. Harry Wain is slowly improving in her health, which has been the cause of much anxiety to her friends and family since the birth of her daughter. A complete recovery is now expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Davey will occupy the Manchester house on Main street the coming summer.

Christine, wife of John Peterson of Woburn died Saturday at the Mass. General hospital, Friday evening, when Mr. Peterson called to see his wife she told him of a big fire to be in Woburn and advised him to hurry home and notify the police. Mr. Peterson paid slight attention to the remark, until the news of Saturday's fire reached him, and he was convinced it was the auditorium she meant.—[Woburn Times.]

HIS COMPLAINT JUSTIFIED.

Wherein His Neighbor Refuses to Take Care of His Trees.

Supt. Kirkland Says Plenty of Law but No Money to Enforce.

As the winter has progressed and signs of spring are now abundant, an ever increasing murmur has been heard from the man who has attended to his duty to his town, his neighbor and himself in the matter of clearing his premises of the objectionable gypsy and brown tail moths. He has been and is complaining of the man next to him, whose trees are still laden with the nests and egg clusters of the moths and who still shows no disposition to get to work to rid his trees of the dangerous insects.

"Why is it the law compels me to do this work and has nothing to say to my neighbor who neglects his trees to the danger of mine and his other neighbors," means this poor man. "Why, when his sense of duty does not cause him to care for the moths on his premises, does not the law step in and make him attend to them? Is the popular belief that the law does compel one to destroy the moths on his premises founded on error?"

So much of this murmuring has been heard of late that a representative of this paper called upon Superintendent A. H. Kirkland, of the State work against the moths, to inquire into the matter. When the object of the visit was explained to the Superintendent, he said:

"Yes, we have got the law, but it is like a locomotive without coal to fire up with. We have the law and plenty of it to compel individual property owners to clean the moths from their trees, but we lack sufficient funds to enforce the law."

"Just what do you mean by that?"

"I mean," said the Superintendent, "that the law compelling property owners to clean their trees is clear. There is ample law to compel a man to clean his estate, or rather if he is negligent, to have the work done by the city or town partly at his expense and partly at the expense of the city or town. This law gives the towns ample authority to clean up any man's holdings, but the nub of the whole situation is that the State funds available to aid any city or town in this work are entirely inadequate for the enforcement of that law."

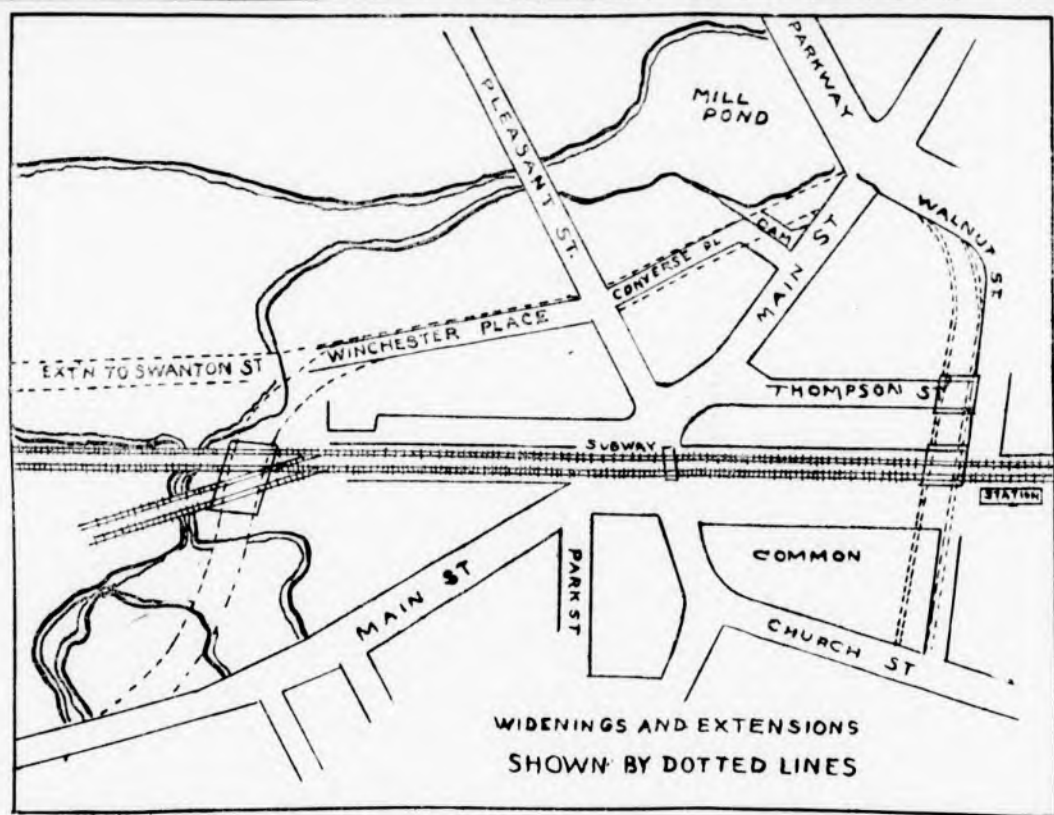

"The law requires that when a city or town makes certain expenditures in moth work, the State shall reimburse that city or town for a certain part of the expenditure. The present act was passed when the infested area of the State was supposed to amount to only 359 square miles and the appropriation carried by that act was barely sufficient for its enforcement over that limited area."

"Our inspectors have found that today there are nearly 2300 square miles of infested territory and it is preposterous to think that with the same sum of money, hardly sufficient to enforce the law in the smaller area, the law can be fully enforced in a district about seven times as large. For that reason we are asking the present legislature for an additional appropriation. We have the whole territory organized for the enforcement of the law and it now remains for the legislature to give us the money to ensure the provisions of the law being fully carried out."

"As I understand the matter, Mr. Kirkland," said the reporter, "when the bill went through the legislature it was to control the moths in a certain known block of infested territory, 359 square miles in area. Double the money actually appropriated was asked for to do that work, and what was granted has been found to be barely sufficient to control the moths in the original known territory. Now you have got this big non-revenue yielding territory on your hands. Many of the towns require more State money for the needs of the work than the large cities because of their low valuation, and you have not the funds to meet these calls and to enforce compulsory cleaning on the part of laggard property owners. Is that correct?"

"That is the situation in a nut shell," answered Superintendent Kirkland. "You reporters have a way of putting facts briefly. Take for instance the town of Burlington. It is especially bad from a moth standing point, for there are millions of eggs there and it is on the highway from Woburn to Lowell. Under the law it is required to raise of its own funds only $250, yet to do the necessary work there and to wipe out the moths would require fully $12,000. The State allotted that town $2300, which with its own fund gives a total of $2529 for the work there. This is wholly insufficient to enforce the law on private estates."

"Then the town of Essex raises $419 and it has a very large wooded area that is quite generally infested. To do all necessary work there we should have to expend at least $5000 this year. The State has allotted the town only $500, giving a total of $919 for the work there. Ipswich is another town which is badly infested and there $5000 or $6000

Suggestion as to Grade Crossing Elimination.

A Practical Grade Crossing Scheme.

The scheme of abolishing the grade crossing in the center of the town printed in the STAR of Dec. 9, 1894, having been talked of and referred to so much during the past week we herewith reprint the essential features of the article and also a cut of the plan. This matter is now actively before the town, and the suggestions in the scheme now reproduced contain so much merit that we trust the citizens will give it careful thought. This plan if carried out would not disturb the present center of the town, neither would it interfere with the tracks of the railroad. Communication with both sides of the center could be maintained by a subway, under the present crossing, for foot travel.

The scheme is as follows: Start at the junction of Main street and the Parkway, opposite Whitney's machine shop and construct a roadway of the present width of Main street across the mill pond to the intersection of Converse place, widen Converse place to the same width, thence across Pleasant street to intersect Winchester place, which will also be likewise widened, thence by an ascending grade along Winchester place and in an easy curved line to the culminating point of a bridge over the tracks of the could be spent this year to great advantage, but we have been able to allot that place only $500 and the town has raised $1400 of its own funds. That is all there is to work with there.

"In Lynnfield the infestation is very bad and it is on the main line of the Newburyport turnpike, which renders the situation at that place especially dangerous. Lynnfield has raised $294 and the State has been able to allot it only $1500 more, while $10,000 could be used to advantage in that town. I might go on down a long line but those examples show conditions pretty well and just why it is impossible at present to enforce the power which the law gives us to make people clean their holdings, when they seem disinclined to do so of their own accord. More funds or greater voluntary co-operation by property owners, is what we want."

Old Tanner Dead.

Mr. Peter Cloutier, a currier in this town for the past fifty years, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Moffett on Main street, Tuesday of cancer of the throat. He was 75 years of age.

Mr. Cloutier was born in Quebec, Canada, and came to this town fifty years ago, entering the blank tannery, at which place he had remained until six weeks previous to his death. He leaves a wife, Angela, two daughters, Mrs. Mary Moffett of this town and Mrs. Clara Merengo of Beverly; and one son, Joseph Cloutier of North Cambridge.

Funeral services were held Thursday morning from St. Mary's Church at nine o'clock, Fr. Rogers officiating. The bearers were Omar, Archie, Alfred and Adair Laforte. The display of flowers was very beautiful and included tokens from many friends. The interment was at Calvary Cemetery, Montvale.

Who Would Take Charge at a Fire.

EDITOR OF THE STAR: Suppose for some reason Chief Engineer Symmes should be absent from town during the day time, who would have charge of the firemen at a fire. Of the three engineers two are in Boston throughout the day. Mr. Editor there should be at least one engineer in town at all times, day and night, and it is a mistake to have it otherwise.

EX. FIREMAN.

Mr. Robert McGinity is suffering from a split heel, received at the Woburn Auditorium fire last week.

B. & M. R. R., thence descending by a graceful curve to a junction with Main street again, entering same at a point near the bridge in front of the Sullivan Cutter estate.

Starting again at first named point, viz., junction of Main street and Parkway from a point at the southeast corner of machine shop and rise by a causeway or trestle in a curved line and by easy grade directly over the premises now covered by the old S. C. Small furniture factory, then still ascending over Laraway's plumbing shop, then in a nearly straight line, but still rising, over the old house on the corner of Thompson street, over Blanchard, Kendall's & Co.'s office, to the highest point, viz.: a bridge over the B. & M. R. R. tracks, then slightly descending over the south end of the Common to Church street, entering same about opposite the brick apartment house.

ADVANTAGES OF THIS LAYOUT.

Abolition of the grade crossing by the erection of two overhead bridges, one at the station and the other at the junction of the Woburn branch with the Main line of the railroad.

Settlement of the vexed question of the widening of Main street opposite Whitney's machine shop.

Provision and preparation for the extension of an avenue to connect with Cross Street in Bad Condition.

Those residents at the Highlands who take the trains at the station in that part of the town had a strenuous time this week in trying to keep their feet dry while going through Cross street. This street has been perhaps the worst in town for many years past, yet the residents have kept their tempers from year to year in hope that conditions might be improved. They believe that the time has now arrived for the Selectmen to rebuild the street, and accord to them the same privileges as are given those persons who use the other streets. Cross street is the only connecting thoroughfare in town that has not been rebuilt. It connects the Highlands with Woburn and consequently is much used by teams and pedestrians. The residents hope that at least a beginning will be made this season by rebuilding a part of the street even if there is not sufficient money to do the entire work.

Laid to Rest.

Funeral services were held over the remains of Mrs. Charles A. Ramsdell at her late home on Mt. Vernon street last Saturday afternoon. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends.

Rev. Henry E. Hodge of the First Baptist Church and Rev. D. Augustine Newton of the First Congregational Church conducted the services. The floral tributes were profuse and beautiful—the millinery department of Jordan & Marsh sending a handsome design; the W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Ramsdell had long been a member, a large bunch of lilies of the valley; also many other tributes from loving friends. A quartette, composed of Mrs. A. T. Downer, Miss Helen Palmer, Mr. Earl Richardson and Rev. Henry E. Hodge, tenderly rendered several selections. The remains were interred in Woodlawn.

Mr. C. A. Ramsdell wishes to thank the many friends for their sympathy and words of encouragement during his hour of bereavement.

Bowlers Win Prizes.

The Boston pin bowling tournament at the Calumet Club closed on last Friday evening with the finish of the postponed games. For the past three or four weeks the contest between team 3 and the Tigers had been very close for first place, and up Swanton street, which proposition is now pressing, and will have to be faced very soon.

The present grade of Winchester place is some 8 to 10 feet higher than the road-bed of the railroad and would aid very materially in overcoming the rise necessary to surmount the tracks by an overhead bridge.

A masonry pier could be built between the tracks of the branch and main line, thus obviating any extraordinary span to bridge the four tracks.

No more convenient or central location for a new engine house can be found than the present site, as its situation—midway between the two bridges—will enable the fire department to respond quickly and easily to an alarm on either side of the town.

Electricity from Stoneham would pass down Pleasant street through Converse place (or around Grover's corner and Main street) to Walnut street then over the causeway to Church street and Arlington returning by same route.

Electricity from Woburn over the bridge and the new layout via Winchester place and Converse place, and return by same route.

The land damage will be trifling compared with some of the schemes that have been advanced for the elimination of the grade crossing.

to the last game of the tournament team 3 led by the margin of two points. Its straight win on Friday of four points gave it the place of honor by two points. The Tigers won the second position by a large margin and their bowling throughout the tournament was exceptionally good. The individual prizes for highest single and three string total were each won by T. Price Wilson with 139 and 364 flat. As no bowler was entitled to more than one individual prize, the single string trophy went to Mr. Joseph E. Gendron with 136. Mr. Gendron rolled the best individual game of any man entered in the whole tournament, his average for the entire series of ten matches being almost 104.

Following is the standing of the prize winning teams:

1st team prize—Greatest number of points. Won by team 3. T. Price Wilson, capt., W. D. Richards, S. E. Newman, Simon Redtenbacher, Fred Redtenbacher.

2nd team prize—2nd greatest number of points. Won by team 4 (Tigers). J. E. Gendron, Capt., G. A. Woods, G. W. Fitch, W. E. Wilde, H. T. Dickson.

3rd team prize—Largest single string with handicap. Won by team 6. G. S. Holden, capt., C. A. Lane, J. L. Ayer, G. W. Burgess, D. P. Blaikie.

4th team prize—Largest single string without handicap. Won by team 1. J. E. Corey, capt., G. W. Purrington, A. S. Littlefield, F. C. Keith, E. R. Rooney.

Individual 3 strings with handicap. Won by T. Price Wilson.

Individual single string with handicap. Won by J. E. Gendron.

The prizes, which amounted to nearly sixty dollars in value, consisted of silver berry, olive and soup spoons, cut glass dishes and vases, candle sticks of brass, and silver plated mixers.

Coming!

On Tuesday, April 10th, the last concert of the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, will be given. A popular program will be rendered, so that all may come and enjoy it. The artists are, Miss Ella Chamberlain, whistling soloist, of Boston; Dr. George A. Stiles of Boston, reader; Mr. Ernst Makechnie, violinist, and Mr. William E. Whittaker, tenor, both of Somerville.

The Harmony Club, a string sextet, is sure to make a hit. All of these artists are popular in Winchester, and a full house is assured. Remember! This is the last.

REV. D. J. KELEHER, PH.D.
New Rector of St. Mary's Church.

New Pastor for St. Mary's Church.

Rev. D. J. Keleher, Ph.D., who for the past nine years has been the pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Medway, has been made pastor of St. Mary's parish by Archbishop Williams, to succeed Rev. Fr. H. J. Madden.

Fr. Keleher is one of the best-known clergymen of the archdiocese and a renowned scholar. He has won the affection, not alone of his own flock at Medway, but those of all the other religious beliefs in that vicinity. Fr. Keleher was formerly a professor at the ecclesiastical seminary in Brighton, where he taught sciences.

His transfer from Medway will be the source of deep regret to his parishioners and friends in the parish, but he will be welcomed to his new field of labor.

Rev. Fr. D. J. Keleher was born in Lawrence and his early education was obtained in the schools of that city. He began his academic course at Villanova, and when graduated immediately entered St. Mary's seminary at Baltimore, where he began his studies for the priesthood.

He was ordained by Cardinal Gibbons May 19, 1882, and shortly afterward returned to Boston, and was assigned to an assistant's place at St. Francis de Sales parish in Roxbury.

After remaining at the Roxbury parish for about five years Fr. Keleher was elected to the chair of science at St. John's seminary in Brighton and fulfilled the duties of this important place for about eight years.

It was during his time at the seminary that Fr. Keleher was honored by his alma mater, St. Mary's seminary conferring upon him the degree of doctor of philosophy in 1894.

In November of 1896 Fr. Keleher was made pastor of St. Joseph's parish in Medway.

His labors in Medway are best known by the people of that section who hold him in the highest esteem. The friendly relations existing between the priest and the ministers of the several other denominations in the town have been marked and together they have done much to improve the town.

Calumet Club Notes.

The last smoke talk of the season will be held Saturday evening, March 31. Mr. H. D. McBride, supt. of traffic for the Boston Division of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co., will speak on "Handling telephone calls."

The regular meeting of the club will be held on Tuesday evening, April 3d. The principal business of the meeting will be to act upon an amendment to the constitution, relative to inverting a clause providing for the election of honorary life members.

James B. Connolly, well known, as a writer of sea stories, spoke at the Calumet club smoker, last Saturday evening, on "Ocean Racing." Mr. Connolly was one of the party on board the Fleur-de-Lis, which competed for the Kaiser's cup last summer. His talk was very interesting, and his audience one of the largest of the winter. His description of scenes and incidents in ocean racing was vivid and picturesque. Refreshments followed the evening's entertainment.

Unitarian Vespers.

The last in the series of vespers at the Unitarian Church will be held next Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The sermon will be delivered by the Rev. James De Normandie, D.D., of Roxbury. Dr. De Normandie is pastor of the "Eliot Church," founded by the great "Apostle to the American Indians." The music will be rendered by a double quartette, under the direction of Mrs. Geo. H. Lockman. Sopranos, Miss Zella Cole and Miss Edith C. Patterson; altos, Miss Eva F. Wessells and Mrs. Flossie Clyde Thomas; Tenors, Messrs. W. W. Hodson and Charles N. Hall; Basses, Messrs. T. N. Shufelt and Chas. D. Waterman. The musical order will be as follows:

Organ: Fantasia. Guiraud.
Anthem: "The Lord is my Light." Parker.
Male Quartette: "The Lord is God." Trovbridge.
Male Quartette: "The Lord's Prayer." Mason.
Soprano solo: "Save me, O God." Randiger.
Miss Edith C. Patterson.
Male Quartette: Sunset. Van de Water.
Organ: Finale, ans op 142. Voickmser.

prove the condition of the people in general. Fr. Keleher made many improvements in the church property in Medway during his pastorate there.

Fr. Keleher preached his farewell sermon to the parishioners of St. Joseph's Church last Sunday and came here this week to assume his new duties.

Rev. Mr. Keleher preached his farewell sermon at the 10:30 o'clock mass last Sunday at Medway and the edifice was filled to the doors with a congregation that represented all elements in town. As he spoke words of farewell the reverend pastor was unable to withhold his tears and all through the sacred edifice sobs of the parishioners were noticeable. He said in part:

"My Dear Friends: I do not like to talk about myself, especially on an occasion like this. I am not going to prolong my last farewell. I remember with pleasure when I first came to this parish nine years ago last November. I was a stranger to the congregation, but now we are all friends. There has always been harmony and peace amongst us in the parish. All are united and I hope that it will always be so."

"Now for the last time, no matter what may come in your path, remember the duty you owe to yourself, to save your own soul and be faithful to your church."

"Try to love one another, and rise above the imperfections of human nature."

"During my pastorate I have never been confronted with difficulties in money matters. The pastors who preceded me had left the parish in a good financial condition. I was not a financier or a money raiser, but have made many substantial improvements since coming to the church property. While I could have raised and spent more money I felt that the people of the congregation had done well, and I never have been hard on a poor man."

"The parish is in a good financial condition and at present there is nearly $5000 in the bank. Try and remember the few words I have spoken to you; always remember me with your prayers and good wishes, and may God bless you all."

Demain—Richburg.

A pretty home wedding took place on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Richburg of Winchester Park, when their daughter, Henrietta, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Evans Demain of Malden. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Augustine Newton of the First Congregational Church at seven-thirty, and was followed by a reception. The guests included the relatives and a few invited friends from Malden, Cambridge, Lowell and Dorchester.

The bride was very becomingly gowned in Persian lawn, trimmed with lace, and carried bride roses. She was given in marriage by her father. The bridesmaid was her sister, Miss Bertha J. Richburg, who wore blue and white silk muslin and also carried roses. Mr. Frederick E. Mason of Malden was best man. The ushers were Messrs. Arthur W. Demain of Malden, Alfred G. Richburg of Beverly, George W. Richburg of Dorchester and Frederick G. Field of Brockton.

Mrs. William T. Soulee played the wedding march, and Mr. Soulee sang several selections. Following the reception the couple left on a wedding journey. They will visit Portland, Lewiston and other Maine cities, and upon their return will reside for a time with the bride's parents, Winchester park. Many handsome presents of cut glass, silver and china were received, besides a substantial check.

A Pleasant Reunion.

The 18th annual reunion of the Luther V. Bell School of Somerville was held at the home of Mr. F. N. Kerr, Lakeview road, last Friday evening. Forty members of the class sat down to small tables and were served with dinner at seven o'clock. Following this was a business meeting, at which letters were read from Mayor Grimmons of Somerville, Mr. G. A. Southworth, Supt. of Schools, and Mr. S. Henry Hadley, teacher of music in the schools of that city. A half hour's play by six of the ladies, and character songs by a few of the gentlemen, provided the evening's entertainment.

Mrs. Frank Winn has been confined to the house about a week with grippe. She is now much improved.

The Why and Wherefore of Mixed Paints.

The manufacture of paint and of varnish as special industries is a comparatively recent development. Within less than a century painters ground their dry colors in oil with slab and muller and either "cut" shellac in alcohol in a churn or boiled up gums and solvents in a pot over the kitchen fire. It was the physical impossibility of meeting in this way the demand of a rapidly growing population of wooden-house builders that led to the establishment of paint and varnish factories.

At first only white lead and colors were ground in oil and supplied in paste form to painters, who combined them with the necessary thinners in the shop. But custom is a tyrant, yielding only to force, and up to fifty years ago there were still old painters who bought and "mulled" their own colors.

The second step towards specialization was the Yankee invention of ready-mixed paint, about the middle of the last century.

The step was perfectly logical: if white lead ground in oil by machinery, and pigments ground in oil by machinery are better and cheaper than the same materials ground by hand in the paint shop, why wouldn't it be better and cheaper to leave the whole process of paint-making and mixing to the paint factory? Hence the modern paint factory and the modern ready-mixed paint.

Painters as a class are opposed to ready-mixed paints; partly because they have been educated to the use of another form of paint; partly because the workman is always conservative; and partly because painters believe, wrongly of course, that shon mixing is profitable, whereas it is a self-evident fact that hand labor can never compete, either in cost or efficiency, against machine labor. Unpainted wood or metal will decay, while the regular, judicious use of good paint will preserve wood or metal indefinitely. That fact being self-evident, the choice of paint becomes the important consideration, and here we are led inevitably back to ready-mixed paint as the logical up-to-date conclusion.

The case seems to us so clear and simple as to be scarcely worth arguing about. On the one hand, we have white lead, etc., ground to a thick paste in linseed oil and tinting colors of various kinds (pure or impure), also ground to a thick paste. These the painter must mix with a paddle in a paint bucket with large quantities of linseed oil, turpentine and liquid dryers. Whatever his skill or patience he cannot in this way produce a uniform mixture.

On the other hand we have ready-mixed paints, prepared by machinery in a paint factory, equipped for analysis and testing. The paint manufacturer's living depends on his ability to give the best satisfaction at the lowest cost. It is a matter of experience that the manufacturer in any line who fails to "make good" does not last.

As far as the consumer is concerned, if he does not make the "penny-wise-and-pound-foolish" mistake of trying to save money on the cost of his paint, he is perfectly safe in buying and using any high-grade ready-mixed paint in the market, bearing the brand of a reputable manufacturer.

But it is far better and more economical to use any paint than to use no paint or to use paint too infrequently, and this, it strikes the writer, is a field where the press of the country have it in their power to do a great economic service, in the way of education.

Blanchard, Kendall & Co. carry a full line of the best mixed paints.

Country Newspapers.

It occurred to us this week as we ran over our thirty or forty exchanges to note the moral tone in them. These papers are of all sizes and grades, from almost every variety of town and are edited by practical men who are pretty well acquainted with the world, the flesh and the devil, and in not one of them did we find a defense of immorality.

In not one of them did we find a semblance of a defense of whisky. In none of them was there a trace of vulgarity, and none taught or justified dishonesty. Neither could be found a sneer at purity, at religion, at the best things in life. In many of them are excellent bits of advice, little homely sermons on temperance in all things, frugality. Whenever there was mention of the public schools it was in terms of praise. To be sure, here and there was funked at sham and some scorn at pretense, but the note in every one of these papers was for decency, progress, enlightenment, morality.

Many of these editors during the thirteen years we have been publisher have grown to know personally, and of those whose papers reach our desk not one is a drinking man, not one a confirmed gambler, not one a libertine. A pretty decent lot they are. In fact, we doubt if any other profession can offer a higher or even as high a showing. Besides all this, the country editor is proverbially liberal, free hearted in every way. No public subscription list ever passes him without his mite—[Exchange]

E. C. Hanseom on Schidlofski Jury.

[Written by E. C. Hanseom at the request of The Reading Chronicle.]

It may be of interest to some of your readers to know how a jurymen drawn on a murder trial case feels. I will say right here that I wouldn't miss that experience for anything, neither would I want to be on another case of that kind.

A jurymen is practically locked up all the time. He is guarded by two deputy sheriffs going to and from school, he cannot speak to anyone or buy a cigar or tobacco; he cannot even speak to the waiter. If he wants anything he tells the sheriff, and he gets it. We were furnished anything we wanted except liquor. All of the jurymen felt grateful to sheriffs "Billy" Welch and "Charlie" Wightman, under whose charge we were, for the ideal manner in every way in which they treated us.

We usually left the court room about five p. m. Supper would be furnished about seven, and if pleasant the sheriffs gave us a walk for exercise. Then came writing home and reading. We had all the late magazines and daily papers. The papers looked like a checker board. Everything concerning Schidlofski's trial was cut out. We had cards and played whist, pitch and another game. This game you don't use a pencil to keep account with. We used some little squares of pasteboard we found there. I called it quite interesting. Sometimes one had all the pasteboards and sometimes you had none.

We always passed the evening in the juryroom on the third floor. About 10 or 11 p. m. we retired to our sleeping room, which was the large court room on the first floor, where we found 14 beds all in a bunch. The first two nights there was not much sleep but after that we got used to the surroundings and slept better.

The first five days were very pleasant, but Saturday morning was different. There seemed something to come over the men. They spoke in whispers. There was no more joking or playing tricks. Although nothing was said, I think every man on that jury knew that Saturday morning he had got to say the word that would take a man's life. Many of the jurymen's eyes filled with tears more than once that day, and when he pronounced the word "guilty," the tears flowed from the eyes of our foreman, good old Ben Nichols of Woburn.

Men are Still at Work.

From time to time stories have been printed from various cities and towns saying that of late men have been laid off from the gypsy moth work. According to reports made during the week to the State superintendent, 1200 men are still at work throughout the infested sections of the Commonwealth.

A conference of the state inspectors and division superintendents was held in Superintendent Kirkland's office during the week, at which 24 inspectors and these four division superintendents were present. L. Howard Worthing of the eastern division, with headquarters in Saugus; C. W. Minot of the western division, with headquarters in West Somerville; F. A. Bates of the southern division, with headquarters in Braintree and John W. Enwright of the northern division, with headquarters in Medford. In addition there were also present Supt. Kirkland, Asst. Supt. Dexter H. Rogers of Boston, Franklin B. Mosher, superintendent of the parasite propagation station in Saugus, Prof. C. H. Fernald, the State entomologist and Sec. John Farley.

Supt. Kirkland addressed the gathering, explaining plans for the moth campaign for the coming months as outlined in his recent annual report to the State Legislature. He also told the results of the recent visit of Dr. L. O. Howard, head of the National bureau of entomology, to the parasite station in Saugus and how experiments made at that time had proven the success of the attempts at importing the foreign parasites. He also pointed out that present expectations are to the effect that many millions of the parasites will be available for liberation in the moth infested sections this spring.

The four division superintendents each reported upon conditions in his district, each saying that encouraging results are being attained and that more than ever individual property owners are cleaning up the trees on their premises. This statement was further verified by the reports made by the 24 inspectors present.

Prof. C. H. Fernald spoke briefly upon the scientific side of the work, his words being particularly valuable to all present.

It had been expected that the committee on agriculture of the State Legislature would make a field trip during the present week to inspect moth conditions, but this has been postponed until later in the session, as the members are particularly desirous of seeing the insects, in the caterpillar form, at work denuding the trees. Few members of the legislature have seen such a sight and it is safe to say there is a big surprise in store for some of the members of the committee on agriculture when their desire is gratified.

In reference to what has been printed in regard to the trouble over the moth work at Saugus, which resulted in the State ordering all work there stopped, it may be said that the matter has now been satisfactorily arranged. The town elect as superintendent of the moth work, a machinist, who however skillful he might be as a mechanic, had no training in moth work. The town has expended all of its own appropriation and is now working on state funds. For that reason Supt. Kirkland objected to an untrained man at the head of the work there. A week of valuable time has been lost because of the incident.

After a conference of the State superintendent and the past and present superintendents of the Saugus work, it was arranged that all of the old gang shall remain and in addition a new "green" gang will be put at work to push matters. The new "green" gang will be utilized in treating the egg clusters en masse in the woodlands, where now the eggs cause the bark of the tree to appear yellow, so numerous are they. This new gang will go at them with brushes and pails of cresote, and following the new hands will come the old gang of moth men, who will do the difficult work in the tree tops and that which requires a knowledge of the habits of the insects. In fact they will finish up the work of the "green" gang and will be directed by W. A. Hatch, who is thoroughly experienced in the work to be done. For looking for egg clusters on the bottoms of fence rails and other concealed places, the men are being equipped with cheaply made hand mirrors.

After a conference recently, in regard to the work to be done in fighting the moths in Pine Banks park, the cities of Malden and Melrose have each made an appropriation of $5000 for the work. With this $10,000 fund to work with an increased number of men have been put at work there and will be able to do a great amount of valuable work before the eggs hatch out.

Practical Eye Wash.

A little salt and water used as an eye wash will cleanse and strengthen inflamed lashes and rest tired eyes. It is safe to use it at any time that irritation is felt. A New York surgeon prescribes the ocean for bad eyes, particularly young eyes. "Get off," he says, "whenever you can and let the salt and the sea breeze wash and blow around your eyes. It will do them good. It will dislodge the germs of disease, for the air breathed by half the world is germ laden, and sore eyes are more quickly caught than small-pox and more fatal. It will brighten and strengthen them and prolong their beauty and usefulness."

For Thin Babies

Fat is of great account to a baby; that is why babies are fat. If your baby is scrawny, Scott's Emulsion is what he wants. The healthy baby stores as fat what it does not need immediately for bone and muscle. Fat babies are happy; they do not cry; they are rich; their fat is laid up for time of need. They are happy because they are comfortable. The fat surrounds their little nerves and cushions them. When they are scrawny those nerves are hurt at every ungentle touch. They delight in Scott's Emulsion. It is as sweet as wholesome to them.

Winchester Boys' Chance.

It is hoped some of our boys will enter the competitive examination for a cadetship at the Military Academy and also for the Naval Academy. This examination takes place in Winchester, Saturday, April 7. We are convinced that the town has bright boys enough to at least win out on one of the prizes.

Grade Crossing.

Attention is called to the article and plan on first page relating to abolishing the present grade crossing. The prospects point decidedly to the fact that the tracks of the railroad will not be disturbed and that they will be bridged. How important it is, therefore, that there be more than one bridge to maintain communication with both sides of the town. If the scheme as presented on first page is carried out there will be two bridges. The expense would not be so very heavy, as the land damages would not be near so great as would be the case if the streets and buildings in the center were raised. And furthermore the appearance of that part of the town adjacent to the crossing would remain as at present, and end greatly to be desired by all. Careful thought should be bestowed on this plan.

Selectmen's Proceedings.

It turns out that the report that the Selectmen would not hereafter make public their doings, was not correct. The members, we are pleased to state, believe in publicity. This is as it should be, and is only fair to the inhabitants who desire to keep in touch with town affairs by knowing what is taking place. Second hand and hearsay reports of the proceedings of the Selectmen or any other town department, are sure to be, in many cases, printed in a distorted or incorrect form, and for this reason it for no other, it is better to have them correct and stamped with the official seal of approval.

Grade Crossing Hearing.

The Commission on abolition of the grade crossing will give a hearing in the Selectmen's room next Tuesday forenoon at 10 o'clock. From all that we can learn the public will not be allowed to take part in the discussion. The town having committed itself by vote to abolishing the crossing, its interest in the hearing will be represented by the town counsel who will strive to have the crossing abolished. No other parties will be allowed to present their views other than the town, the Boston & Northern, the Boston & Maine and the State.

The matter passed beyond the control of any possible individual remonstrants, we are informed, when that vote was passed by the town. We give this information for the benefit of any property owners or other persons who desire to appear before the commission as remonstrants. The battle is to be solely between the above parties. This hearing is strictly for the purpose of ascertaining whether the crossing should be abolished or not.

Rosa Spinissima—Burnet or Scotch Rose.

The Scotch Rose is widely known, but singularly is seldom seen in cultivation, and is excessively rare. The foliage is small and dark, deeply serrated and distinct from any other variety. The flowers are single, pure white and pink, and it is a most persistent bloomer during a large portion of mid-summer, while the deep black hips or seed pods during winter make it a beautiful and desirable ornamental shrub. "House and Garden," speaks of it in the March number: "In June—the month of roses—it comes as a bride all decked in white, and pure paper white, centered with a dish of golden anthers." This rose seems to be exempt from insect pests and fungus diseases. We have a limited number of these beautiful roses, pot grown stocky plants to offer. Shady Hill Nursery Co., Bedford, Mass.

Baptist Church Notes.

At the 7 o'clock meeting Sunday evening we had the unexpected pleasure of hearing Mr. Farhood, a former resident of Galilee, speak of life in Palestine as it is today. He was a missionary for three years among the Lebanon Mountains. At the Men's League Banquet on Monday evening, twenty-eight men sat down to a delicious supper served by a caterer. In a very novel and original way Mr. Henry E. Lingham presented a paper on current events. The speaker of the evening was the Rev. Hermon S. Pinkham of Somerville, who gave a brilliant address on "The Truly Successful Man." The next meeting of the League will be April 30th, and that will be ladies' night. Wednesday evening topic will be, "Lessons from Jeremiah." Thursday, sewing meeting, 10 to 4. Friday evening, Merrimac St. Mission evening. Monday, 3 p. m. Woman's Missionary meeting, with Mrs. Mary L. Winn, Topic, "News from Cuba and Porto Rico." Mrs. Kneeland, associational secretary, will speak. Monday, 8 p. m. Mission Study Class, with Mrs. E. C. Sanderson. After a short lesson, mission work in Africa will be illustrated by a stereopticon talk.

Yesterday noon a large two horse farm wagon, owned by Lucius Bebe of Wakefield, hauling another empty wagon, to which a horse was tied was coming over Cambridge street from Arlington, when an automobile came up behind and frightened the horse in the rear. The animal plunged and reared and came down upon a stake at the end of the second wagon, driving it through his lungs. It was found necessary to shoot the horse. Many people who passed the scene in the electric's thought some terrible accident had occurred as indeed it appeared, with the teams standing around the dead horse and the ground covered with blood.

SELECTIONS FROM "THE REDEMPTION," BY GOUNOD

Organ Introduction

The Promise of Redemption.

Celestial Choir.—The earth is My possession;
I leave My heavenly home
To atone for transgression;
O My Father, lo, I come.

Invocation

March to Calvary.

Narrator.—And while Jesus went up the mount, and bore His cross, there followed after women, who wept and bewailed Him.

Chorus.—Alas! they go then to put Him to death: it must be the Just One will perish. Behold, how He has fallen, a second time has fallen!

Narrator.—And the Lord heard their words, and, turning to them, spake thus:—

Jesus.—Ye daughters of Israel, weep ye not for Me, but weep ye for yourselves, and weep ye for your children, Jerusalem is faithless found.

Chorus.—Forth the Royal Banners go.

Before our eyes appearing:

The Cross, in mystic glow,

Is power and love declaring:

To make us free doth One its bondage know:

As Man, the Lord Himself the weight of sin is bearing.

Scripture Reading

The Crucifixion.

Narrator.—And the Lord in His Love for mankind never failing, on behalf of his slayers for pardon implores.

Jesus.—Pardon their sin, My Father pardon their sin, for they do not know what they do.

Quartette.—O, My vineyard, come tell me why thy grapes are bitter,

What have I done My people?

Wherein hast thou been wronged?

Did I not bring thee out from the land of the stranger?

Made I thee not to pass through the depths of the sea?

Sent I not food from heaven, and gave meat in abundance?

Did manna ever cease till thou camest to Canaan?

Reply, unthankful race, reply

And thou, for all this love, preparest Me the Cross, whereupon I shall die.

Prayer

Quartette and Chorus.

Beside the Cross remaining,

A face the Mother wears

Unresisting, uncomplaining.

And yet the grief she bears

Her heart in sunder tears,

Mary:

While my watch I am keeping,

Ye that go by, sinners,

Gaze at the Mother weeping,

Torn by anguish unsleeping;

Responsive Reading (The congregation will please rise.)

The Death of Jesus.

Minister.—Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land until the ninth hour.

People.—And about the ninth hour Jesus cried out with a loud voice, saying, "My God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Minister.—Jesus, when He had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the Ghost.

People.—And behold the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, and the earth did quake, and the rocks were rent, and the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints which slept arose.

Minister.—Now when the Centurion and they that were with him watching Jesus saw the earthquake and these things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, "Truly this was the Son of God."

Choral.—For us the Christ is made a victim availing,

Yea, unto death, and the death of the Cross;

In vain our ancient foe will mankind be assailing.

To him who now has died shall be triumph unailing.

O Death, thou art discredited, thou gainest only loss.

Faith unswerving, holy Hope, that unconquered remaineth.

Heavenly Love, ever young; for them thanks do we raise.

Thou, by Whose Death and Passion, Man unto Heaven attaineth,

O Christ, Thee we adore, and unto Thee give praise.

Solo and Chorus.—From Thy love as a Father,
O Lord, teach us to gather
That Life will conquer Death,
They who seek things eternal
Shall rise to light supernal
On wings of lowly faith.

Sermon by Rev. John G. Taylor

Chorus.—Lovely appear over the mountains

The feet of them that preach, and bring good news of peace.

Solo.—Ye mountains, ye perpetual hills, how ye down.

Over the barren wastes shall flowers now have possession.

Dark shades of ancient days, full of hate and oppression,

In the brightness of joy fade away, and are gone.

In this age, truly blest more than ages preceding,

Shall the corn never fail from the plentiful ground;

Under the shining sky shall the lambs gaily bound;

Void of fear, undisturbed, safely shall they be feeding;

Then the timorous doves, wheresoever they fly,

Shall not fear any more the hawk's merciless cry.

Chorus.—Lovely appear over the mountains

The feet of them that preach, and bring good news of peace.

Ye mountains, ye perpetual hills, how ye down.

Over the barren wastes shall flowers now have possession.

Dark shades of ancient days, full of hate and oppression,

In the brightness of joy fade away, and are gone.

The Ascension

Chorus.—Unfold ye Portals Everlasting,

With welcome to receive Him ascending on high.

Behold the King of Glory! He mounts up through the sky.

Back to the heavenly mansions hastening.

Unfold, for lo, the King comes nigh.

But who is He, the King of Glory?

He who death overcame, the Lord in battle mighty.

Of Hosts he is the Lord; of angels and of powers,

The King of Glory is the King of the Saints.

Prayer and Benediction

Why Read the Advertising Signs?

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

Apologues to the discussion about advertising signs, why would it not be a good thing for those who do not like them, not to look at them or know about them in any way whatever. I have been to Boston every day about my daily business, have frequently been up Tremont street and have not once seen the much advertised signs which disturb many nice people so very much. Does it not make these signs all the more valuable as advertising mediums to talk so much about them? Let a questionable book get "talked about" and no matter how bad it is, everybody wants to read it. Some people will go into company and return home loaded with information as to what everybody had on for clothes and jewelry while another, equally intelligent person would not know anything about the dress or showy belongings of one person present. Why is this? Because each mind takes in just what naturally attracts it. If a certain mind likes glitter and showy personal exterior, it will be attracted by it and it likes substantial mind food, it will get it if any of the company indicate they possess it and will part with it. It seems to me there is almost too much cheap talk, condemning people who put up advertising signs as a business. If it did not pay they would not do it. It does pay because people read the signs and are influenced by them. If everybody let them alone as I do, no one would put them up. I do not believe one in a hundred Winchester people knew of the signs along the railroad above the center out of the way of highways or streets until some one called attention to the enormity and wickedness of putting up such signs for money. Why not let all cheap sights alone and look at something better. The sun, moon and star shine as of old, the clouds make beautiful pictures and gracefully chase each other as they always did; we have the sunrise and sunset to look at clothed in fresh beauty every day. Why pay any attention to such little blemishes as sign boards which foolish people put up and still more foolish people read and devour until it makes them sick and they can see nothing else or talk about anything else? Let them alone, pay no attention to them but fill the mind with better information than they advertise and the hated sign board will die a natural death for it will have nothing to feed upon if the public let them alone.

Last Wednesday morning a musicale was given at the High School building by the Schumann Quintet club assisted by Miss Marion M. Rice, contralto, and Miss Evelyn Parker accompanist, for the High School pupils.

The musicale which was in charge of Walter L. Rice was in every way a great success and was greatly enjoyed by the scholars and many townspeople.

Mr. Charles E. Richardson read a paper on the life of Schumann. The Schumann Quintet Club consists of Miss Florence Park, piano; Mr. Ernest Makechnie, violin; Miss Bernice Hilton, violin; Mr. Walter L. Rice, viola; and Mr. John Paulson, cello. Following is the programme.

A Musical Program at The Fortnightly.

The regular meeting of the Fortnightly was held in the small Town Hall on Monday last.

A report from the Federation Bazaar gave as proceeds between $1000 and $5000, the table in which The Fortnightly was interested netted $740.

Mrs. Tracy gave notice of a proposed amendment to the By-Laws regulating the programs of the year. Discussion in regard to the matter will take place at the next meeting and a large attendance is desirable.

The afternoon program was in charge of Mrs. Dunning, chairman of the music committee, and it is needless to say was of great interest.

Miss Virginia Stickney gave a most acceptable rendering of her numbers. The serenade by Freine was encored, and Miss Stickney responded with a beautiful Andante by Gollermann.

Miss Daly showed careful work especially in her Rhapsody by Brahms.

Mrs. Young in her songs, was enthusiastically received and responded twice to encores; she has a sweet clear voice and was especially effective in the old English ballads of her last two numbers.

At the close of the musicale a social hour followed, with tea served by Mrs. Wallis, assisted by Mrs. Irving Palmer and Mrs. L. H. Spaulding.

Members of The Fortnightly are requested to take note that at the next meeting of the club on April 9th the question of a change in a By-Law is to be discussed.

A delightful entertainment is also promised in the lecture with stereopticon on "Madonnas Old and New" by Mrs. Marie Moore. Come and bring your friends as it is a rare opportunity to hear a lecture of this kind. Guests tickets 25 cents.

Submission to Voters Questions of Public Policy.

EDITOR OF THE STAR:

The election laws committee have made a favorable report of inclosed house bill No. 213. It is of so much importance to our town, I wish you would give it to your readers; if not space for all of it, at least section 3, and I would ask all who take an interest in this important reform to write Representative Barker B. Howard to support it with his vote.

WHITFIELD TUCK.

Section 3. On a written application signed by ten per centum of the registered voters of a city or town, asking for the submission to the voters of the city or town of any question of public policy for an expression of opinion, the city or town clerk, as the case may be, shall place such question on the official ballot if official ballots are used. Where official ballots are not used at city or town elections, the city or town clerk shall furnish ballots for such question.

Echoes.

Well the annual town meeting is over and with few mistakes. Too much was appropriated for the moth's suppression, at this time at least, otherwise nothing of importance went wrongly. The Appropriations Committee made a good report which was followed in most all particulars.

It is a mistake on general principles to allow committees to be appointed in any other way than at the town meeting. All the democratic features of the town meeting should be retained and not impaired in any way.

Castle Square

Washington's Way

By WILLIS EMERY

Copyright, 1906, by Charles N. Lurie

A LITTLE old building of one story in the corner of a lumber yard contained the offices of John Wadsworth. The exterior was as plain as possible and showed the touch of age. Within there were solid and costly furnishings and a general aspect of confidence and long sustained prosperity.

By a desk in a railed and screened enclosure Miss Hilda Lawrence was opening the morning mail. She always opened all of Mr. Wadsworth's letters. Private communications addressed to him as political boss of the ward never came to the lumber yard.

In one of the envelopes which Hilda opened on this particular morning she found a check drawn to the order of the bearer for $200 and signed with an illegible scrawl. It was the first time that she had seen a remittance in that form, and she glanced at the accompanying letter curiously. It was upon a plain sheet of paper, and there was no name at the beginning or the end of it.

Included find balance due. You have delivered the goods and are entitled to your money. I am sick, out of town, or would have fixed this in person yesterday.

Hilda knew instantly that this was payment for a political service of a disreputable nature, and she was filled with vicious spite at the thought of it and with a sudden faintness of surprise. It was incredible even in the face of this evidence that Mr. Wadsworth could traffic in his own influence and augment his wealth with petty bribes. The worst that she had ever believed of him was that he consorted with men who were accused of such offenses and held his leadership with their approval.

It was clear, however, that this check did not figure in an ordinary business transaction, and so instead of putting it with the others she returned it to the envelope, and thus the superscription came for the first time under her eye. The letter had been directed not to Mr. Wadsworth, but to John W. Allen. Beneath the name an address had been crossed off with a lead pencil, and the words "Try care of Wadsworth Lumber company" had been written by a carrier.

Hilda shifted her position a very little so that she could look past the edge of the screen and see Allen at his desk on the other side of the room. He was a young man whom Mr. Wadsworth had taken into his employ about a year ago at the request of a friend. At that time Allen had evidently been in sore straits, and he had subsequently shown a valuable gratitude and a steadily waning industry. Of late he had been occupied with an odd service, for which he had exhibited remarkable aptitude. He had been writing speeches for Mr. Wadsworth.

For the first time in a long career of politics John Wadsworth had found a use for oratory. A strange ambition had taken possession of him. He aspired to office. The congressman elect in that district had died. A special election was to be held, and Wadsworth had quietly passed round the word that he would be the candidate of his party in the caucus.

Up to recent days a hint from Wadsworth would have been equivalent to a nomination, and his election would have been assured. But a change had come over the complexion of the district. In a part of it where there had been small business buildings and considerable vacant land a surprising number of large apartment hotels had sprung up. A "silk stocking" element had thus been brought in, and its influence was becoming more and more momentous.

Wadsworth, though a very rich man and of excellent ancestry, was not a silk stocking, and his sympathies and political strength lay with the horny handed toilers and small merchants. He had been influential in establishing throughout the district a great many little clubs and societies which were not controlled by professional politicians.

It had been plausibly represented to Wadsworth that the silk stockings were trying to get a grip on the clubs and that something would have to be done about it. Thus there arose in Wadsworth's mind the notion of a speechmaking tour, to be very quietly conducted, before the caucus, and thus John Allen's remarkable talent for writing short addresses became known to his employer. Wadsworth himself had never made a set speech in his life.

He had no difficulty in learning and delivering the speeches, for his confidence in his memory was absolute. He had, indeed, a wonderful gift, such as one sees in a very bright child at the so called "memory age." A page of the dictionary to be recited forward or backward would not have appalled Wadsworth, though he was past forty-five.

When Hilda glanced across the room at Allen she judged that he was reading the manuscript of a speech which he had prepared on the previous day, doubtless the one which Wadsworth was to deliver at the Washington's birthday banquet the following evening. This banquet was to be given under the auspices of a coterie of silk stockings who were known to be bitterly opposed to the candidacy of Wadsworth, and there had been surprise among the wise when he received his invitation. The general opinion was that an attempt would be made during the evening to show the strength of the opposition within the party and perhaps start a boom for another candidate right before Wadsworth's eyes. Hilda had heard these rumors, and she was sorely grieved by the thought that a man who was at heart so honest should face his enemies with no better ammunition than a speech written by a hired rascal and delivered mechanically, in the manner of a phonograph. That this performance should take place in the name of the honored Father of His Country made it even more distressing.

"Mr. Allen?"

The young man arose slowly and crossed to Hilda.

"This was with Mr. Wadsworth's mail," she said. "I opened it by mistake."

She gave him the letter, from which the check protruded. His face flushed suddenly. He looked at her steadily.

"You read this note," said he. And Hilda inclined her head.

Allen himself had not yet read it, and he supposed that it was much more definite.

"What do you intend to do?" he asked.

"I shall tell Mr. Wadsworth."

Allen showed no alarm.

"I will not remind you," said he after a pause, "that your information comes from my private correspondence. I am perfectly willing that you should lay this matter before Mr. Wadsworth, but upon one condition."

"State it."

"I can prove that this affair is entirely legitimate, but I cannot do it today. Tomorrow is a holiday; we shall be here. My condition is that you wait until the following morning so that your accusation and my defense may be laid before Mr. Wadsworth at the same time."

"I will wait," said Hilda after brief hesitation, "though I have no faith in your defense. You have taken pay for influencing Mr. Wadsworth's action in some political matter. He will never forgive you."

"We shall see," responded Allen with such complete assurance that Hilda was deeply disturbed.

She was tempted to exercise a woman's privilege and recall her promise, but was restrained by something in Allen's manner. As he turned away he seemed to be suppressing a laugh.

During the forenoon she was busy with dictation, and at the close of it Wadsworth said:

"I shall be away this afternoon, but if you'll leave the letters for me I'll come over this evening and send them off."

Accordingly about 5 o'clock Hilda entered the private office carrying the letters. The room was dark and cold, and a gust of wind as she opened the door scattered some paper along the floor. She turned on the light, closed the window and began to gather up the loose sheets that had been dislodged by the draft. They revealed themselves as belonging to the Washington address which Allen had written. It must have been lying on the leaf of the desk. A sentence in the manuscript attracted Hilda's attention:

"Because of the undeniable greatness of Washington's nature friends of liberty were emboldened to defend our cause even in the legislative halls of England, where Pitt and Sir Isaac Newton and the celebrated Sir Boyle Roche."

Hilda stared aghast. Then she hastily put the pages in order and read the address from beginning to end with rising wrath. It was a bold and clever attempt to make Mr. Wadsworth ridiculous. It abounded in the names of his torial personages, some of them dead and others in swaddling clothes at the rate in question and nearly all grotesquely out of place in the recital.

Mr. Wadsworth's information about public men and measures of his own time was wide and accurate; his ignorance of older history was sublime. The chances were very great that he would learn this monstrous speech and deliver it like a parrot and be forever after the theme of jests.

Hilda looked into the outer office, but Allen had departed. It was clear enough that he would never return and that his bargain with her had been a trick for delay. She rightly guessed that he had brought his corrupt dealings to such a point that flight was imperative and that at the last moment he had accepted a bribe to betray his benefactor.

The trickery in Allen's oration was so cleverly managed and the great names were so lavishly paraded from end to end of it that Hilda dared not trust her own knowledge for a full exposure of its snares. Therefore she took the manuscript to a public library, where she devoured encyclopedias, to the neglect of her dinner, until she could remain no longer without risk of missing Mr. Wadsworth at the office.

As she approached the building she saw that the windows of the private office were dark, but there was a light in the larger room which seemed to be over Allen's desk. Was it possible that he was there? Hilda glanced in that direction instantly upon opening the door and beheld John Wadsworth in Allen's chair reading a book.

He was so absorbed in this task that he did not hear Hilda come in. She stood by the door watching him and wondering at the change in his looks. It was merely the familiar miracle of ancestral influence. A thoroughbred is always a thoroughbred, no matter what his individual experience may have been. An unlearned man, a stranger to books, if he be the true child of book loving ancestors has always something of the student in him which may be long hidden and in a flash revealed.

Hilda felt the blood come warm into her cheeks, and the springs of tears were stirred. It was to her like a meeting with some one whom she had deeply longed to see, one whom she had loved at a distance, upon an impulse of recognition transcending the senses. From that moment, as her instinct told her, it would be impossible for her to deceive herself with the convenient fiction that her feeling toward this man was mere gratitude for kindness and consideration, for a secure and pleasant occupation and the unexpressed friendship of a strong and loyal nature.

"JUST LISTEN TO THIS," HE SAID.

Wadsworth paused in his reading and seemed about to turn the pages back that he might review a previous passage. Then he looked up, and his lips moved. Hilda knew that he was repeating from memory. They were face to face, and yet for an appreciable interval he did not see her, partly because of preoccupation, partly from an accident of the light, which shone now directly into his eyes. When the knowledge of her presence came to him he slowly raised his hand.

"Just listen to this," he said. "You'll see it's true. Nobody could understand it better than you."

Then he repeated slowly and with absolute accuracy some words which he had read more than an hour ago:

"It has been said a thousand times that Washington's policy in this affair is unsurpassed in all the records of diplomacy, but such praise is both a misappreciation and an insult. There is abundant evidence for men of open mind that Washington chose this course simply because it was right, while every possible alternative savored of dishonor."

"Saved of dishonor!" he repeated. "What do you think of it? That's the man. He knew the clean path even when he wouldn't walk in any other. He might as well have said: 'I lost that speech.'"

"Lost it?" repeated Hilda, standing there with the document in her hand.

"Yes. Allen put it in my room—the address I was to deliver tomorrow—and it's gone. I must have dropped it on the floor and it was swept out. I intended to learn it this evening, and when I missed it I didn't know what to do. Allen won't be here tomorrow, and he's just moved. I don't know where he lives. At first I thought I was stuck, and then I remembered this 'Life of Washington' that he used. So it seemed to me that I might dig up something for myself. Well, I did, and that's a fact."

"I am very glad," said she. "Tell me what it is."

"I have learned," said he slowly, "that the right is just the same for little men as for big men. Washington's way and my way do not differ by a hair's breadth. The right path was the same before him as it is before me; it is the same for us all if we have the grace to see it, as my aunt would say. Avoid all that savors of dishonor. Do you know what that means for me?"

She shook her head.

"It means that I can't work for this nomination now, for if I even let it come to me amount, as it won't. There are enough men of my stripe in Washington already—enough politicians. So that settles my speech for tomorrow night. You can write it for me on one sheet of paper. Just say that I am out of the race and that I endorse the silk stocking candidate, who happens to be a clean, able man. That's what I dug out of my book. I heard a scholar say once that the value of moral books was to supply forms of words for honest men's consciences. Your conscience always knows what's right."

"You seem to be pleased," he added, with a smile. "That's queer. The only reason why I wanted to be a congressman was because I thought it might please you—I hoped it might."

"It certainly wouldn't," said she, amazed and puzzled. "Why? I don't even feel sure that I'd be wanted here when you were gone."

"I hoped to take you with me."

"With you—to Washington?"

"There and everywhere. Hilda, don't be frightened. I know you don't care for me. You should marry on your own level, a man of education. And what am I? So give me my answer, and I'll take it reverently and strive to be content—if we may still be just as we have been, and you won't go altogether out of my sight."

It seemed to her that she looked at him blankly, idiotically, and she was ashamed. But to him her face was a beautiful and wondrous revelation, full of the most sacred meaning. He took her hand timidly and raised it to his lips.

How's Your Hair?

Young & Brown Announce That They Have at Last Secured a Cure for Hair Troubles.

We beg to announce to the people of Winchester that we have secured the agency for one of the greatest discoveries of recent years. We refer to the prescription of Sir Erasmus Wilson, M. D., England's most successful specialist in diseases of the scalp, who was knighted for his many successes in the treatment of skin and scalp. Upon the death of Dr. Wilson this prescription was secured by American chemists and is now offered to the public under the name of Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair. This preparation will grow hair on bald heads even after all else fails. Unlike other hair preparations it is not sticky or greasy, but gives a live and glossy appearance to the hair. Miss Cornelia Stevens, 6 Smith Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "Dr. Wilson's English Life to the Hair grew a magnificent head of hair for me after I was told that I was becoming hopelessly bald. My hair now reaches nearly to my waist and is heavy and glossy. I cannot too highly recommend it." If you are growing bald, troubled with eruptions, dandruff, scales or any scalp troubles try Dr. Wilson's Life to the Hair. Albert Chemical Co., Boston Mass., proprietors. HAYSTACK MONUMENT.

Marks Birthplace of Foreign Mission Work in This Country.

Many a visitor to Williams college is taken to the birthplace of American foreign missions, marked by a unique monument in a little park near the college grounds.

For once in the history of the world a prayer meeting is commemorated by a monument. In Mission park in Williams college stands a shaft which was dedicated on Sunday, July 28, 1867, to the memory of five students of Williams college who met at the close of one sultry summer day in the year 1866 to hold a prayer meeting, as was their custom. They were overtaken by a sudden shower of rain and were compelled to seek the friendly shelter afforded them by a neighboring haystack.

The group of young evangelists who were present at the prayer meeting on that particular occasion consisted of Samuel J. Mills, James Richards, Francis L. Robbins, Harvey Loomis and Byron Green.

Sheltered from the rain by the haystack, they continued amid the conflict of the elements their devotional exercises and discussed religious topics of deep interest to themselves. While the storm raged Mills communicated to his fellows the plan of executing a great life work. It was nothing less than a mission to some heathen land and the ultimate evangelization of the world.

They communicated their plan to such of their fellow students as they believed would sympathize with them and organized the Society of Brethren, a secret society, which had for its object the establishment of foreign missions.

The result of the prayer meeting was the organization in Bradford, Mass., in 1870 of the American board of commissioners for foreign missions. From this start grew the great society of the American board, which has distributed millions of dollars. Since the first meeting of five persons its corporate and honorary members have increased to over 70,000.

Years after the students had formed their great scheme of evangelization the spot where they held the prayer meeting was marked by a cedar stake. This led to the purchase of Mission park by the alumni of Williams college and in 1867 to the erection and dedication of what is now known as Haystack monument. The cedar stake monument became marble through Harvey Rice of Cleveland, who designed and at his own expense reared the prayer meeting site marker.

The monument stands on the identical spot where the haystack stood. It is a strictly Berkshire county production, composed of Berkshire marble, quarried at Alford and wrought in the workshops of the Berkshire Marble company. Its height is twelve feet, its shaft, cap and base were polished, its color a silver blue. — New York Tribune.

Hindoo Caste.

The four grades of society among the Hindoos are the Brahmins, or sacerdotal class, who are said at the moment of creation to have issued from the mouth of Brahma; the Kshatriya, or Chutsoo, or military class, sprung from the arm of Brahma; the Vaisya, or Bais, or mercantile class, from the thigh of Brahma; and Sudras, or Soorders, or servile class, from the foot of Brahma. The business of the Sudras is to serve the three superior classes, more especially the Brahmins. Their condition is never to be improved, they are not to accumulate property and are unable by any means to approach the dignity of the higher classes. These divisions are hereditary, impassable and indefeasible.

Meyerbeer.

Meyerbeer was so nervous and "fidgety" about his works that when they were in course of preparation or rehearsal or performance he never gave himself or any one else concerned a moment's peace of mind. He was constantly making changes or alterations in the score and would sometimes write a passage in three or four different colored inks in order to try the different effects and then could not make up his mind which was the best. He worried over his opera "L'Africaine" so long, delaying, retouching and polishing, even while it was in rehearsal, that the self imposed labor made him ill, and he died before the first public performance.

Dynamite Whiskers.

The name "whiskers" is applied to feathery crystals which gather upon the outside of the wrapping of frozen dynamite. The "whiskers" are more "irritable" than dynamite itself. A case is on record where sticks of dynamite had been thawed out in hot water and the can of hot water in which it was done left in the blacksmith shop without being emptied of the residual steam of grease and whiskers. The first blow of the blacksmith's hammer on a nearby anvil was sufficient to set off the whiskers by concussion. The can was blown to pieces, but fortunately no one was hurt.

The Kaffirs.

The Kaffirs are great philosophers. If an ox should die the owner never grieves, but remarks: "Now I must go to work for master all white men who treat them well are called masters, and in six months he will give me a cow. It will have a calf. If it is a bull calf in a year I'll have a pair of oxen, but should it be a heifer calf I'm all the richer for the next year I'll have two calves instead of one."

The opinions of the misanthropical rest upon this very positive basis, they adopt the bad faith of a few as evidence of the worthlessness of all.—Bovee.

HOW'S YOUR STOMACH?

Young & Brown Have a Remedy Which They Guarantee to Cure the Worst Cases of Stomach Troubles.

We wish to tell the readers of this paper about a remedy which is a marvel in medicine. It cures the worst cases of stomach trouble from the acute attack of indigestion to Chronic Dyspepsia. This remedy is known as Albert's Little Dinner Pill, being the prescription of Dr. Hutchinson, the noted specialist of London and Brighton, England, who, previous to his decease had built up a remarkable practice as a specialist in diseases of the stomach. Dr. Hutchinson claimed that his success was due to the use of this Pill, and since its introduction on the American Continent it has performed many wonderful cures. Mr. J. H. Lombard, Case, Me., writes: "I am now past 81 years of age and have had stomach trouble practically all my life. I sent and got a sample package of Albert's Little Dinner Pill, thinking that it would turn out to be more disappointment, but from the first dose I found relief, and can say that I am now better than ever before in my life. It is a wonderful cure for dyspepsia and I heartily recommend it to all sufferers from stomach troubles."

Albert's Little Dinner Pill contains no Physic, no Achi, Alkali, Ginger, Peppin, Panchost, Soda, Morphine, or any preparation of Opium, or in fact, any of the ingredients usually found in so-called dyspepsia cures. It cures by removing the cause and makes the worst cases well, being guaranteed to benefit or the purchase price returned. Sold at drug stores or by mail, 25 cents per package. Sample free. Address: Albert's Little Dinner Pill, Boston, Mass. Sold and guaranteed by Young & Brown, Winchester.

NATURE'S CRUELTY.

The Ichneumon Fly Makes Its Natural Enemy Serve Its Purpose.

The Ichneumon fly of Ceylon is the natural enemy of the spider. This insect is green in color and in form resembles a wasp with a marvelously thin waist. It makes its nest of well worked clay and then goes on a hunting expedition. Its victims are invariably spiders of various kinds, but all are subject to the same mode of treatment. A scientific sting injects some poison which effectively paralyzes the body of the spider, which is then carried off to the nest and there fastened with a dab of moist clay. Another and another victim is brought to this chamber of horrors. Then the president mother Ichneumon fly proceeds to deposit her eggs, one in the body of each spider, which can just move its legs in a vague, aimless manner, but can offer no resistance.

This done, the fly returns to her work as a machine. The prepared mud cell and built up the entrance to this ghastly cell. Then she constructs a new cell, which she deposits in the chamber and then she flies off to find yet another victim to prepare until her store of eggs is all used up. Then, her task in life being accomplished, she dies, leaving her victim to live at leisure. In due time the larva of the maggot came to life and fed themselves on the body of the spider.

Each poor spider is still alive, and his juices afford nutriment for the Ichneumon grub till it is ready to pass in the chrysalis stage, thence to emerge as a winged fly fully prepared to carry out the traditions of its ancestors with regard to spiders.

ANTIQUITY OF FISHING.

The Art of Angling is as Old as the Human Race.

The art of angling no doubt had its origin in man's necessities. The earliest record of mankind makes reference to the taking of fish for food. There are frequent allusions to it in the Bible. Job, in the oldest book of all, says: "Canst thou draw out a leviathan with a hook or his tongue with a cord which thou tighest down? Canst thou put a hook in his nose?" Homer, in the "Iliad," speaks of fishing in these lines: As bounding death in the fallacious bait, From the bent angle sinks the leaden weight.

And it is recorded in the "Odyssey" that as when the angler, his long rod in hand, Cuts to the very fry the baited snare, Then flings the wriggling captives in the air.

The Romans, Greeks and other races of early days around the Mediterranean practiced the art of angling. Plutarch tells of a prank played by the fair Egyptian, Cleopatra, while out fishing with Antony. "They wandered on their angling, and her divers did hang a suit fish on his hook, which he with fervor drew up."

The ruined walls of Heronopolis and Pompeii abound in frescoes of fishermen. All along the track of history are found traces of this gentle recreation, showing the gradual improvement from the hook of bone and rude equipment of the cave man to the elegant accessories and belongings of the modern angler.

According to an old superstition of the medieval church, whenever a cat crows a boy is being tried.
